Treasury Seeks Income Surtax To Begin at 11%

Rates Would Affect All Taxable Earnings, Graduate Sharply In Middle Bracket

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A surtax of 11 per cent starting on the first dollar of taxable income and graduated sharply through the "middle class" brackets yesterday was disclosed as the heart of the Treasury plan to raise $3,600,000,000 in new revenue.

Details of the proposal to draw the bulk of $1,500,000,000 in tax receipts from incomes between $2,000 and $25,000 leaked out of a Ways and Means Committee pledged to secrecy on the plan.

In lieu of any rise in the normal 4 per cent rate, the 11 per cent minimum surtax would be superimposed on the present rate, to bring an effective tax of 16.5 per cent on the first $2,000 of taxable income. There would be no change in exemptions, and the 10 per cent defense tax would continue.

Beginning at 11 Per Cent

On the first few tax brackets, the Treasury's proposed surtax would range as follows:

Taxable income	Tax
Up to $2,000	11 per cent
$2,000 to $4,000	14 per cent
$4,000 to $6,000	16 per cent
$6,000 to $8,000	19 per cent
$8,000 to $10,000	21 per cent

As against this proposal, the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue yesterday appeared before the Ways and Means Committee with a surtax plan of its own, with more moderate rates on the middle brackets.

The Treasury's proposal would multiply individual income-tax payments many times over in the lower and middle brackets.

Still Bound by Secrecy

A married man earning $2,500 net income without dependents, now paying $11, would pay $72 under the plan. A $3,000 family now taxed $31 would have to pay $152, and a $4,000 family now assessed $70 would pay $312. With a net income of $5,000, the same family would pay $506 instead of $110, and with a net income of $6,000, would pay $700 instead of $150.

(Net income means income remaining after deductions for taxes, interest, business expense, contributions to church and charity, etc., but prior to the subtraction of personal exemptions or credit for dependents. The personal exemptions are $800 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons.)

The Ways and Means Committee majority, still bound by its secrecy agreement, meanwhile heard Republicans rebel against holding the lid longer on provisions of the plan. In a committee compromise move, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was asked to appear before the group publicly tomorrow to testify on its details.

Increase on Corporations

Meanwhile President Roosevelt, at his press conference, said the success of the tax program depends on whether the Nation wishes to do all that it can for the defense of the country and its own future.

Asked by reporters if he thought the country could absorb the new defense tax program, President Roosevelt said that by increasing taxes the Government will have to borrow less and in that way keep down the public debt for future generations.

Besides the stiff gradation of surtaxes, other Treasury tax proposals before the Ways and Means Committee would provide:

A surtax of 6 per cent on corporations with net incomes of more than $25,000, and of 5 per cent on cor-

See TAXES, Page 7, Col. 3.

How the New Tax Would Hit You . . .

Here is a typical case to show how the proposed 11 per cent surtax would boost a taxpayer's payment to the Government:

A married man without dependents earns $3,600. To get his net income he deducts $255 as contributions paid, interest, taxes, losses from fires, theft, etc., bad debts or other allowable deductions. From the $3,345 balance he deducts $334.50, or 10 per cent allowed for earned income, leaving $3,010.50. From that he would deduct $2,000 for personal exemption, leaving $1,010.50, on which he would pay 4 per cent normal tax, or $40.42.

He then would compute the surtax in this manner: From the $3,345 net income he would deduct $2,000 personal exemption, leaving $1,345 on which he would be taxed 11 per cent, or $147.95. To this he would add the normal tax of $40.42, giving a total of $188.37. Ten per cent of this would be added as the defense supertax, the resulting total tax being $207.21.

The same man under the existing tax would pay only the $40.42 plus the 10 per cent defense supertax of $4.04, a total of $44.46.

Army Seeking 152,589 More For Air Corps

Plan for Expanding Forces to 2,800,000 Revealed to Be Ready

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army disclosed yesterday that it was asking for an additional 152,589 men for the Air Corps and supporting services, an increase that will raise the military establishment to a strength about 1,700,000.

Brig. Gen. Harry L. Twaddle, of the War Department general staff, revealed the pending expansion of the Nation's armed forces, as he told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that the department has complete plans for raising the Army to 2,800,000 men should Congress decide on further strengthening of the Nation's military might.

"Could Fight Tomorrow"

By July, he said, the Army will consist of 33 divisions at nearly full fighting strength, consisting of 1,416,000 men and nearly 100,000 officers, contrasted with a force that was largely on paper a year ago.

"We will, in fact," he said, "have an Army—not trained, as yet, as well as it will be trained later, and not equipped, as yet, as well as it will be equipped later, it is true. It is, however, right now, an Army in fact and not in theory and it could fight tomorrow if it had to."

Earlier, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, traced the problems facing the War Department in the expansion program, and declared that the Army "had gotten over the hump."

Induction Delayed

"A tremendous Army is developing," he declared, telling of his recent visits to observe troops in the field.

"The force has the highest morale I have ever seen," he added.

Twaddle said that if Congress should decide on a further increase in the Army, the department would recommend an increase to 2,800,000 men, plus officers. This force would

Inquiry Threatened

Southern soft-coal operators last night conferred for two hours with United Mine Workers representatives, seeking an agreement that would permit reopening of mines on which defense industries rely for fuel supplies.

The conference, outgrowth of White House intervention in the three-week-old shutdown, keeping 400,000 miners idle, was held in a New York hotel room and was recessed until 2 p. m. today. Dr. John R. Steelman, U. S. Conciliation Service head, said there had been "a very friendly discussion and they canvassed the general situation.

As the operators departed from the Capital for New York, Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, declared that unless the mines are reopened by Friday morning his committee now investigating progress of the defense program, would undertake to find out "why we can't have coal in this emergency."

Confer With Gen. Watson.

L. T. Putnam, acting as spokesman for the Southern operators, said that President Roosevelt's Monday night request that production be resumed while negotiations are in progress "is a point we think best not to discuss at this time."

Putman revealed resumption of negotiations after the Southern operators conferred yesterday morning with Presidential Secretary Gen. Edwin Watson. They conferred with Watson for several hours last night, simultaneously with Mr. Roosevelt's public appeal for immediate resumption of mining operations.

The shut-down began April 1 with expiration of the old contract between operators and the U. M. W. Northern operators and the union have agreed on terms of a new contract but Southern operators already had withdrawn from the negotiations when the agreement was reached.

Supplies Dwindling

The Northern agreement calls for $7 day pay scale, compared with the $6 a day under the old contract. Major point of contention between the U. M. W. and the Southern operators involves the 40-cents-a-day wage differential they have enjoyed heretofore.

Southern operators have offered an 11 per cent increase but the U. M. W. has been adamant in insisting that the differential be eliminated completely and that the $7 wage be established in the South as well as the North.

Halifax Praises Red Cross For Work in Stricken Europe

(Pictures On Pages 8 and 12.)

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, last night declared that "history will say when the time comes to record the attempts made by Nazi tyranny to plunge the world into darkness, that one of the brightest pages in these fateful times was written by the American Red Cross in the work which it is doing for stricken Europe."

He addressed more than 2,000 persons at the annual banquet of the Red Cross held at the Mayflower Hotel. His address was broadcast to the Nation by the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, speaking before the group, said, "The magnitude of the task of the Red Cross is measured by the magnitude of the upheaval the world witnesses.

"We view not merely a war but an attempt at world revolution," he continued. "We witness not only a drive for territory, but a determined plan to change the kind of life that can go on within any territory."

The speakers were introduced by Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis at the dinner which came at the conclusion of the second day of the society's four-day annual

Canada May Send Destroyer After Escaped Prisoner

Franz von Werra, German war flier who escaped from a Canadian prison camp to this country, has jumped the $10,000 bonds posted here pending decision on his case and has fled, probably to Peru, it was announced by the Justice Department last night.

Angered by the affront, United States officials immediately issued instructions to immigration officials and Federal district attorneys to prevent any repetition.

Attorney General Jackson declared the flight "constitutes a flagrant abouse of neutral hospitality which had been invoked on his behalf."

Possibility of pursuit of the flier, generally referred to as Baron von Werra, arose last night as Col. Hubert Stethem, Canadian director of internment operations, told the Associated Press that authorities there would be prepared to "send a destroyer" in an attempt to intercept

Roosevelt Says Balkans Won't Decide War

The Only Way to Win Is Keep Britain Going, President Declares

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday belittled the importance of recent German victories in the Balkans, asserted that one battle will not win the war, and declared that the only way to win the conflict is to keep Great Britain going.

In a carefully-worded press conference statement of encouragement to the battling British, the President said he was completely confident that British resistance will be maintained.

There will be no slackening of the flow of supplies to Great Britain, he pledged.

Asked for his view on the war situation, in the light of the German successes in Yugoslavia and Greece, the President cautioned the public against over-optimism one day and over-pessimism the next.

Urges a Long View

Urging a long view, he said that if people read history they should know better than to scale a pinnacle of hope one day because of a sea battle off Italy and descend into the depths another day because of Axis advances in Greece.

He said that war will not be won by such isolated events as one sea fight or one retreat in Greece, or even by the losing of the eastern

300,000 Serbs Reported Still Holding Out

Number Continuing To Fight May Total 400,000, Vichy Hears

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, April 22.—Yugoslav diplomatic sources said tonight that five Yugoslav armies numbering from 300,000 to 400,000 men were successfully holding out in the center of the country against German and Italian attacks.

The territory in their control was said to be roughly a quadrangle bounded on the east by a line parallel with the Belgrade-Nis Railway, on the west by Foca and Pec.

It was explained that only the First and Fourth Yugoslav armies capitulated in the north, while the rest withdrew to a compact square. Eight thousand troops just tried to break through to the south, but were repelled, according to the same account.

Vichy, April 22 (U.P.).—Yugoslav sources said today that 187 Yugoslav planes had escaped the German blitzkrieg and landed in Russia, where their crews were granted entire freedom of action.

Yugoslav Ship Seized

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Rome radio reported late today in a broadcast heard by N. B. C. that Italian marines in Shanghai had taken over the Yugoslav freighter Tomislav, 5,387 tons, at the captain's request after British naval officers tried to force him to sail for Hongkong.

Republicans Gain Congress Seat In Buffalo Vote

Buffalo, April 22 (INS).—The Republican Party gained a seat in Congress today.

Complete returns in the special election in the Forty-second Congressional District gave John C. Butler, Republican, 15,132; Mrs. Hattie Schwert, Democrat and American Labor, 13,650; Edmund P. Radwan, New Deal, 7,260. The election was held to pick a successor to Pius L. Schwert, Democrat, who died suddenly last month in Washington. The Democratic candidate in today's election is his wife.

In Washington, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Republican national chairman, issued a statement saying "the election of a Republican Congressman from this Buffalo district for the first time in 26 years is most significant.

Industrial School Disorder Results In Arrest of 13

Police last night arrested 13 ringleaders to halt a two-hour disorder among 110 delinquents at the Industrial Home School, 2453 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. One youth suffered neck injuries and was removed to Gallinger Hospital.

Faced with varying accounts of the uproar, police sent the ringleaders to the Receiving Home for the night. Robert E. Bondy, director of welfare, announced an investigation would be made today.

The disturbance broke out during a dance at the institution, and resulted in smashing of furniture, windows, stands and beds. According to one version, the boys were angered by the dismissal of an attendant. A second version blamed the outbreak on a jitterbug ban.

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Italian radio said today Iraq had sent a "very strong protest" to Britain over the landing of British troops in Basra, which the radio said, "violated the sovereignty of the state and its neutrality." The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

Bombardment Of Libyan Port Is Simultaneous With R.A.F. Raid

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—Britain credited her sea and air units tonight with a coordinated series of blows against the Axis' vulnerable cross-Mediterranean connections, with these principal results:

Six supply ships and a destroyer hit and vast destruction wrought ashore in a 42-minute bombardment of Tripoli, Libyan capital, by the 15-inch guns of the battle fleet.

Three ammunition and supply ships, totaling 23,000 tons, torpedoed by naval aircraft.

Four troop transport planes shot down at sea.

Fiery damage done to Tripoli and other Libyan ports and airdromes—Fort Capuzzo, Bardia, Derna and Ain el Gazala—by the R. A. F. and fleet arm simultaneously with the naval shelling.

At Least Seven Ships Hit

British battleships and lighter units drew up at 5 a. m. yesterday before Tripoli, principal African supply base of the Axis, and hurled big shells into the harbor and port installations, the admiralty announced.

Dust and smoke rose in blinding clouds, but observers saw that at least seven vessels in port were hit; that a large fire was started near an oil depot; that the railroad station was in flames, and that the Axis naval headquarters, military stores depot, power plant and a quay were struck.

Only "ineffective" opposition was encountered from shore batteries, the admiralty stated.

At the same time, the R. A. F. and aircraft from the fleet were dropping more than 10 tons of bombs into Tripoli.

Troop Planes Downed

The Mediterranean naval commander in chief also reported his aircraft torpedoed 10,000-ton and 6,000-ton supply ships and a 7,000-ton ammunition ship which blew up with such a tremendous explosion that fire roared 3,000 feet into the air.

The only loss the British reported—one naval plane—was suffered in this engagement.

Prime Minister Churchill, addressing the news-hungry Commons, announced the Tripoli bombardment amid cheers and added that naval planes had shot down in flames four of five German troop-carrying planes.

Informed British sources, saying many of the German troops in the Libyan drive had been flown from Sicily to Tripoli, welcomed this British success as possibly the beginning of a forceful blow against the Axis air ferry service.

Churchill said the Germans were shot down as the air fleet was bound for Tripoli, adding:

"I have not yet heard whether they were full or empty. The fleet was not seriously molested and suffered no loss of ships."

Aside from this, he said, "I do not think that any statement on Libya would be appropriate at the present time."

The Middle East communique on Libya said merely: "Our patrols

Courage Not Enough

Allies Face Fiasco, Says Observer

Smyrna, Turkey, April 22.—The great spring campaign in the Balkans has swiftly developed into one of the war's most terrible fiascos for Britain and her Allies. When I left Greece three days ago in a sponge fisherman's tiny boat events were rapidly shaping up into a thunderous heroic tragedy with all the elements of 'Gotterdammerung."

The end at the moment appears inevitable and imminent. With relative astonishment I learned on my arrival at Smyrna that the battle for Greece was not over. Only because of the great bravery of the Allied soldiers, fighting desperately in the last battles, and the firmness of King George of the Hellenes, this dispatch is still a description of moving actualities rather than an epitaph.

Banned by Censor

The situation was desperate when I sailed from the western shore of Attica. The Yugoslav army had already accepted unconditional surrender. Young King Peter had fled by air to Athens Tuesday. He issued one last vain proclamation, stating his was the only true government representing the Serb, Croat and Slovenian people and thanking his army for its brave resistance.

Even that—the last utterance of the boy ruler while he still had any vestiges of free land left to obey him—never reached the outside world.

It was banned by the Greek censorship. Then Peter once more took flight, heading toward Egypt to take up the career of desolate solitude decreed for so many

Greek Island Seized By Nazi Speedboats

German troops landed from speedboats have seized the strategic Greek Island of Samothrake, 50 miles off the entrance of the Dardanelles, a United Press dispatch from Istanbul said last night.

The report was given credence by Prime Minister Churchill, who told a grave House of Commons in London that it was "not unlikely" that German troops had occupied the island.

European rulers by the brutal power of the German army.

At that time the Greek government had already admitted that the major part of its army had been cut off in mountain fastnesses with no hope of strongly supporting the British Allies. The road across Thessaly to Athens appeared open. The German were irresistible because of the overwhelming superiority of their armored equipment and air forces, so they swarmed across the well-defended line of heights to Larissa.

The time was ripe for a coup d'etat or a revolution. The government was ready to evacuate; demobilization had begun and the people who had so heroically fought for six months to defend their soil against invasion were

Athens, April 22.—Battered British and Greek troops fought savagely tonight at the northern gates of Thermopylae Pass, 100 miles of Athens, trying to check the drive of Germany's monster tanks and clouds of Stuka dive-bombers.

Other units deployed in the Lokris Mountain range in this supreme effort to prevent the Nazi tide from sweeping into southern Greece.

Southern Greece and ships leaving Greek ports are being pounded by swarms of Nazi planes attacking ahead of panzer divisions, the government said.

Ships in Gulf Bombed

In Athens itself sirens screamed air-raid alarms seven times in the 24 hours up to midnight.

Vessels in the Gulf of Athens were bombed and machine-gunned without regard for their size, and official reports acknowledged considerable casualties and damage in the costal raids.

Scores of places in southern Greece were reported attacked, but Nazi attention centered on ships leaving port and wave after wave of German planes hammered vessels off the southern coast.

Far to the west, beyond the Pindus Range, weary Greek warriors backing out of Albania were admitted to be in difficulties, too. They were pressed by the Italians on the north and menaced by Nazi armored divisions on their eastern flank.

Greek Communique

The Greek high command communique said:

"The withdrawal of our lines has been completed without any serious hindrance. Enemy air action continues intensely but the enemy suffered considerable losses from the air force and antiaircraft artillery."

The Greek home security ministry announced repeated German air raids on Piraeus, with one bomb dropped in the Athens region. It said a hospital ship was bombed in the Gulf of Corinth, but escaped damage.

Princeton, N. J., April 22.—The use of the American Navy to convoy vessels carrying war materials to Britain is opposed at this time by a majority of voters interviewed throughout the country in a nationwide public opinion survey.

If, however, it appears certain that Britain will be defeated unless our Navy is used for convoy purposes, 71 per cent of voters say they would then favor the convoy idea. But as matters now stand, the American public is apparently not convinced of the necessity for convoying at this time.

Such is the evidence from the survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion, which was conducted in every State of the Union among people in all walks of life. The study was begun several days after the outbreak of the Balkan war.

Nazis Trying To Cut Athens Approaches

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Wednesday), April 23.—German spearheads are within sight of Thermopylae Pass, German military commentators said early today, with the British in "full retreat" before them.

The German phrase was that the fight had developed into a "verfolgung"—a following through after a break in resistance.

"And when we say we are following we mean the enemy is running," said a military spokesman.

With Adolf Hitler's panzars rolled up before the fabled pass, the Nazi high command hoped to send them swiftly over the 100 miles to Athens and its port of Piraeus.

The Germans, at the southern edge of the plain of Thessaly, seemed to be in position to cut off the approaches to Athens soon, and if that is accomplished any British who might still be in the northern part of the country would be cut off from the best harbors.

The Germans' southward thrust was said to have covered 105 kilometers (about 65 miles) in three days, which, Germans said, disposes of stories that they have suffered heavy losses.

"An enemy moving that fast does not have time to pause to set up a gun or conduct a rearguard action worthy of the name," a spokesman said. "When the full story is told the world will be astounded at the small German losses."

It is one thing to win a military victory, such as was won when Larisa was taken and the passes south of Mount Olympus were forced, but another matter to exploit such a victory to the best advantage, the military commentator continued.

Rifles and Mules

"Now we are in the phase of following through, in the course of which we reached Lamia, which is getting close to the approaches of Athens," he said. "In this following action the German soldier dropped every burden which could be spared so as to make speed.

"There even were instances of infantrymen with just rifles riding mules to get through rough country speedily."

Occupation by German troops of the old citadel of Lamia, near Thermopylae, had been announced by the high command. Now—should the Germans repeat the strategy they used in Yugoslavia—they will throw a noose of Panzers about Greece's neck, from the Gulf of Lamia and the Gulf of Corinth.

The air force is credited with playing a most important role in the following-through action. Harbors out front and transports moving in the Aegean, it is said, are being subjected to ceaseless bombardment.

"It's nearing the end with the question remaining how many British and how much equipment we catch," was one German comment.

D. N. B., official news agency, said Nazi reconnaissance planes found eastern Greece harbors already packed with ships of all sizes—including motor boats, cutters and smaller craft—busy shipping British troops out of the country.

(The German radio, heard by C. B. S. in New York, estimated tonight that British loss of life in the Grecian campaign from the sinking of overcrowded transports alone was 30,000.

(The broadcast said "thousands of bodies of British soldiers are daily being washed ashore on the coast of the Aegean, between Volos and the foot of Mount Olympus.")

Some 40,000 tons of shipping, mostly troop transports, were declared to have been sunk by these dive-bombers in the last 48 hours.

Greeks Take Stand At Thermopylae

regardless of heavy losses in an attempt to wipe out the R. A. F.

For example, they said there were 80 German planes in just one unit attacking an area near the city this morning.

Adjustment of British lines at the front was made "without serious interference from the enemy, who has been roughly handled wherever met," a British army communique said.

In ancient days Thermopylae was only a few yards in width, but today the pass affords a battleground from 1 to 3 miles wide. Railway and road communications extending from Lamia, 20 miles to the north (which the Germans say they have occupied) lead to Athens and its port, Piraeus.

The heavily outnumbered R. A. F. shot down 22 German planes from the Greek sky Sunday and lost only seven planes, it was announced.

In the face of almost continuous attacks by hundreds of Nazi fighters and bombers, British ground crews have joined their flying comrades in fighting the onslaught. One of the 22 German planes shot down April 20 in the Athens area was a victim of rifle fire from three Britons atop an airdrome.

Another example of the resistance was the story of one pilot who returned to patrol duty after he had been wounded when his fighter plane was shot down.

Another pilot who attacked 32 German dive-bombers and fighters during a raid on Allied shipping told this story:

"I carried out eight attacks on the Junkers 885. One caught fire and started down, so I left him and attacked another. Big chunks came from his wings and fuselage and smoke poured from his engines. He wetn down vertically. I thin was attacked by a Messerschmitt 109, but outmaneuvered him, had a crack at some more German planes and came home."

Greeks May Move to Crete

New York, April 22 (U.P.).—The Greek government is prepared to remove the capital from Athens to the British-held Island of Crete "if and when the German forces break through the Allies' third line of defense" north of the city, a Budapest radio report heard by N. B. C. said tonight.

Greeks Unable To Flee Trap, Italians Say

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 22.—Italian military circles said today they regarded the reported capture of Ioannina, Greece, by the Germans as sealing the doom of the Greek army which has been holding the Epirus front to the north.

(German forces smashing westward from Metsovon Pass apparently entered Ioannina wel ahead of the Italians driving toward it from the northwest.)

Military circles here believed it now was impossible for the Greeks to escape either by smashing through the German ring to the east or squeezing past the Italians in a dash toward the coast.

Most of the Greek troops facing the Italians were said to be encircled. Several hundred Fascist planes were reported bombing the retreating columns.

A Stefani, Italian news agency, dispatch said the Greeks had lost the best part of 14 divisions, sacrificed in a battle at Perati Bridge at the Albanian-Greek frontier to give the British a chance to retreat before the Italians broke through the western Pindus front.

The Greek general staff, the dispatch added, gave up its own plans for a strategic retreat in order to effect the British retirement to the east.

Italian artillery now is shelling the Greek line along the Kalabaka line, Stefani continued, and Fascist infantry is advancing in all sectors.

Thermopylae, Greece, 480 B. C.—King Leonidas and his 300 Spartans, fighting with swords, hands and teeth, were wiped out by the Persian hordes of Xerxes at this strategic pass today.

The way has now been cleared for the Persian conqueror to advance to Athens.

For two days Leonidas held the narrow pass. Xerxes, heading the greatest army the world has ever seen, an army that required seven nights to cross the Hellespont, could not believe that the handful of men under Leonidas would dispute his way. He sent a message demanding that the Greeks deliver up their arms.

"Come and take them," replied Leonidas defiantly.

The Persians, advancing to the attack under the lash of their officers, were held back by the long spears and unbroken ranks of the Greeks. Xerxes began to despair of forcing the pass when a traitorous Greek told him of a roundabout path over the moutains.

When Leonidas found that the Persians were approaching from the rear and that the end was at hand, he didsmissed his men except the 300 Spartans, bound like himself to remain at their post and conquer or die in the narrow strip between Mount Oeta and the sea.

Leonidas was one of the first to fall. Around the body of their leader, the gallant Spartans fought desperately until they were slain to a man.

Guns Roar Where Spears Once Flew

Thermopylae! How strange that this thrilling word, so long embalmed in the pages of Herodotus, should now come bounding over the cables to denote a new war "front." For 2,421 years, it has been a word to stir the soul—a synonym for heroism in the face of impossible odds.

Now that Thermopylae again is in the news, one is reminded by the spectacle of Panzers and Stukas how much the art of war has changed since the days of Leonidas and his spear-throwers.

To the modern Greeks, however, the general picture in 1941 may not seem much different than it did to Themistocles in 480 B. C. In that momentous epoch in the world's history, Xerxes, like his father Darius before him, was seeking to conquer Greece and thus extend an Asiatic despotism to Europe. Today in Greek eyes, Hitler stands where Xerxes once stood, despotism, superior numbers and all.

Yet Xerxes Lost Finally

In the days of Leonidas the pass at Thermopylae was a narrow track (probably about 14 yards wide) under a cliff. Today, thanks to the deposits of the Spercheius River, it has become widened until it has a breadth of between 1½ to 3 miles. However, the hot springs from which the pass derived its name still exist close to the foot of the hill.

Hitler's panzer legions will, of course, take the pass if there is any fighting there. It is doubtful, however, if the Nazi propaganda mill will do any gloating over its capture. Thermopylae leads to thoughts of Xerxes, and Xerxes was a conqueror who ultimately went down to defeat.

When Xerxes reached Athens, he found that the Athenians, following the advice of the great statesman, Themistocles, had abandoned the city. The Greek ships, after suffering a defeat, were drawn up in the narrow strait between the island of Salamis and the southern coast of Attica.

Xerxes set fire to the city, and while the flames reddened the sky took his seat on a marble throne upon a height overlooking the sea to watch the battle. He expected that his splendid fleet would win an easy victory, but again and again he started up from his throne in rage, as one after another of the Persian vessels was sunk or crippled by the impetuous onslaught of the Greeks.

Conqueror Fled

Though his ships outnumbered the Greek vessels three to one, they were so heavy and so crowded in the narrow strait that they moved with difficulty and fell an easy prey to the lighter Greek ships, which followed the new tactics of rowing out from a circular formation and ramming their prows into the clumsy enemy vessels. Two hundred of the Persian ships were sunk, others were captured, and the rest turned and dfled.

Leaving part of his force in command of one of the generals, the terror-stricken Xerxes hastened back to Persia. A few months later the Persian army was scattered at Plataea. No Persian army ever again set foot in Greece. Europe was saved from Persian conquest and domination.

Whether Persia—Iran and the other lands that once made up Xerxes' kingdom—will be saved from German conquest and domination is a chapter in history yet to be written. Hitler, it is generally believed, will use Greece as a jumping off place in his drive toward the great British oil fields in Iraq. Could it be that a decisive, maybe a disastrous, battle awaits him in Xerxes' ancient domain? E. T. F.

Finland Starving, Observer Finds

New York, April 22 (AP).—The food situation in Finland is so desperate that "food is news," Charles Grey, American Red Cross representative, said today when he returned aboard the Yankee Clipper after a fact-finding expedition through Finland.

He said working people in Finland were getting only 70 per cent of the calories they needed, and that they were obliged to keep what was left of their cattle by feeding them thin strips of cellulose—"wood, in other words, treated with chemicals to supply some of the needed calories."

He's a Colonel Now

London (Wednesday, April 23 1/5).—Sir Neville Henderson, Britain's last ambassador to Berlin, has been appointed a colonel in the Home Guard, it was announced today.

awaiting capitulation.

On Friday the mysterious death of Premier Alexander Korizis became known and King George, who had told one of his ministers that he would shoot any one who talked of surrender, seized all power himself. It was persistently rumored Field Marshal Alexander Papagos was already on the way to the front to negotiate an honorable armistice. Two Greek destroyers waited with steam up to take the government to an island.

Most of the British imperial forces were standing firmly upon their Olympian line, isolated from further effective aid. They stood with resolution, beating back endless waves of German attacks but slowly and inevitably the Wehrmacht's armored columns were pouring through widening breaches, apparently cutting off all hope of retreat.

Fantastic 37-ton Nazi tanks rumbled across terrain that had been considered impossible for their maneuvering and beat down before them defenders on the flat plain. Numerically overpowering, the Luftwaffe dive-bombed and machine-gunned the defending troops, made a shambles of the roads along which their supplies were coming, blew up the port facilities of Greece and gradually wore down the daring R. A. F.

With incredible bravery, the British fliers had been going day and night without sleep, wreaking havoc on advancing columns, which continued to advance. One pilot, who had flown 120 hours without rest, told me: "We couldn't miss them; there were so many of them. We strafed them and strafed them until we ran out of ammunition and then returned and strafed them again.

"But there are too many of them. We do not have the aircraft and they are destroying our airfields.

"The troops at the front are running out of ammunition and we can't stop the Hun by dive-bombing the roads. Our fellows on the ground haven't anything left with which to shoot.

"They are lacking explosives for blowing up bridges. Three of our aircraft set off loaded with bombs from which the detonators had been removed in order to drop them for our sappers so they would have demolition explosives. But the planes were shot down before they could do their work."

The R. A. F., limited by British military needs in Africa and England, was gradually being ground down by superior numbers.

The little British army, which probably is far smaller than the world believes—the figure cannot be revealed—was inflicting tremendous damage on the Germans. But each man or machine lost could not be replaced while the Nazis kept on coming.

The invaders' lengthened supply lines, although viciously hammered, were unbroken. A seemingly inexhaustible flow of German materiel continued pouring through Bitolj (Monastir) Gap.

No words could be too strong in praise of the Greek people and the courage of their soldiers and of their British allies. This alone has staved off disaster so far but it is inevitable.

At the moment it is obvious the British are beating a slow retreat to southern ports, fighting a rearguard action. They may be able to re-embark or cut across the Corinthian Isthmus to the Peleponesus for one more stand. That they fought past the Germans in Thessaly and were able to abandon in order their second defense line hinged upon Mount Olympus, is an achievement that had been thought impossible in Athens three days ago.

On Wednesday the situation already appeared desperate. The front was "unsatisfactory," that the Germans had broken through the line cutting off the major part of the Greek army, that the population must remain calm and continue commerce as usual, that Greece should prove her firmness in adversity.

A. C. Sedgwick, Athens correspondent of the New York Times, and his wife, a Greek citizen, left Thursday aboard a ship bound for Palestine that carried the Polish Legation staff and hundreds of refugees. Mr. Sedgwick planned to go to the new seat of the Greek government, if it managed to get away.

Thursday and Friday were sad days in Athens. For the first time the capital took on the appearance of a military city. Squadrons of armed Greek soldiers patrolled the streets. British troops rushed out when it was reported German parachutists were landing.

Rumors that could have been started by Fifth Columnists were rampant.

The Athens garrison was already being demobilized and other forces were leaving the army.

British reinforcements kept arriving in small quantities. A few Polish troops had come Wednesday.

Various Greek friends faced the future with courage. One prominent Athenian said:

"How can Britain and America expect to win the war this way? On October 28 Roosevelt pledged America's complete aid to Greece, but not a single cartridge has yet arrived from the United States. Britain sends a tiny army to help our defense. Brave as her soldiers may be, they cannot stand forever.

"If Britain gives us only such support, how can she expect us to resist against two great powers? How can America count on us to hold out long enough to receive her aid if after six months we have not received it?

"We have done our part in this war. I may say we have done it doubly. What more can we do?"

This was the tragic situation when we left Athens on the Orthodox Church Good Friday. Our small procession of cars, including one from the Swiss Legation carrying Mr. Bessart, wound across Attica to the hidden anchorage. Four British bombers flew overhead in the direction of the Dodecanese Islands.

Tokyo Greets Matsuoka Like a Victor

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, April 22.—Welcomed home like a victor entitled to the thanks of the nation, Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka arrived by air this afternoon and was given a rousing reception by the government, the army, the people and the press.

There was a formal military reception and ceremony at the military airfield where he landed. The government gave a banquet in his honor immediately after he had made his first report to the premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye. The streets along which he rode into the capital were lined by vast crowds shouting "Banzai!" And the press was unanimous in praising his achievements.

Japan's foreign policy, Matsuoka insisted in all of his statements, is peaceful. Proof of this, he added, may be adduced from the fact that within six months Japan has concluded three great international treaties—the tripartite pact, the peace treaty with Nanking and the Russo-Japanese pact—and has mediated the dispute between Thailand and French Indo-China, all of which, he said, are symbols of Japan's desire to live in peace with its neighbors.

At the same time, indicating that he does not intend to rest on his laurels, Matsuoka cited Josef Stalin's quick decision on the neutrality pact and then declared:

"We, too, must be quick in action in order to cope with the momentous needs of the times when the international situation is full of swift and surprising changes. Vacillation and hesitation are fatal."

Denies It Weakens Axis Pact

Replying to questions about how the neutrality pact will affect Japan-American relations, he said: "This is a delicate situation. As I understand it, America considers herself the champion of world peace. If that is so, and if America looks at deeds, not words, she should have no objections to Japan's course. And if she understands Japan's real intentions she will applaud what Japan has done."

Asked point-blank whether he entertained any plan of negotiation with the United States, he replied: "I cannot tell beforehand."

At the same time in a radio broadcast, he said:

"Japan earnestly wishes to contribute to the welfare of mankind and to the preservation of world peace. But if there are people or countries who purposely close their eyes to the real intentions of Japan it is impossble to talk with them."

Counterng the view that the neutrality pact weakens the tripartite agreement he insisted that on the contrary the pact reinforces the tripartite pact as is proved by the fact that Germany and Italy "sincerely welcome it."

Nazis 'Scattered, Having Bad Time of It,' Says Desert Troops

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

With the British Army in North Africa, April 22.—The Axis drive toward the Suez Canal, has been staved off, for the time being at least.

The German and Italian troops which penetrated to Egypt itself in recent days has now been badly broken up and scattered by unceasing air attacks supplemented by a harassing fire from the British fleet whenever they are within reach and by nerve-wracking forays by British columns operating both from within the area of besieged Tobruk and from behind Salum.

As one high British officer put it today:

"The enemy offensive force has now been transformed into scattered groups acting wholly on the defensive and having a bad time of that. We are giving them little rest either on the ground or in the air, and we intend to keep them on the jump."

The view of the situation one obtains here in the desert in contact with the men who are doing the actual fighting is much brighter than one gets in Cairo. The morale is high, and while responsible officers realize that as the Greek campaign wanes the Axis powers may be able to increase the pressure on this front, by the same token, they believe the British also will be able to counter them more effectively.

Despite the diversion of both men and material to Greece, the British force is being daily strengthened.

Indications at the front are that the Germans are in far less force in North Africa than was at first supposed. There are reports that the Italians resent the Germans and hate attacking with them.

The German armored units presumably are divided between the Tobruk and the Bardia areas.

Aside from the dramatic stand being made by British at Tobruk and which appears able to hold out indefinitely and even is inflicting heavy punishment on the enemy by daring sallies outside of the ring of fortifications, the main burden of the battle of the desert is now being borne by the Royal Air Force.

The appearance of German planes over this front at first puzzled some of the R. A. F. pilots who had experience only in fighting the Italians for who mgreat contempt is held. But the Germans with far more aggressive tactics were a different proposition. However, a number of British pilots arrived from England where they had been in engagements with the Germans for months and knew all their tricks.

They taught their comrades so that now the R. A. F. desert force is attacking the Germans confidently. The pilots are even saying:

"The Jerries are only wops after all—they simply have not found it out yet. It is up to us to teach them."

The greatest complaint of the R. A. F. pilots is that the Germans do not take things as easily as the Italians. According to their laughing account, the Italians like to sleep late and all the R. A. F. needed to do to get a good bag of Italian planes on the ground was to strike early in the morning, especially on a Sunday. And however often they did it, they say, the Italians still would not get up.

Vichy Guards Against Revolt, Bern Hears

Copyright by New York Times

Bern (Wednesday), April 23.—The possibility of another return to authority in conquered but unoccupied France was brought home to the populace of Vichy when it awoke this morning to find the strategic gateways of the town once more guarded by armed mobile guards and machine guns once again in the streets.

This time the "collaboration crisis" seems to have been brought on by the overzealous partisans of the Rassemblement National Populaire, Marcel Deat's party, civil members of which have been murdered during the last few days in occupied France.

From information reaching here from across the border it appears the Vichy authorities fear an armed coup d'etat with the object of overthrowing Marshal Petain's government and seriously curtailing his absolute powers.

The secondary object would also appear to be an attempt to put Pierre Laval back in power. How far Laval favored this type of politics is not yet clear. Well-informed French quarters feel, however, that he is not yet directly implicated in the affair.

Darlan Going to Paris

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, April 22.—Admiral Francois Darlan will probably leave Vichy for Paris tomorrow to renew conversations with the occupying authority regarding "collaboration" which means in plain language what the German government expects of the French government.

Before seeing Otto Abetz, representative of the Reich in France, the admiral may meet Pierre Laval either in Paris itself or in some town closer to Vichy.

In Paris Admiral Darlan is likely to discover tha this time the German demands are very concerte; and also the Rassaemblement National Populaire is exceedingly active in propagating its doctrine, which is at once anti-British and wholeheartedy "collaborationist" and which champions Pierre Laval out and out.

There are sufficient signs to show that in Paris it will be intimated to Admiral Darlan that history has repeated itself and that again success is attending German arms. All the newspapers in Paris are harping on this theme.

Spain Refuses Nazis Passage to Gibraltar

By the United Press

Vichy, April 22.—Confronted with Spain's reported refusal to collaborate in an attack upon Gibraltar, Adolf Hitler was believed tonight to be offering a high price for French "friendship" before the start of a big Axis offensive in the Mediterranean.

Diplomatic sources said that Generalissimo Franco, summoning a special cabinet meeting after receiving a personal message from Hitler, had refused to permit the passage of German troops across Spain against Britain's fortress at the western Mediterranean entrance.

Franco was said to have maintained, in answer to Hitler's message carried to Madrid by Deputy Nazi Party Leader Rudolf Hess, that Spain's acute food crisis prevents her from giving such aid to Germany.

Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, a staunch German-ophile and brother-in-law of Franco, was said to have been agreeable to Hitler's proposals while the army stood behind Franco, arguing that as soon as German troops set foot in Spain the British fleet would be blasting Spain's ports.

Loss of Island Off Dardanelles 'Not Unlikely,' Churchill Says

Samothrake Only 50 Miles From Straits; Commons Alarmed

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—Winston Churchill solemnly faced Commons today for the first time since the Easter recess and the corresponding Allied reverses in the Balkans and acknowledged it was "not unlikely" that Germany now holds Greece's Samothrake Island, barely 50 miles off the mouth of Turkey's Dardanelles.

Anxious members of the House were, however, unable to draw from Churchill a detailed statement of the British position on the Greek Peninsula. He insisted he must remain silent for the time being because "operations of many kinds are going on and we have others to think of besides ourselves."

These operations, he said, have "been of the most complicated character and have been carried out with extraordinary skill, but even His Majesty's government have not received from day to day full information from the commanders engaged."

Likewise he refused a detailed statement about the Axis push into Egypt.

The House stirred uneasily at this, one member crying "Greece is much more important" and others drowning this member out with shouts of "nonsense!"

Churchill's brief remark about Samothrake, from which the legendary Greek god Poseidon is supposed to have surveyed the Plain of Troy, came in questioning from Leslie Hore-Belish, a one-time secretary of war.

He gave no hint as to how the Germans had reached the island, but it lies only about 30 miles from the Greek port of Alexandroupolis, which the Nazis have occupied, and this could have been occupied easily by fast, shallow-draft boats.

Some observers regarded the Samothrake report as the most alarming of the day.

Others began to worry about Spain and Gibraltar.

Some unusually competent judges of the war picture believed a Nazi attempt to cork up the western Mediterranean was imminent. They lacked hard facts to support this theory, but they linked a report of a trip to Spain's Generalissimo Franco by Hitler's Deputy Rudolf Hess with recent Spanish cabinet meetings.

One rumor had it that Germany wants to move six divisions through Spain for a land assault on the rock.

The critical nature of the Spanish position also was reflected in Commons, by Churchill's refusal to permit debate on a £2,000,000 ($8,000,000) British loan to Spain.

Questioners told the prime minister that the money would "go straight into German hands" and that there was "deep anxiety and a great deal of public unrest" about it, but Churchill replied merely that the loan was a result of careful study.

Nazi Attack Reported Beaten Off at Nearby Lemnos by British

By the United Press

Istanbul, April 22.—German troops landed from speedboats have seized the strategic Greek island of Samothrake near the entrance to the Dardanelles and have attacked the British-held Island of Lemnos, 25 miles southward, it was reported reliably today.

The German forces, already within 40 miles of the Dardanelles at the Greek-Turkish frontier in Thrace, occupied Samothrake as fears spread in high Turkish quarters that Adolf Hitler is preparing to launch a blitzkrieg against Turkey, perhaps within 8 or 10 weeks.

The British navy, which some time ago landed troops on Lemnos, was to be preparing an attack to drive the Germans from Samothrake.

The Nazi landing parties were presumed to have come across the upper Aegean from Salonika or the Thracian coast of Greece, perhaps from Kavalla, which is 60 miles northwest of Samothrake.

Both Samothrake and Lemnos are just outside Turkish territorial waters and the landing of strong German forces on the two Aegean islands would serve to draw a 175-mile arc of Nazi encirclement around the strategic Dardanelles, the Bosphorus and European Turkey.

The German thrusts by sea near the Dardanelles were believed in high Turkish quarters to be part of Nazi pressure aimed at preparing the way for demands which German Ambassador Baron Franz von Papen is expected to serve on the Turks soon.

These demands, it was believed, will become known when von Papen returns from a plane journey to Germany where he already is said to have conferred with Hitler. Presumably the demands would constitute a final German effort to obtain Hitler's aims as regards Turkey without fighting if possible.

Samothrake is a mountainous island useful as an air base while Lemnos has excellent landing fields except in winter months when the island is marshy.

The evacuation of Istanbul's civilian population in anticipation of a German attack, possibly as a forerunner of a Nazi offensive against the rich Russian oil and wheat fields just northward, already is under way with thousands of men, women and children receiving government tickets for removal to the Anatolian interior.

No More Blackouts

New York, April 22 (AP).—Blackouts in Hungary were discontinued tonight on order of the minister of interior, the Budapest radio announced. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

Rumors of British Crisis Circulated

Algeciras, Spain, April 22 (U.P.).—Rumors circulated in Gibraltar today that Britain is approaching a government crisis in which David Lloyd George, venerable World War premier, may replace Prime Minister Churchill.

(There has been no indication from any other quarters tending to provide confirmation for the Gibraltar rumors.)

War Not Lost Yet, Roosevelt Says

Mediterranean.

It will only be won, Mr. Roosevelt continued, by keeping the existing defender of democracy going. That defender, he said flatly, is England—the British Empire.

He replied to a question that he was confident that British resistance would be kept going and that there would be no diminution of war supplies shipped to aid her.

The President sidestepped, however, the question of the moment in Washington: Whether the United States need start convoying British supply ships. The President backed away from that question by saying he did not live at Delphi, the home of the famous Greek oracle.

Before his statement of encouragement to Britain, the President had declined comment on reports published in London that American ardor for the British cause is cooling, due to recent British reverses on the field of battle.

Prior to the President's statement to his press conference, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, called with Australian Prime Minister Richard G. Casey, at the State Department for a discussion of Pacific matters with Secretary of State Hull.

Halifax told reporters that, in his view, there were three decisive fronts in the war: the battle on the Atlantic, the bombings of British cities and the German-Italian threat to the Suez Canal.

The President declined to say whether any American ships are operating to the newly opened Red Sea area or to estimate losses of American supplies for Britain at the hands of German submarines and bombing planes.

Mr. Roosevelt answered in the negative a question whether he had any information that Germans were infiltrating into Dakar, French West Africa.

Hagerstown Plant Delivers 500th Plane

By C. B. Allen

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Hagerstown, Md., April 22.—Out of a motley assortment of plants scattered all over this little city and hastily transformed to aircraft production, the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corporation today produced and turned over to the Army Air Corps the 500th primary training plane it has built for the national defense program since April 15, 1940.

Merrill C. Meigs, director of aircraft production for the Government's Office of Production Management, paid high tribute to the company's achievement and said that it was 36 airplanes ahead of its promised delivery schedules to the Army.

"I believe that is a record," he said. "But it is more than a record; it is an inspiration, a challenge. It is a challenge in more ways than one. The PT-19 is made largely of nonstrategic materials—and in these days, when the shortage of strategic materials handicaps the aircraft industry, this is more than a triumph of design and engineering. It is a road map for the industry."

Expect to Double Output

Fairchild officials said that their present low-wing monoplane trainer, equipped with the 17-horsepower, cylinder-inline, air-cooled engine built by their Ranger engine division on Long Island, contains approximately 200 pounds each of steel tubing and cast aluminum alloys—the critical strategic materials referred to by Meigs. They added that these amounts would be cut in half by the increased use of their so-called duramold construction of plywood and resinous glue with the completion this summer of a new 114,000 square foot factory now being erected at the edge of the Hagerstown Airport. By the end of August, they expect to double their present output of three trainers a day.

Newspapermen, a delegation from the Chilean air corps, army officers and other government officials who were taken on a tour of the three principal plants now used in the production of PT-19's, found every foot of floor space jammed with busy men and machines. One of the buildings was built originally as a button factory; another, in which the Fairchild Co. is now just beginning to turn out wings for bombers the Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, is building for Britain, formerly was the exhibition building at the Hagerstown Fair Grounds.

World Crisis Tempers Traditional Levity As Harvard Club of Washington Dines

AMONG THE NOTABLES ATTENDING last night's annual banquet of the Harvard Club of Washington were (left to right) Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator; Robert Lincoln O'Brien, president of the club; Huston Thompson, president of the Princeton Club of Washington, and William Yandell Elliott, head of Harvard's department of government, now an official of OPM

Grave thoughts of the world crisis and America's part in it tempered the traditional merriment and levity of the Harvard Club of Washington annual banquet last night.

Though they sang "Fair Harvard" and swapped stories and reminisced with the usual vigor, the approximately 200 tuxedoed alumni and guests at the Carlton Hotel wore serious expressions during the speeches on the program.

They heard Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator; Dr. William Yandell Elliott, head of Harvard's Department of Government, who is at present an OPM official, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts. Each placed solemn emphasis on the concern such Americans as Harvard men should hold for this country's position in the world today and the importance of preserving its freedom.

Elliott deplored the kind of counsel given by such persons as Charles and Anne Lindbergh as "very dangerous."

"However well intentioned," he said, "they can only have a weakening effect on the country if they're listened to." Anne Lindbergh's philosophy that totalitarianism is a "wave of the future," he said, is "symptomatic of a discouragement with our own institutions" and could result in the "mesmerism and paralysis of will" which Hitler seeks to effect as his first step in conquering a country.

Elliott predicted that "a miraculous change in morale" was due in this country to defeat such mesmerism. A beginning for the "galvanization," he declared, could be made by convoying food ships to Ireland or by an executive order declaring Ireland outside of the war zone.

Declaring "we exist now in a twilight zone—neither in the war nor out of it"—Elliott predicted that America will be confronted soon with the necessity of making a decision. "It is time that America knew itself," he said.

In this war, he asserted, "there are real sides, and America has got to choose the side and act on the choice."

McNutt spoke of America's determination to fight against the rise of totalitarianism here, declaring:

"We will not trade our birthright for a mess of pottage—Nazi, Fascist or Communist pottage."

There is no choice, he declared, of "regimentation and sham security or freedom and democracy."

Lodge gave an off-the-record talk on the position of the United States in world affairs.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, president of the Harvard Club, was toastmaster at the banquet, whose solemnity was brightened by the singing of George H. O'Connor.

O'Connor rendered such selections a "Saloon" ("the first word I heard my Daddy speak") and "Houligan's Fancy Dress Ball."

Committee May Approve Ship Bill Today

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

The House Merchant Marine Committee is expected to approve today legislation giving the President sweeping powers to take over for the use of this country or Britain all foreign shipping lying idle in American waters.

Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday introduced the legislation, combining various features of bills already offered by himself and Representative Oliver (Republican), of Maine.

The new "omnibus bill" would authorize the President to purchase, requisition or take title to foreign vessels idle in American waters and essential to American defense "for such use or disposition as he shall direct."

Committee members, after an all-day secret session, said last night there is no doubt the language of the bill would allow the United States to turn over requisitioned Axis ships direct to Britain.

Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, was reported to have told the committee that such a step could not be regarded as an act of war because this Government had the right to take over any property within its territory for whatever use it saw fit.

From Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, the committee was said to have heard that the present shipping crisis demands that all idle foreign vessels be turned into a "general pool," available for operation by Britain or the United States.

The Oliver bill would have restricted use of the foreign ships to coastal or inter-coastal trade or transportation to the United States and its possessions of essential defense materials.

The new Bland bill incorporates provisions of the Oliver measure which would permit the Maritime Commission to charter or purchase American-owned ships whenever it finds a shortage of vessels for transportation of foreign commerce or essential defense materails to the United States. The commission would be authorized, during the emergency, to waive various laws relating to officers, crews or crew accommodations on the ships taken over under this legislation.

Witnesses before the committee yesterday included Commander Richard S. Field, director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation; Ney Evans, of the legal division of the Martime Commission, and Commander F. F. Reynolds, of the Navy Department.

The committee resumes hearings at 10 a. m. today.

again have been active."

(The Germans said that their African corps had resumed its advance eastward from Salum, Egypt; that an attempted British landing at Bardia was repulsed with heavy losses; and that the beleaguered British at Tobruk failed in a tank thrust. The Germans said their dive-bombers had sunk three merchant ships in Tobruk harbor and had hit a transport and sunk another vessel in a British convoy.)

In Ethiopia, the British imperial forces reported the Italians had turned and were giving battle with artillery near Dessie, 175 miles northeast of Addis Ababa. The British listed nearly 600 additional Italian troops captured in the south.

While preparations for a British assault on Dessie were under way, the belief was expressed that Ethiopian mop-up operations may take several weeks. Already the rains have begun to fall in the south and, with the approach of May, they will increase.

consist of 45 infantry divisions, 2 cavalry divisions and 6 armored divisions, he told reporters.

Should the present authorized strength be maintained and the National Guard be sent home at the end of its year of service, the War Department will add six more Regular Army triangular infantry and two armored divisions, to continue the active Army strength at 1,418,000 men.

The General Staff officer disclosed that the Army would delay inducting some 70,000 men scheduled to be in uniform by June 30 until July, putting off attainment of the 1,418,000 goal a month.

Officials said that the 152,589 men desired for the air service were requested in budget estimates recently submitted to Congress, the details of which were not then disclosed. Additional officers and flying cadets required during the coming year will swell the total strength to about 1,700,000.

Marshall repeatedly compared conditions today with those of a year ago, and as if in reply to criticism of the Army for not being farther along, recited its difficulties in obtaining support for its program prior to last spring.

As recently as March, 1940, he said, many of the War Department's requests for funds were cut. Army officials did not talk of Selective Service until it was taken up on Capitol Hill last summer, he added, for fear their advocacy would "doom it."

"The public just didn't appreciate the danger of the situation until Germany began to move," he said. "We had to be very circumspect—almost naive—and thus unable to take steps common sense dictated. . . . Everything we said was viewed as alarmist."

Britain?"

Navy should be used to convoy	41%
Navy should not be used to convoy	50
Undecided	9

If the undecided voters are eliminated from the tabulation, the division of sentiment among the remaining group with opinions would be 45 per cent for convoys, 55 per cent opposed.

"If it appears certain that Britain will be defeated unless we use part of our Navy to protect ships going to Britain, would you favor or oppose such convoys?"

The results were:

Favor convoys if British defeat seems certain without them	71%
Oppose convoys even if British defeat seems certain	21
Undecided	8

Those voters in the survey who oppose sending convoys, either now or at a later date, put forth the single argument:

A good half of those who, on the other hand, favor convoying, present two main arguments—first, "we cannot let Germany win," and second, "we cannot afford to quit now." Another important faction adds:

"We should do anything we can to keep the fighting over there, and away from us."

Another idea frequently running through the comments of persons in favor of convoys is:

"Theres no use making war materials for Britain unless the materials get there."

	Favor Convoys	Opposed	Undecided
New England, Mid-Atlantic	41%	49%	10%
East Central	35	56	9
West Central	33	58	9
South	59	30	11
Far West	42	52	6

The vote among the rank and file of the two major political parties shows a distinct difference of opinion on the convoy question. Out of every 100 Roosevelt voters interviewed, 45 were found in favor of convoys, 45 opposed, and 10 undecided.

Among every 100 Republicans interviewed, on the other hand, the ratio of opposition was much higher—36 in favor, 57 opposed and seven undecided.

Hansen to Address G. W. Conference

Roosevelt Asks $2,770,000 to Call Up Coast Guard

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday for $2,770,000 to pay for mobilization of the Coast Guard Reserve to man approximately 270 privately owned boats to be taken under the Coast Guard Auxiliary and Reserve Act.

The money would be used to cover pay and allowances of an estimated 1,620 enlisted men to be called to active duty from the reserve. He asked for additional $567,000 for the operation and maintenance of the private boats and $291,000 for ammunition for training in antiaircraft fire.

Three Charlotte (N. C.) construction firms were awarded a contract yesterday to construct a new $14,375,000 marine base near Jacksonville, in Onslow County, N. C.

The Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks informed Senator Bailey and Representative Barden of North Carolina that a negotiated contract had been given Blythe Brothers Co., Goode Construction Co., and Harrison & Wright Co.

The contract, awarded on a cost plus fixed fee basis, approximated $13,000,000. Thousands of acres are now being acquired for the base and will be paid for out of the balance of the appropriation voted by Congress.

The base will accommodate a full combat Marine regiment of 14,500 men and officers and will be the Marines' principal East Coast training station.

New Steel Plant Planned On West Coast

Plans for immediate construction of a $150,000,000 steel plant on the Pacific Coast, big enough to double that area's annual steel production, were disclosed yesterday by White House visitors.

White House estimates of the country's steel needs are being revised upward by a considerable percentage, officials disclosed meanwhile.

They revealed that Gano Dunn, Government steel expert, whose figures influenced President Roosevelt to say in February that America had enough steel capacity to meet all needs, has changed all his figures to deal with the lend-lease program. Dunn will have a supplement to his original report on the President's desk by the middle of May, it was said, carrying recommendations for a considerable expansion in the capacity of the steel industry.

Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast construction engineer who helped build the Boulder Dam, disclosed after a call on President Roosevelt that he had applied to the Office of Production Management for a certificate for a $150,000,000 steel production program on the West Coast.

Senator Murdock Goes With Him

Kaiser, who was accompanied to the White House by Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, told the President of difficulties in obtaining steel for shipyards in the San Francisco area.

Kaiser said he did not know whether the huge development would be privately or publicly financed, but it was pointed out that if the OPM grants him a certifiate of necessity for the construction the way would be cleared for a loan from the Defense Plant Corporation, a subsidiary of the Federal Loan Agency.

Kaiser said he planned a pig iron plant at Mount Pleasant, Utah; a plant to produce high-grade steel in the Northwest using Bonneville power, and a third and principal mill to process steel in southern California.

The plants would produce about 1,250,000 tons of steel annually, more than double the present production of the West Coast area, which is estimated at about 1,000,000 tons annually.

Production in Eight Months

Experts said that the new facilities, together with existing plants, could satisfy all expected demands for steel on the West Coast, thus eventually making it unnecessary to ship steel to the Pacific area from Eastern plants.

"If we get a green light," Kaiser said, "we will be under production from scrap in 8 months and from ore in 12."

The new facilities would provide a considerable increase in the present national steel capacity, estimated in Dunn's report as 87,576,000 tons "reliable" annual capacity at the beginning of this year.

Kaiser declined to say what had been the President's reaction to his plans. Questioned about their talk later, President Roosevelt told the press conference that Kaiser was interested in everything to do with more material for the West Coast. He said he had referred Kaiser to the Priorities Division of the OPM.

Program for Home Defenses Discussed at White House

A round of conferences was held at the White House yesterday on plans to gear millions of private citizens into a home defense plan, and at the same time President Roosevelt denied reports that Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York City, would head the organization, when it is created.

President Roosevelt, apparently putting finishing touches on the plan, conferred with Wayne Coy, assistant Federal Security administrator, and Budget Director Harold Smith.

Later he discussed the medical aspects of defense with Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator.

This was folowed by a conference between the President and LaGuardia, who was preparing to leave for defense conferences in Ottawa, Canada.

Earlier in the day, Stephen Early, the President's press spokesman, had said that Mayor LaGuardia and William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, "are in the picture" of plans for American home defense.

At his press conference later in the day, the President said that no offer had been or would be made to LaGuardia to head the home defense setup, which would probably be a task of enlisting countless citizans to help the preparedness effort.

The War Department, meanwhile, disclosed specifications for four family-type bomb shelters which will be recommended to civilian engineers for construction in the United States if the necessity arises.

The shelters range in cost from $230 to $750. They are currently being tested.

The shelters were described in a War Department bulletin to be distributed to municipal governments and civilian engineers. The publication, entitled "Civilan Defense—Protective Construction," also discussed bomb protection measures of public utilities, factories and buildings generally.

The War Department, in a foreword, emphasized that issuance of the bulletin in no sense should be construed "as a signal to start work immediately on any of the protective structures described."

British Warships Fired on Liner, U. S. Captain Says

Jersey City, N. J., April 22 (AP).—An irate Yankee skipper declared that his 350 passengers were thrown into a near panic when two British corvettes fired three shots at the American Export liner Siboney on April 12 as she steamed alone in a haze 320 miles off Lisbon.

"I was in my cabin adjusting the radio when I heard an explosion," said Capt. Wenzel Habel. "A moment later I heard the whine of a shell and I rushed to the bridge. Just as I got there a shell hit the water 50 feet in front of our bow."

He said one of the vessels pulled alongside his ship and allowed it to proceed after a 44-minute delay for identification. He termed the shots inexcusable, explaining that "I radioed our position report at noon (the shots came at 1:30 p. m.) and we had a navicerted cargo." Habel lodged a protest with British naval officials at Bermuda.

Indianapolis, April 22 (INS).—The 80,000 members of the International Typographical Union, independent since it was suspended from the American Federation of Labor in 1939, will vote in a referendum on a proposal for reaffiliation on May 21, it was announced today.

The I. T. U. was suspended because it refused to pay a special assessment of 1 cent per month per member to build up a fund to fight the C. I. O.

War Hospital Unit on View Here

A double truck emergency operating unit—first of a fleet of five will soon be on their way to relieve suffering in Greece—drew up in the bright sunshine in Pennsylvania Avenue yesterday.

Visitors saw modern equipment which is designed to make the most of minutes, in emergency surgery near the point of casualties. "Five minutes after the two trucks come to a stop, and are backed up with a platform to join them, the first wounded man can be received," said Lee Price, representative of the American Field Hospital Corps, which has received donations to provide for the five $10,000 units.

When the two trucks are joined, a complete operating room is ready. They carry portable X-ray, sterilizing, anaesthetic, blood testing and blood plasma apparatus, with a special automatic refrigerator for vaccines and serums, and electric generators for lighting and X-ray.

It's a Time-Saver

The unit was exhibited in Pennsylvania Avenue alongside the green plot at Fourteenth Street Northwest.

By coincidence yesterday Mrs. M. Paul Noyes and Mrs. David Norton Yerkes, of Chicago, who gave the funds for one of the trucks, were in Washington and saw their gift for the first time, Price said.

The American Field Hospital Corps in raising funds for the units responded to a request from Greece, cabled to the headquarters of the Greek War Relief Association. Already the corps has given to England a mobile field hospital of 36 units which covers nearly two acres when erected.

Price yesterday pointed out one of the many time-saving features of the truck unit. The combination operating and fluoroscopic table, with bakelite top, is so arranged that a photogrpahic plate can be placed on a roller under the table. By looking through an X-ray screen, the physician can locate bullet or shrapnel in the victim, thus saving the time it would take to develop X-ray films.

Thrown Into Spanish Prison

The American Field Hospital Corps is the successor to the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps which supplied, by private donations, more than 100 American ambulances with drivers for relief work with the French army. Price himself enlisted as an ambulance driver, exactly one year ago yesterday. He drove at the front, and continued his service during the retreat. He was attached to a military hospital at Vichy for about a month after the armistice, and finally, on his way back to America was among 20 ambulance drivers put in a military prison in Spain—apparently because it was suspected that they were going to serve England, he said. After surmounting other obstacles, he finally reached the United States in September.

The unit on display here will be shown in Baltimore today and in Wilmington before returning to New York.

The American Field Hospital Corps, with headquarters at 610 Fifth Avenue, New York, includes on its national committee Laurence V. Benet, Robert Woods Bliss, Col. William J. Donovan, Charles Evans Hughes, jr., John Hay Witney.

the ship on which he fled. Likelihood that von Werra had reached South America and planned to proceed from there by plane to Africa made such a pursuit unlikely, however.

Jackson sent out the following instructions to avoid any recurrence of the affair:

1. Any escaping prisoner of war must be turned back at the United States borders with whatever force is reasonably necessary.

2. Any escaped prisoner of war entering the United States must be held for instruction from the Attorney General.

3. In no case may immigration authorities or United States attorneys agree to release such a prisoner in the custody of consular officers.

Von Werra had been released to the custody of the German consul general in New York City.

He is reported to have accompanied a member of the New York German consulate staff on a "vacation trip" to a Southern State and to have disappeared from there. He had been under "surveillance" but not under constant watch by immigration officials. From what port or airfield he departed, or from what country he was able to obtain a passport has not been determined.

Peter Reidel air attache of the German Embassy, said last night that Von Werra's case was entirely a matter for the New York consulate.

In New York, Dr. Hans Borchers, the Consul General, said with a chuckle when asked Von Werra's whereabouts:

"I really can't say. The last I heard of him he was living in Westchester with one of our boys—possibly writing his memoirs."

Following his release on bond at New York, Von Werra was reported to have been somewhat lionized, with admiring women sending flowers to his Yorkville (N. Y.) hotel room, and others gathering around him whenever he appeared at night clubs and parties.

Army Orders D. C. to Plan Air-Raid Corps

Members of the District Defense Council were asked yesterday by the War Department to prepare plans for establishment of a volunteer corps of air-raid observers here.

Under the War Department's defense program, between 500,000 and 600,000 volunteers will be trained for "air warning service" it was announced. The "sky observers" will function as a civilian unit of the Army Air Corps, according to reports from the general headquarters, Air Force.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highway and executive vice chairman of the local defense council, said last night he had received word from the War Department announcing tentative plans for the project. Whitehurst said he would not start organization plans, however, until further instructions are received.

He was told, Whitehurst said, that within a short time the Army would furnish him with information on qualifications for volunteers and a general program to follow.

At the same time, the War Department requested that would-be volunteers in the air warning service apply directly to their State or municipal defense councils instead of to the War Department or Army Air Corps.

"Inasmuch as local patriotic organization will play a leading part in establishing the air warning net throughout the country," the War Department said, "applications should not be sent to any unit of the air corps. The rocess of enrolling and simplified if applications are the volunteers will be facilitated and made to local defense councils."

Mediation Board Settles 11th Strike

The National Defense Mediation Board, setting a pace of "a settlement a day," scored its eleventh victory yesterday when company and union officials reached an agreement to terminate the eight-week-old strike at the Cowles Tool Co., Cleveland.

The settlement, terms of which were not immediately made public, is expected to be ratified by members of the striking C. I. O. United Auto Workers local tomorrow, making possible a resumption of operations on Friday. Although only 80 workers are involved, the strike was the oldest unsettled dispute of the defense program and assumed serious proportions because of the critical shortage of machine tools, chief product of the company.

The strike, which began on February 27, was certified to the board by the Labor Department on April 5. Issues in the dispute were wages, hours and the union shop.

A few hours before the announcement of the agreement, another strike was added to the Mediation Board's docket when the Labor Department certified the week-old dispute in two plants of John Roebling Sons Co., largest manufacturers of control cables for the Army Air Corps.

The board immediately wired company executives and officials of the striking C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee that an early conference date would be set, and requested that no action be taken by either side to "aggravate the situation and make the controversy more difficult to solve."

Scores of C. I. O. pickets and nonstrikers, swinging baseball bats and fists, were reported by the Associated Press to have skirmished for 15 minutes yesterday outside the Roebling plant. The disturbance was broken up by police using fire hoses.

Aside from the soft coal strike, the Roebling dispute, involving 6,500 workers in the company's plants at Roebling and Trenton, N. J., is the greatest stoppage. The issues are union recognition, grievances and working conditions.

Secretary of Labor Perkins last night certified to the board the strike at the American Car and Foundry Co., at Buffalo, N. Y. The strike, involving 1,500 workers, was called April 15 by an A. F. L. federal union. Army tanks and shell casings are produced there.

The board also set April 28 as the hearing date for the dispute in the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co., Chicago, certified on Monday. Although the A. F. of L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and International Association of Machinists had agreed to postpone only until midnight tonight a strike originally scheduled for Monday midnight, the board requested that the postponement be continued until hearings could be held.

Meantime, a board panel continued conferences yesterday on a strike which has closed 50 machine shops in the San Francisco area.

Reenlistment Bonus Under Study

Army officials were reported yesterday to be considering a plan to induce thousands of selectees to remain in uniform for two years beyond their one-year service period.

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said they had heard unconfirmed reports that the Army may seek legislation to keep trainees in training "for the duration of the emergency." War Department spokesmen, however, intimated that needed combat strength could be raised without resorting to new draft legislation.

Reenlistment bonuses to the ablest selectees were mentioned as a possible method.

In case of war, Army officials pointed out, the 473,000 Regular Army troops would be spread dangerously thin along coastlines, through the island possessions and Alaska, and in the Atlantic base sites recently acquired from Britain. thecmfwy cmfwy cmfw vbgk xzfifl

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, member of the Military Committee, told an Associated Press reporter he had heard reports originating in Army circles that Congress would be asked to declare a complete state of emergency under which selectees would be held in service until the end of the emergency.

He expressed the opinion that it would be unfair to require more than one year's training of selectees when other eligible registrants had not been called.

Senaator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, acting committee chairman, said he had heard similar reports of an extension plan, but added that no decision was likely until June.

On the local draft scene:

Two sons of a veteran White House Secret Service bodyguard were reported among 155 District registrants to be inducted today—the second pair of Washington brothers to be inducted under the Selective Service Act.

The boys, both of whom volunteered, are Charles A. Fredericks, 20, and Russell F. Fredericks, 18, of 442 Peabody Street Northwest. Their father, Charles W. Fredericks, has been with the Secret Service for 28 years as a Presidential bodyguard. They had both been working as Safeway grocery clerks.

They are among 11 replacements who will be inducted in Baltimore. To be inducted in Richmond this morning are 144 white District registrants, comprising the final draft quota for Washington this month.

Small replacement groups will continue to be sent to Richmond and Baltimore as needed until the next regular induction on May 9, Selective Service headquarters announced. Ten will go to Baltimore tomorrow and 10 Friday.

Approximately 25 cases will be examined by the Draft Appeals Board Thursday, according to Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., of local draft headquarters. On Friday night, 550 District registrants will receive their physical examinations in six Washington hospitals.

Replacements to be inducted today are:

Senator Taft Seeks Inquiry Into Price-Control Legality

OPM Will Stand On Orders Issued By Henderson Agency

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The OPM Division of Purchases will veto proposed Government contracts calling for prices in excess of those set by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, it was announced yesterday.

In a joint statement of OPACS Administrator Leon Henderson and Director of Purchases Donald M. Nelson, expressing "complete agreement on policies and objectives," the Division of Purchases implied that it would use its power to block clearance of contracts as an enforcement aid to Henderson's antiinflation and price fixing program.

Nelson's promise was seen as particularly significant in the light of speculation that Henderson might encounter lack of cooperation by OPM divisions. Without such cooperation several of the speediest and most potent compliance weapons granted OPACS by the executive order which created it would be rendered unusable, it was believed.

The joint statement of principles governing relations between the two agencies was made in identical memorandums to staff members. It included an agreement under which the purchases division will inform OPACS of procurement plans and proposals of Government buying agencies which might influence price stability or affect supply of goods for civilians, and a reciprocal arrangement whereby OPACS will make recommendations on these plans and proposals through the division of purchases.

Keye provision was Nelson's agreement "not to clear proposed contracts in which prices do not conform to regulations set by OPACS, unless OPACS approves such contracts."

Its effect, in denying Government orders to industries which decline to abide by OPACS price orders, will constitute a much more effective and less cumbersome method of obtaining compliance than OPACS' other major enforcement powers of "drafting industry" and the placement of compulsory orders, it was believed.

Calls Attempt to Force Expansion of Plants Rule by Blackmail

Disclosure that the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply will use its price-control powers to bring about industrial plant expansion yesterday provoked from Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, a demand for Congressional inquiry into the legality of the OPACS setup.

Taft, who has frequently questioned the legal basis of the new price agency headed by Leon Henderson, said an attempt to force plant expansion through the threat of price regulation amounted to "Government by blackmail."

Taft, after reading to the Senate a Washington Post account of the projected plant expansion drive, declared:

"Leon Henderson hasn't the slightest shadow of authority to fix prices. Now he's going to use powers he hasn't got to force civilians to comply with this new program."

Taft said it may be necessary to require plant expansion but that the decision should be made by Congress "and not by Mr. Henderson."

"We are proceeding along the same line followed by every totalitarian state," he said, "with the Executive each day obtaining new powers by decree."

Taft said he will soon introduce a resolution calling for investigation of what he called the "arbitrary powers claimed by OPACS and other new agencies."

Americans Reported Safe in Belgrade

Strike Threat At G. M. Omits Defense Work

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 22.—Officials of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) said today they could not "see that the 30-day order of the State labor mediation board applies" in the union's threat to strike in General Motors plants.

Basing its action on a corporation statement that G. M. has $315,633,575 in defense work under way in its Michigan plants, the State board yesterday invoked a 30-day "cooling-off period" in the dispute between the U. A. W.-C. I. O. and General Motors over a new contract.

R. J. Thomas, president of the union, and Walter P. Reuther, director of its G. M. department, said in a statement today that "if the corporation forces a strike, defense workers will not be involved," and therefore they did not believe the 30-day order applied.

Reuther said that union locals in the malleable iron plant at Saginaw, Mich.; Fisher body at Cleveland; Fisher body, Chevrolet and Harrison radiator, all at St. Louis; Inland Manufacturing, Clark, N. J., and Cadillac, excluding the Allison engine division, Detroit, already had authorized international union officers to call a strike.

Negotiations on renewal of the union contract with General Motors were under way today, with Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey continuing as mediator.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. has demanded union shop recognition, a 10-cent hourly wage increase, enlarged powers for the labor umpire and approval of a shop steward system.

Pittsburgh, April 22 (AP).—The Aluminum Co. of America today announced a general wage increase, amounting to 8 cents an hour for most of its 40,000 hourly rate employes in 18 plants.

The increase, designed to bring wage boosts granted since October 1, 1939, to a total of 10 cents an hour, will be 8 cents an hour except in three plants. In those plants, at East St. Louis, Ill.; Garwood, N. J., and Mobile, Ala., smaller wage adjustments will be made to attain the 10-cent total.

The company also said that pay of salaried plant employes would be boosted, but the amount was not announced.

Fireman Injured As 20-Year-Old Truck Is Ditched

A fireman was slightly injured yesterday when a No. 19 Engine Company pumper, built 20 years ago, left the pavement on Minnesota Avenue at Sheriff Road Northeast, skidded along a ditch and struck a fireplug and a stop sign.

Harold E. Grimm, 39, the driver, and Walter P. Whittington were thrown from the engine, and Whittington suffered a wrenched back. They were en route to a brush fire at Fiftieth and Meade Streets Northeast.

Police reported the vehicle's brakes failed, but Whittington said a wheel collapsed. The pumper was being used temporarily by the company while its new pumper was being repaired.

Vinson Bill Modification Appears Likely

By Russell Turner.
United Press Staff Writer

Revision of the Vinson compulsory mediation bill appeared likely last night after President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, had restated his opposition.

The bill would provide a compulsory 25-day "cooling-off" period before strikes could be called in any defense industry, compel dismissal of Communists and Bundists, and ban establishment of new closed shop labor agreements. It appeared that the closed shop "freezing" provision might be sidetracked to mollify labor organizations.

Murray telegraphed Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee, that the measure should be sent back to the House Naval Affairs Committee—which approved it last week—for further hearings and extended consideration. He emphasized that the Naval Committee held hearings on the bill only two days before reporting it.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor on Monday sent all members of Congress a letter vigorously opposing the legislation.

Reports circulated last night that Administration leaders were seeking to work out a compromise which would involve Administration support of the cooling-off period provision in return for abandonment by Vinson of the open and closed shop clause.

Speaker Rayburn lent authenticity to the reports when, after a conference with Vinson, he said he expected proponents of the bill would be "practical" and would not let it stand or fall on the closed-shop issue. He added that "when I had bills before the House, I kept my eye on the main tree and didn't spend too much time in the underbrush."

Murray wrote Sabath that the bill should be rejected until all major witnesses have had an opportunity to express their views.

"This bill," he said, "drastically and seriously curtails existing rights of labor and will in my judgment provide a basis for more widespread discontent among working men and women, thereby causing grave repercussions throughout our national defense program."

Despite the unity in opposition of both the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. to the Vinson bill, Green yesterday added fuel to their prolonged and bitter rivalry.

A dispatch from Montgomery, Ala., where he had gone to address the Alabama Federation of Labor, quoted him as charging that "the C. I. O.'s unfriendly attitude toward national defense" was spurring Congress toward enactment of "vicious" anti-labor legislation. He included the Vinson bill in that category.

Surtaxes Beginning at 11 Per Cent Sought on Incomes

porations earning less than that amount. The increased corporation taxes would raise another $500,000,000.

Excess profits would be reached for another $400,000,000 by either a reduction of credits from 95 per cent to 75 per cent of average earnings or making the invested capital alternative tax begin after 6 per cent instead of 8 per cent as at present.

A lengthened list of steep excise taxes, including sharp increases in present excises and revival of old and imposition of new ones. Telephone bills, phonographs and records, sporting goods, matches, furs, jewelry, musical instruments, photograph apparatus, clocks, watches, soft drinks and candy would be taxed in addition to many other items previously reported.

Exemption to Drop

The estate tax would begin at $25,000 instead of $40,000, with rates graduated from 4 to 70 per cent instead of 2 to 70 per cent at present. Also the gift tax exemption would be dropped from $40,000 to $25,000, with the rates increased. The amount of insurance exempt from estate tax likewise would be reduced from $40,000 to $25,000.

The poposed surtaxes starting at 11 per cent on the first $2,000 of taxable income contrast with the existing first surtax bracket of 4 per cent on income in excess of $4,000.

Undisturbed would be left the normal 4 per cent income tax, the $2,000 exemption for married persons and the $800 single exemption. In computing the normal tax, the same deductions for dependents, for taxes and charities would be allowed. A salaried individual could still make the same 10 per cent deduction for earned income.

No Earned Income Credit

Over this unchanged existing normal tax structure would be imposed the new surtax. In computing the surtax, the personal exemption could again be deducted, but the earned income credit would not be allowed. The resulting surtax must then be added to the normal tax and this total would be subject to the continued 10 per cent defense tax.

Thus a married person earning $4,000, and with no deductions, would apply the 11 per cent surtax to the $2,000 remaining after his personal exemption, to compute his surtax of $220. Calculating his normal tax, he would deduct his $400 earned income credit and his $2,000 personal exemption from his $4,000 income. The remaining $1,600, taxed at 4 per cent, would add $64 normal to his $220 surtax for a total of $284. To this must be added the 10 per cent defense tax, or $28.40, to make his total tax payment $312.40.

Instead of raising the present 24 per cent tax on corporations earning over $25,000 to 30 per cent, the Treasury reportedly proposed that the added 6 per cent be made a surtax. This was done, it was said, to reach particularly banks and insurance companies receiving large income from Government securities not exempt from the surtax. Staff experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue are said to have made strong objection to this proposal, contending it would break faith with those who purchased the securities as tax exempt.

Excise tax proposals included the following:

A 5 per cent tax on telephone bills to raise $28,600,000.

A passenger transportation tax of 5 per cent of fares to raise $37,600,000.

Lowering of the exemption on admissions from 20 cents to 9 cents to produce $55,000,000.

Ten per cent tax on jewelery, $8,400,000.

Ten per cent tax on retail price of furs, $9,900,000.

Ten per cent tax on clocks and watches, $10,000,000.

Tax of 2 cents per thousand on matches, $7,100,000.

Ten per cent tax on musical instruments, $3,600,000.

Ten per cent tax on sporting goods, $850,000.

Ten per cent tax on phonographs and records, $4,500,000.

Two cent a check tax on bank checks, $6,000,000.

Increase in tax on autos and parts from 3½ per cent and 2½ per cent to 7 per cent and 5 per cent, $78,300,000.

Raising tax on tires and tubes from 2½ cents and 4½ cents to 5 cents and 9 cents, $52,500,000.

Raising tax on mechanical refrigerators from 5½ per cent to 10 per cent, $9,800,000.

Increasing tax on radio sets and parts from 5½ per cent to 10 per cent, $6,000,000.

Increasing tax on playing cards from 11 cents to 15 cents, $51,700,000.

Raising tax on safe deposit boxes from 11 per cent to 20 per cent, $1,700,000.

Increase from $3.25 to $4 per 1,000 in tax on cigarettes, $125,200,000.

Doubling rates on cigars and snuff, $75,600,000.

Increasing from $3 a gallon to $4 in tax on liquor, $135,000,000.

A 16 2-3 per cent increase in tax on wines, cordials and liquers, $2,200,000.

Increasing from $6 a barrel to $7 a barrel in tax on beer, $55,000,000.

Increasing from 1½ cents a gallon to 2½ cents a gallon in gasoline tax, $255,000,000.

One cent a bottle tax on soft drinks, $132,000,000.

Five per cent tax on candy and chewing gun, $3,600,000.

Lowering exemptions and new rates on telephone, telegraph and cables, $40,300,000.

Increased tax on trunks, suit cases and other luggage, $5,600,000.

Tax on photographic apperatus, $15,000,000.

Fascists Barred From Union Post

New York, April 22 (AP).—Communist, Nazi and Fascist groups were barred from holding office in the Textile Workers Union of America (C. I. O.) by an amendment to the union's constitution at the organization's second biennial convention today.

The union is bargaining agent for some 300,000 textile workers in about 1,000 plants in 32 States.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 22 (AP).—Gov. Holland today signed into law a measure outlawing from Florida the Communist Party and the German-American Bund.

A maximum penalty of ten years in prison or $10,000 fine is provided in the antisubversive elements law for persons convicted of advocating overthrow by force or violence of constitutional government.

You may go through your entire life without ever seeing a roller bearing. But much of the government's many-billion-dollar program would be stopped in its tracks without them. Timken, the world's largest manufacturer of roller bearings, is therefore vital to America's defense. And Timken is marching in step with all America.

During the past year, millions of dollars have been invested in expansion and new equipment to ready ourselves for the job of supplying builders of airplanes, tanks, ships, guns, trucks, and machine tools with steel and bearings. Even greater expansions to meet America's defense needs are now being made. And there will be still more in 1942 if the nation's defense needs more.

The Timken steel mill supplies tough and hard metal for roller bearings—and for many important armament purposes. It has almost doubled its capacity in the past two years.

And new equipment can digest the coming avalanche of bearing requirements.

Some of Uncle Sam's four-motor bombers need 238 Timken tapered roller bearings. . . . Trailers that carry ammunition, guns, bombs, pontoons, and the cargo of war ride on Timken Roller Bearings. . . . Machine tools—all sorts of lathes, and other metal turning and metal working machines—depend upon Timken bearings for 24-hour trouble-free service. . . . As many as 50 Timken roller bearings protect trucks made for defense purposes from friction breakdowns. . . . Tanks use as many as 28.

And in a hundred other places, from hand-trucks to drydocks and battleships, Timken Roller Bearings guarantee protection from friction.

War Hospital Unit on View Here

A double truck emergency operating unit—first of a fleet of five will soon be on their way to relieve suffering in Greece—drew up in the bright sunshine in Pennsylvania Avenue yesterday.

Visitors saw modern equipment which is designed to make the most of minutes, in emergency surgery near the point of casualties. "Five minutes after the two trucks come to a stop, and are backed up with a platform to join them, the first wounded man can be received," said Lee Price, representative of the American Field Hospital Corps, which has received donations to provide for the five $10,000 units.

When the two trucks are joined, a complete operating room is ready. They carry portable X-ray, sterilizing, anaesthetic, blood testing and blood plasma apparatus, with a special automatic refrigerator for vaccines and serums, and electric generators for lighting and X-ray.

It's a Time-Saver

The unit was exhibited in Pennsylvania Avenue alongside the green plot at Fourteenth Street Northwest.

By coincidence yesterday Mrs. M. Paul Noyes and Mrs. David Norton Yerkes, of Chicago, who gave the funds for one of the trucks, were in Washington and saw their gift for the first time, Price said.

The American Field Hospital Corps in raising funds for the units responded to a request from Greece, cabled to the headquarters of the Greek War Relief Association. Already the corps has given to England a mobile field hospital of 36 units which covers nearly two acres when erected.

Price yesterday pointed out one of the many time-saving features of the truck unit. The combination operating and fluoroscopic table, with bakelite top, is so arranged that a photogrpahic plate can be placed on a roller under the table. By looking through an X-ray screen, the physician can locate bullet or shrapnel in the victim, thus saving the time it would take to develop X-ray films.

Thrown Into Spanish Prison

The American Field Hospital Corps is the successor to the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps which supplied, by private donations, more than 100 American ambulances with drivers for relief work with the French army. Price himself enlisted as an ambulance driver, exactly one year ago yesterday. He drove at the front, and continued his service during the retreat. He was attached to a military hospital at Vichy for about a month after the armistice, and finally, on his way back to America was among 20 ambulance drivers put in a military prison in Spain—apparently because it was suspected that they were going to serve England, he said. After surmounting other obstacles, he finally reached the United States in September.

The unit on display here will be shown in Baltimore today and in Wilmington before returning to New York.

The American Field Hospital Corps, with headquarters at 610 Fifth Avenue, New York, includes on its national committee Laurence V. Benet, Robert Woods Bliss, Col. William J. Donovan, Charles Evans Hughes, jr., John Hay Witney.

the ship on which he fled. Likelihood that von Werra had reached South America and planned to proceed from there by plane to Africa made such a pursuit unlikely, however.

Jackson sent out the following instructions to avoid any recurrence of the affair:

1. Any escaping prisoner of war must be turned back at the United States borders with whatever force is reasonably necessary.

2. Any escaped prisoner of war entering the United States must be held for instruction from the Attorney General.

3. In no case may immigration authorities or United States attorneys agree to release such a prisoner in the custody of consular officers.

Von Werra had been released to the custody of the German consul general in New York City.

He is reported to have accompanied a member of the New York German consulate staff on a "vacation trip" to a Southern State and to have disappeared from there. He had been under "surveillance" but not under constant watch by immigration officials. From what port or airfield he departed, or from what country he was able to obtain a passport has not been determined.

Peter Reidel, air attache of the German Embassy, said last night that Von Werra's case was entirely a matter for the New York consulate.

In New York, Dr. Hans Borchers, the Consul General, said with a chuckle when asked Von Werra's whereabouts:

"I really can't say. The last I heard of him he was living in Westchester with one of our boys—possibly writing his memoirs."

Following his release on bond at New York, Von Werra was reported to have been somewhat lionized, with admiring women sending flowers to his Yorkville (N. Y.) hotel room, and others gathering around him whenever he appeared at night clubs and parties.

Army Orders D. C. to Plan Air-Raid Corps

Members of the District Defense Council were asked yesterday by the War Department to prepare plans for establishment of a volunteer corps of air-raid observers here.

Under the War Department's defense program, between 500,000 and 600,000 volunteers will be trained for "air warning service" it was announced. The "sky observers" will function as a civilian unit of the Army Air Corps, according to reports from the general headquarters, Air Force.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highway and executive vice chairman of the local defense council, said last night he had received word from the War Department announcing tentative plans for the project. Whitehurst said he would not start organization plans, however, until further instructions are received.

He was told, Whitehurst said, that within a short time the Army would furnish him with information on qualifications for volunteers and a general program to follow.

At the same time, the War Department requested that would-be volunteers in the air warning service apply directly to their State or municipal defense councils instead of to the War Department or Army Air Corps.

"Inasmuch as local patriotic organization will play a leading part in establishing the air warning net throughout the country," the War Department said, "applications should not be sent to any unit of the air corps. The rocess of enrolling and simplified if applications are the volunteers will be facilitated and made to local defense councils."

Mediation Board Settles 11th Strike

The National Defense Mediation Board, setting a pace of "a settlement a day," scored its eleventh victory yesterday when company and union officials reached an agreement to terminate the eight-week-old strike at the Cowles Tool Co., Cleveland.

The settlement, terms of which were not immediately made public, is expected to be ratified by members of the striking C. I. O. United Auto Workers local tomorrow, making possible a resumption of operations on Friday. Although only 80 workers are involved, the strike was the oldest unsettled dispute of the defense program and assumed serious proportions because of the critical shortage of machine tools, chief product of the company.

The strike, which began on February 27, was certified to the board by the Labor Department on April 5. Issues in the dispute were wages, hours and the union shop.

A few hours before the announcement of the agreement, another strike was added to the Mediation Board's docket when the Labor Department certified the week-old dispute in two plants of John Roebling Sons Co., largest manufacturers of control cables for the Army Air Corps.

The board immediately wired company executives and officials of the striking C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee that an early conference date would be set, and requested that no action be taken by either side to "aggravate the situation and make the controversy more difficult to solve."

Scores of C. I. O. pickets and nonstrikers, swinging baseball bats and fists, were reported by the Associated Press to have skirmished for 15 minutes yesterday outside the Roebling plant. The disturbance was broken up by police using fire hoses.

Aside from the soft coal strike, the Roebling dispute, involving 6,500 workers in the company's plants at Roebling and Trenton, N. J., is the defense program's largest stoppage. The issues are union recognition, grievances and working conditions.

Secretary of Labor Perkins last night certified to the board the strike at the American Car and Foundry Co., at Buffalo, N. Y. The strike, involving 1,500 workers, was called April 15 by an A. F. L. federal union. Army tanks and shell casings are produced there.

The board also set April 28 as the hearing date for the dispute in the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co., Chicago, certified on Monday. Although the A. F. of L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and International Association of Machinists had agreed to postpone only until midnight tonight a strike originally scheduled for Monday midnight, the board requested that the postponement be continued until hearings could be held.

Meantime, a board panel continued conferences yesterday on a strike which has closed 50 machine shops in the San Francisco area.

Reenlistment Bonus Under Study

Army officials were reported yesterday to be considering a plan to induce thousands of selectees to remain in uniform for two years beyond their one-year service period.

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said they had heard unconfirmed reports that the Army may seek legislation to keep trainees in training "for the duration of the emergency." War Department spokesmen, however, intimated that needed combat strength could be raised without resorting to new draft legislation.

Reenlistment bonuses to the ablest selectees were mentioned as a possible method.

In case of war, Army officials pointed out, the 473,000 Regular Army troops would be spread dangerously thin along coastlines, through the island possessions and Alaska, and in the Atlantic base sites recently acquired from Britain. thecmfwy cmfwy cmfw vbgk xzfifi

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, member of the Military Committee, told an Associated Press reporter he had heard reports originating in Army circles that Congress would be asked to declare a complete state of emergency under which selectees would be held in service until the end of the emergency.

He expressed the opinion that it would be unfair to require more than one year's training of selectees when other eligible registrants had not been called.

Senaator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, acting committee chairman, said he had heard similar reports of an extension plan, but added that no decision was likely until June.

On the local draft scene:

Two sons of a veteran White House Secret Service bodyguard were reported among 155 District registrants to be inducted today—the second pair of Washington brothers to be inducted under the Selective Service Act.

The boys, both of whom volunteered, are Charles A. Fredericks, 20, and Russell F. Fredericks, 18, of 442 Peabody Street Northwest. Their father, Charles W. Fredericks, has been with the Secret Service for 28 years as a Presidential bodyguard. They had both been working as Safeway grocery clerks.

They are among 11 replacements who will be inducted in Baltimore. To be inducted in Richmond this morning are 144 white District registrants, comprising the final draft quota for Washington this month.

Small replacement groups will continue to be sent to Richmond and Baltimore as needed until the next regular induction on May 9, Selective Service headquarters announced. Ten will go to Baltimore tomorrow and 10 Friday.

Approximately 25 cases will be examined by the Draft Appeals Board Thursday, according to Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettleheim, jr., of local draft headquarters. On Friday night, 550 District registrants will receive their physical examinations in six Washington hospitals.

Replacements to be inducted today are:

Senator Taft Seeks Inquiry Into Price-Control Legality

OPM Will Stand On Orders Issued By Henderson Agency

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The OPM Division of Purchases will veto proposed Government contracts calling for prices in excess of those set by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, it was announced yesterday.

In a joint statement of OPACS Administrator Leon Henderson and Director of Purchases Donald M. Nelson, expressing "complete agreement on policies and objectives," the Division of Purchases implied that it would use its power to block clearance of contracts as an enforcement aid to Henderson's antiinflation and price fixing program.

Nelson's promise was seen as particularly significant in the light of speculation that Henderson might encounter lack of cooperation by OPM divisions. Without such cooperation several of the speediest and most potent compliance weapons granted OPACS by the executive order which created it would be rendered unusable, it was believed.

The joint statement of principles governing relations between the two agencies was made in identical memorandums to staff members. It included an agreement under which the purchases division will inform OPACS of procurement plans and proposals of Government buying agencies which might influence price stability or affect supply of goods for civilians, and a reciprocal arrangement whereby OPACS will make recommendations on these plans and proposals through the division of purchases.

Keye provision was Nelson's agreement "not to clear proposed contracts in which prices do not conform to regulations set by OPACS, unless OPACS approves such contracts."

Its effect, in denying Government orders to industries which decline to abide by OPACS price orders, will constitute a much more effective and less cumbersome method of obtaining compliance than OPACS' other major enforcement powers of "drafting industry" and the placement of compulsory orders, it was believed.

Calls Attempt to Force Expansion of Plants Rule by Blackmail

Disclosure that the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply will use its price-control powers to bring about industrial plant expansion yesterday provoked from Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, a demand for Congressional inquiry into the legality of the OPACS setup.

Taft, who has frequently questioned the legal basis of the new price agency headed by Leon Henderson, said an attempt to force plant expansion through the threat of price regulation amounted to "Government by blackmail."

Taft, after reading to the Senate a Washington Post account of the projected plant expansion drive, declared:

"Leon Henderson hasn't the slightest shadow of authority to fix prices. Now he's going to use powers he hasn't got to force civilians to comply with this new program."

Taft said it may be necessary to require plant expansion but that the decision should be made by Congress "and not by Mr. Henderson."

"We are proceeding along the same line followed by every totalitarian state," he said, "with the Executive each day obtaining new powers by decree."

Taft said he will soon introduce a resolution calling for investigation of what he called the "arbitrary powers claimed by OPACS and other new agencies."

Americans Reported Safe in Belgrade

Painter's Drowning Held Accidental

A certificate of accidental drowning was issued yesterday for John James Dennean, 33-year-old painter, whose body was found in the Anacostia River Friday, by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Mr. Dennean, a selective service registrant of Board No. 17, had left his home Tuesday, several hours before he was scheduled to report for his draft physical examination and apparently had rolled into the water after falling asleep while fishing, the coroner said.

115th's Antitank Company Ends Week in Field

By the Associated Press

Fort George G .Meade, Md., April 22.—The antitank company of the 115th Infantry, Maryland, has finished a week of extensive maneuvers led by Lieuts. John Keeman and Robert Jackson, and covering a large terrain around Fort Meade.

Two platoons, each lead by a command car, were followed by a troop transport of riflemen and a prime mover containing a gun squad. Communication was maintained by members of the 115th Infantry radio school.

Lieut. Paul K. Candler has assumed acting command of the medical detachment of the 115th Infantry, succeeding Lieut. Mitchell F. Kunkowski, who was relieved from duty because of physical disability.

Two more officers have recently joined the detachment, which originally was from Chestertown, Md. They are Capt. Charles A. Cravotta, Pittsburgh, and Lieut. Millard Jeffrey, of Washington. Capt. Cravotta is from the Medical Corps Reserve and Lieut. Jeffrey has been stationed at the hospital here.

Lieut. Col. Morris T. Warner, of Staunton, Va., executive officer of the 116th Infantry Regiment, today took up duties as instructor in charge at the junior officers' school of the Twentieth Division.

He and Lieut. Col. Harry B. Jordan returned to the 116th Infantry yesterday after spending three months in Battalion Staff Officers' School at Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Jordan, who is from Bedford, Va., is commanding officer of the first battalion of the 116th.

Col. E. W. Opie, commander of the 116th Infantry, has appointed Private Russell S. Hudson and Private Jacob C. Colvin regimental color guards.

Hudson is from Company B, Lynchburg, and Collvin from Company I, Winchester. Private Alton G. Lacy, of Company A, Bedford, has been named supernumerary.

Justice Dept. Employe's Death Called Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an investigation into the fatal shooting of Carmen A. Chirillo, 29, of 2922 Nichols Avenue Southeast.

A Department of Justice employe, Chirillo was found on the floor of his bedroom about 7 a. m. by a friend, Edward J. Boyle. A .22-caliber revolver was on the floor by the body, police said, and Chirillo had a bullet wound in his right temple.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital where he lived for several hours. He died at 11:03 a. m.

Detective Sergt. Fred W. Rawlinson, homicide squad, said the man was despondent over his inability to accept a well-paying job in Pennsylvania.

Lord Halifax said in part:

"Since the outbreak of war, up to March 1, the total figure of relief made available through your great life saving institution amounted to $26,000,000. Nearly two-thirds f this gigantic sum came directly from Red Cross funds, the remainder being contributed from the unexampled appropriation by the Congress of the United States of no less a sum than $50,000,000 for war relief.

"It has thus been possible to send relief to many countries, including my own. Greece, France, Spain and China have all benefited. And, last, but not least, it has been possible to help prisoners of war of many nationalities.

"As British Ambassador, you will, I know, permit me to speak more particularly of the helping hand which you have stretched out to the people of Great Britain. Your aid to them amounts to something like $13,000,000, of which total nearly half represents supplies produced by devoted workers throughout the thousands of charters of your society in the counties and cities of this great country.

Spirit of Giving

"This latter aspect of your work is one which both I and my countrymen find especially moving. For the picture I have in my mind is something which goes far beyond checks and dollar bills, princely as the money gifts from the United States have been and grateful as we are for them. What I seem to see when I talk of these vast figures, are little groups of men and women all over the United States, sometimes working at home, sometimes in one another's houses, but all inspired with one idea—to relieve the sufferings of those who are quite unknown to them.

"There is no reward for such work, at any rate in the wordly sense of the term; it leads to no glory for the worker. It is hardly possible to thank each—there are so many; and there is neither the time nor the organization to enable us to trace them individually. They are, however, working, I know, with no idea of being thanked. That is why I wish to take this opportunity of paying my tribute to them, on behalf of Their Majesties the King and Queen, of the government and people of Great Britain, as well as of myself.

Going in Volume

"Meanwhile, shipments of relief supplies to Great Britain are going across in large volume, while the substantial grants in cash which have been made to the women's voluntary service in Great Britain have been invaluable in meeting emergency needs which could not be immediately satisfied through the shipment of supplies.

"The building and equipment of that joint venture of faith and love, the American Red Cross and Harvard Hospital, are steadily approaching completion. Everything which wounded or distressed men, women and children can need is finding its way, though with great hazard, across the Atlantic. Food, knitted articles, surgical dressings, clothing, blankets, and all manner of medical, surgical and hospital supplies, as well as ambulances and canteens, are being shipped or have been sent. The indomitable bravery of our seamen does everything that is humanly possible to ensure that they arrive. That is, indeed, a crucial point, for nothing could be more tragic than the thought that the fruit of all this devoted work should be destined to rot at the bottom of the Atlantic."

Jackson's Speech

Attorney General Jackson declared:

"We face not only a drive for power on the part of a new group of men, but a drive to substitute a kind of authority that derives its power from military terror and the fear of the concentration and which does not shrink even from transplanting populations to serve its ends. . . .

"Those who think of the Red Cross mission in terms merely of bandages for torn limbs or antiseptics for wounds, and stretchers and splints and the paraphernalia of pain, see only a part of its opportunity.

"The Red Cross has another and higher mission—to bind up broken spirits and to sustain shattering morale.

"The mission of the Red Cross is not only to supply material comforts, but to keep vital in the minds and hearts of afflicted populations the will to live and to conquer their disasters."

He described the American people as drawing together in a great enterprise which has as its object the preservation of the kind of world in which a Red Cross may flourish."

Must Be Spiritual Force

As a society the Red Cross "must be a great spiritual force, representing the ideals of a civilization," he said. "It does not stop at material supplies. It lifts up the hearts of people. It is the medicine through which both he that gives and he that receives may be blessed."

The speakers addressed a crowd which overflowed the dining halls and corridors of the Mayflower. Music was furnished by the U. S. Marine Band orchestra.

Earlier yesterday Ernest J. Swift, Red Cross vice chairman in charge of foreign operations, revealed that about $1,000,000 worth of supplies bound for Britain have been lost "due to warfare."

Some went down in British ships lost at sea and others were destroyed in bombed warehouses, he said.

Loss of life in bombed England is less today than in peacetime, delegates to the American Red Cross Convention learned yesterday.

The paradox was explained by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago Chapter of the Red Cross, as due to the fact that "during the past year more English people have been trained in first aid, accident prevention, nutrition, personal and household hygiene, sanitary precautions and health preservation than in any time in England's history.

"By taking automobiles off the highways, by exercising caution in the home and in industry, by improving diet, by safeguarding self and community from the threat of epidemics through sanitation, vaccination and immunization the English are saving more lives than their enemies are able to take," he said.

Forgan spoke at the same session at which James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic relations, announced the society will seek a 50 per cent increase in its roll call membership next fall.

Predicting this year's roll call "will smash quotas," he said growing Red Cross efforts in the field of national defense and aid to war victims abroad necessitates this increase.

He cited an "amazing" response to the society's need for volunteer workers.

"We begin to see that disaster preparation and civil defense are much the same thing," he said. "The fires of Coventry and wrecked buildings in London are part of a huge disaster, with problems of food, shelter, medical care and every other disaster work detail aggravated many fold."

In the afternoon, the convention broke up into half a dozen "working sessions" in which several of the many phases of Red Cross work were discussed.

Morale Program Related.

How the society is helping build the morale of men in the armed services was described at a session on the Military and Naval Welfare Service at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. T. Hershey, deputy director of the Selective Service System, and Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, were the speakers.

Under the direction of Don C. Smith, national director of the Military and Naval Welfare Service, it was pointed out that the Red Cross serves as liaison between enlisted men and their families and in helping in rehabilitation of men and families following periods of enlistment.

Dr. Overholser discussed the welware work carried out by the Red Cross at St. Elizabeths.

The need of cooperation among all branches of the local chapters was stressed at a session on the nursing service presided over by Walter Davidson, assistant manager of the Eastern area.

Other sessions were held on first aid, water safety and accident prevention, the Junior Red Cross, the nutrition service, public information and volunteer special services.

U. S. to Reinforce Bridge Over Boundary Channel

Plans were announced yesterday by the Public Roads Administration for reinforcing the foundation of Boundary Channel Bridge on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway between Highway and Memorial Bridges.

The work will consist of placing two steel struts between the bridge abutments 10.8 feet below the mean low water level. The War Department has been asked to approve the plans insofar as they will affect navigation. Passage of boats will be permitted during construction except for two eight-hour periods when the struts are sunk into position, it was announced.

The bridge spanning Boundary Channel was constructed ten years ago on filled ground. Settling of the abutments has necessitated the reinforcement work, it was explained.

Transport Lands More Than 2,000 Troops in Manila

Manila, April 22 (AP).—Movement to the Philippines of United States Army forces—principally Coast Artillery, Air Corps and Infantry Detachments—was heavily increased today with the arrival of the transport Republic from Fort Mason, Calif.

The transport landed more than 2,000 soldiers. Among them were 1,400 Coast Artillerymen to be stationed at Fort Mills on Corregidor Island, most distant outpost under the American flag.

The troops represented the largest single American force ever landed in the islands.

On its return trip the Republic is scheduled to carry a capacity passenger load, mostly the wives and children of Army officers and men on Philippine duty.

Strike Threat At G. M. Omits Defense Work

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 22.—Officials of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) said today they could not "see that the 30-day order of the State labor mediation board applies" in the union's threat to strike in General Motors plants.

Basing its action on a corporation statement that G. M. has $315,833,575 in defense work under way in its Michigan plants, the State board yesterday invoked a 30-day "cooling-off period" in the dispute between the U. A. W.-C. I. O. and General Motors over a new contract.

R. J. Thomas, president of the union, and Walter P. Reuther, director of its G. M. department, said in a statement today that "if the corporation forces a strike, defense workers will not be involved," and therefore they did not believe the 30-day order applied.

Reuther said that union locals in the malleable iron plant at Saginaw, Mich.; Fisher body at Cleveland; Fisher body, Chevrolet and Harrison radiator, all at St. Louis; Inland Manufacturing, Clark, N. J., and Cadillac, excluding the Allison engine division, Detroit, already had authorized international union officers to call a strike.

Negotiations on renewal of the union contract with General Motors were under way today, with Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey continuing as mediator.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. has demanded union shop recognition, a 10-cent hourly wage increase, enlarged powers for the labor umpire and approval of a shop steward system.

Pittsburgh, April 22 (AP).—The Aluminum Co. of America today announced a general wage increase, amounting to 8 cents an hour for most of its 40,000 hourly rate employes in 18 plants.

The increase, designed to bring wage boosts granted since October 1, 1939, to a total of 10 cents an hour, will be 8 cents an hour except in three plants. In those plants, at East St. Louis, Ill.; Garwood, N. J., and Mobile, Ala., smaller wage adjustments will be made to attain the 10-cent total.

The company also said that pay of salaried plant employes would be boosted, but the amount was not announced.

Fireman Injured As 20-Year-Old Truck Is Ditched

A fireman was slightly injured yesterday when a No. 19 Engine Company pumper, built 20 years ago, left the pavement on Minnesota Avenue at Sheriff Road Northeast, skidded along a ditch and struck a fireplug and a stop sign.

Harold E. Grimm, 39, the driver, and Walter P. Whittington were thrown from the engine, and Whittington suffered a wrenched back. They were en route to a brush fire at Fiftieth and Meade Streets Northeast.

Police reported the vehicle's brakes failed, but Whittington said a wheel collapsed. The pumper was being used temporarily by the company while its new pumper was being repaired.

Vinson Bill Modification Appears Likely

By Russell Turner.
United Press Staff Writer

Revision of the Vinson compulsory mediation bill appeared likely last night after President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, had restated his opposition.

The bill would provide a compulsory 25-day "cooling-off" period before strikes could be called in any defense industry, compel dismissal of Communists and bundists, and ban establishment of new closed shop labor agreements. It appeared that the closed shop "freezing" provision might be sidetracked to mollify labor organizations.

Murray telegraphed Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee, that the measure should be sent back to the House Naval Affairs Committee—which approved it last week—for further hearings and extended consideration. He emphasized that the Naval Committee held hearings on the bill only two days before reporting it.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor on Monday sent all members of Congress a letter vigorously opposing the legislation.

Reports circulated last night that Administration leaders were seeking to work out a compromise which would involve Administration support of the cooling-off period provision in return for abandonment by Vinson of the open and closed shop clause.

Speaker Rayburn lent authenticity to the reports when, after a conference with Vinson, he said he expected proponents of the bill would be "practical" and would not let it stand or fall on the closed-shop issue. He added that "when I had bills before the House, I kept my eye on the main tree and didn't spend too much time in the underbrush."

Murray wrote Sabath that the bill should be rejected until all major witnesses have had an opportunity to express their views.

"This bill," he said, "drastically and seriously curtails existing rights of labor and will in my judgment provide a basis for more widespread discontent among working men and women, thereby causing grave repercussions throughout our national defense program."

Despite the unity in opposition of both the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. to the Vinson bill, Green yesterday added fuel to their prolonged and bitter rivalry.

A dispatch from Montgomery, Ala., where he had gone to address the Alabama Federation of Labor, quoted him as charging that "the C. I. O.'s unfriendly attitude toward national defense" was spurring Congress toward enactment of "vicious" anti-labor legislation. He included the Vinson bill in that category.

porations earning less than that amount. The increased corporation taxes would raise another $500,000,000.

Excess profits would be reached for another $400,000,000 by either a reduction of credits from 95 per cent to 75 per cent of average earnings or making the invested capital alternative tax begin after 6 per cent instead of 8 per cent as at present.

A lengthened list of steep excise taxes, including sharp increases in present excises and revival of old and imposition of new ones. Telephone bills, phonographs and records, sporting goods, matches, furs, jewelry, musical instruments, photograph apparatus, clocks, watches, soft drinks and candy would be taxed in addition to many other items previously reported.

Exemption to Drop

The estate tax would begin at $25,000 instead of $40,000, with rates graduated from 4 to 70 per cent instead of 2 to 70 per cent at present. Also the gift tax exemption would be dropped from $40,000 to $25,000, with the rates increased. The amount of insurance exempt from estate tax likewise would be reduced from $40,000 to $25,000.

The poposed surtaxes starting at 11 per cent on the first $2,000 of taxable income contrast with the existing first surtax bracket of 4 per cent on income in excess of $4,000.

Undisturbed would be left the normal 4 per cent income tax, the $2,000 exemption for married persons and the $800 single exemption. In computing the normal tax, the same deductions for dependents, for taxes and charities would be allowed. A salaried individual could still make the same 10 per cent deduction for earned income.

No Earned Income Credit

Over this unchanged existing normal tax structure would be imposed the new surtax. In computing the surtax, the personal exemption could again be deducted, but the earned income credit would not be allowed. The resulting surtax must then be added to the normal tax and this total would be subject to the continued 10 per cent defense tax.

Thus a married person earning $4,000, and with no deductions, would apply the 11 per cent surtax to the $2,000 remaining after his personal exemption, to compute his surtax of $220. Calculating his normal tax, he would deduct his $400 earned income credit and his $2,000 personal exemption from his $4,000 income. The remaining $1,600, taxed at 4 per cent, would add $64 normal to his $220 surtax for a total of $284. To this must be added the 10 per cent defense tax, or $28.40, to make his total tax payment $312.40.

Instead of raising the present 24 per cent tax on corporations earning over $25,000 to 30 per cent, the Treasury reportedly proposed that the added 6 per cent be made a surtax. This was done, it was said, to reach particularly banks and insurance companies receiving large income from Government securities not exempt from the surtax. Staff experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue are said to have made strong objection to this proposal, contending it would break faith with those who purchased the securities as tax exempt.

Excise tax proposals included the following:

A 5 per cent tax on telephone bills to raise $28,600,000.

A passenger transportation tax of 5 per cent of fares to raise $37,600,000.

Lowering of the exemption on admissions from 20 cents to 9 cents to produce $55,000,000.

Ten per cent tax on jewelery, $8,400,000.

Ten per cent tax on retail price of furs, $9,000,000.

Ten per cent tax on clocks and watches, $10,000,000.

Tax of 2 cents per thousand on matches, $7,100,000.

Ten per cent tax on musical instruments, $3,600,000.

Ten per cent tax on sporting goods, $8,500,000.

Ten per cent tax on phonographs and records, $4,500,000.

Two cents a check tax on bank checks, $56,000,000.

Increase in tax on autos and parts from 3½ per cent and 2½ per cent to 7 per cent and 5 per cent, $78,300,000.

Raising tax on tires and tubes from 2½ cents and 4½ cents to 5 cents and 9 cents, $52,500,000.

Raising tax on mechanical refrigerators from 5½ per cent to 10 per cent, $9,800,000.

Increasing tax on radio sets and parts from 5½ per cent to 10 per cent, $6,000,000.

Increasing tax on playing cards from 11 cents to 15 cents, $1,700,000.

Raising tax on safe deposit boxes from 11 per cent to 20 per cent, $1,700,000.

Increase from $3.25 to $4 per 1,000 in tax on cigarettes, $125,200,000.

Doubling rates on cigars and snuff, $75,600,000.

Increasing from $3 a gallon to $4 in tax on liquor, $135,000,000.

A 16 2-3 per cent increase in tax on wines, cordials and liquers, $2,200,000.

Increasing from $6 a barrel to $7 a barrel in tax on beer, $55,000,000.

Increasing from 1½ cents a gallon to 2½ cents a gallon in gasoline tax, $255,000,000.

One cent a bottle tax on soft drinks, $132,000,000.

Five per cent tax on candy and chewing gun, $3,600,000.

Lowering exemptions and new rates on telephone, telegraph and cables, $40,300,000.

Increased tax on trunks, suit cases and other luggage, $5,600,000.

Tax on photographic apperatus, $15,000,000.

Fascists Barred From Union Post

New York, April 22 (AP).—Communist, Nazi and Fascist groups were barred from holding office in the Textile Workers Union of America (C. I. O.) by an amendment to the union's constitution at the organization's second biennial convention today.

The union is bargaining agent for some 300,000 textile workers in about 1,000 plants in 32 States.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 22 (AP).—Gov. Holland today signed into law a measure outlawing from Florida the Communist Party and the German-American Bund.

A maximum penalty of ten years in prison or $10,000 fine is provided in the antisubversive elements law for persons convicted of advocating overthrow by force or violence of constitutional government.

WAR MACHINES

You may go through your entire life without ever seeing a roller bearing. But much of the government's many-billion-dollar program would be stopped in its tracks without them. Timken, the world's largest manufacturer of roller bearings, is therefore vital to America's defense. And Timken is marching in step with all America.

During the past year, millions of dollars have been invested in expansion and new equipment to ready ourselves for the job of supplying builders of airplanes, tanks, ships, guns, trucks, and machine tools with steel and bearings. Even greater expansions to meet America's defense needs are now being made. And there will be still more in 1942 if the nation's defense needs more.

The Timken steel mill supplies tough and hard metal for roller bearings—and for many important armament purposes. It has almost doubled its capacity in the past two years.

And new equipment can digest the coming avalanche of bearing requirements.

Some of Uncle Sam's four-motor bombers need 238 Timken tapered roller bearings. . . . Trailers that carry ammunition, guns, bombs, pontoons, and the cargo of war ride on Timken Roller Bearings. . . . Machine tools—all sorts of lathes, and other metal turning and metal working machines—depend upon Timken bearings for 24-hour trouble-free service. . . . As many as 50 Timken roller bearings protect trucks made for defense purposes from friction breakdowns. . . . Tanks use as many as 28.

And in a hundred other places, from hand-trucks to drydocks and battleships, Timken Roller Bearings guarantee protection from friction.

America Can't Escape War, Publishers Say

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, April 22.—America at war is the dire future predicted for this Nation by a representative cross-section of newspaper editors and publishers gathered in New York tonight for the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The will of the overwhelming majority of Americans is against a shooting war, say these men whose job it is to know what the people of America are thinking. But this Nation's inexorable rendezvous with destiny will lead to war, in the sober, fatalistic opinion of men who see the course of world events aligned against the will of the people.

"I don't think there's any doubt that we'll be in this war actively," said E. C. Hewes, publisher of the Commercial News in Danville, Ill., the heart of the so-called isolationist Midwest. "We'll either be in it over there, or else on this side of the Atlantic, protecting South American countries.

"Hitler has made his boast of world conquest. If he gets Europe, he will not tarry long before he moves in on South America. I believe the American people will go to war, if necessary."

Hewes, who reported his "neck of the woods" overwhelmingly against a shooting war, was typical of the many newspapermen interviewed. Invariably, with the exception of a few Southern editors, they testified that public sentiment is unalterably opposed to a second A. E. F., yet expressed the belief that the course of world affairs is such that war is almost inevitable.

Amon G. Carter, the picturesque editor and publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, declared that:

"This country isn't yet awake to the seriousness of the international situation. No one has made any sacrifices yet. We ought to supply Britain with everything—yes, everything—she needs and pronto. Of course, I believe in convoys. I believe in giving Britain what she needs.

Reed Taft Bayne, executive editor of four Wisconsin and one Louisiana paper, simply said "we're in the war now."

"People in my districts strongly oppose war, and I mean strongly," he continued. "They hope to stay out. But there is a realistic fear that we won't. They want to do everything possible to help the English. The big German population in Wisconsin has made no difference in the will of the people to give all aid to Britain."

McLean Reelected President of A.P.

New York, April 22 (AP).—Robert McLean of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin was reelected president of the Associated Press today at a meeting of the board of directors. It is his third term.

The board also reelected E. Lansing Ray of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat as first vice president, and Stuart H. Perry of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram as second vice president.

Other officers reelected were: Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, secretary; Lloyd Stratton, assistant secretary, and L. F. Curtis, treasurer.

Named to the executive committee were: Paul Bellamy, Cleveland Plain Dealer; E. H. Butler, Buffalo News; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin; Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram; and E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For the first time in 20 years, Noyes missed the annual luncheon given by Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago Tribune publisher, for friends attending the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention. Noyes was unable to leave Washington because of illness in his family.

Rescue League Cites Dogs for Bravery

I. B. Laughlin Left Estate Of $3,462,977

Irwin Boyle Laughlin, former Ambassador to Spain, left his $3,462,977 estate to his wife and daughter.

Mr. Laughlin, whose home was at 1630 Crescent Place Northwest, died here last Friday. His will was admitted to probate by Justice David A. Pine of the District Court.

To his "devoted servitor, Sakae Yoneyama," Mr. Laughlin left $10,000, praising him for "intelligence and uprightness of character" in many years of service.

As a symbol of affection, Mr. Laughlin left $1,000 each to his brother, George McCully Laughlin, Pittsburgh, and to his cousin, Ulysses Grant-Smith, 1222 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Mr. Laughlin left his Washington real estate, valued at $312,977, to his wife for life and after that to his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Louise Isabel Laughlin Chanler, Geneseo, N. Y. Mr. Laughlin also left his widow $20,000 in cash, all his personal belongings and the income on the entire estate for her lifetime. Upon her death the property will go to Mrs. Chanler or her heirs.

Justice Pine appointed the widow, Mrs. Theresa Eleanor Iselin Laughlin, and the Union Trust Co., Pittsburgh, executors and trustees, upon a bond of $75,000.

Mr. Laughlin's daughter, Mrs. Chanler, has two children. Her father provided that if she left no heirs, his estate should be divided equally among the survivors of his four nephews, George McCully Laughlin 3d, Pittsburgh; John Zantinger Speer Laughlin, Sewickly, Pa.; William McKenna Laughlin, New York, and Thomas Irwin Laughlin, Manhasset, L. I.

The petition for probate was presented by Edmund L. Jones, of the law firm of Hogan and Hartson.

Two Shumlin Plays Adjudged Season's Best by New York Critics

By the United Press

New York, April 22.—Herman Shumlin, Broadway producer-director, today made a clean sweep of the New York Drama Critics Circle awards for the 1940-41 season, two of his plays being adjudged the best of the year.

"Watch on the Rhine," which opened recently, was chosen as the best American play of the season, and "The Corn Is Green," which stars Ethel Barrymore, was picked as the best by a foreign author. Shumlin produced and directed both.

"Watch on the Rhine" was written by Lillian Hellman. An anti-Nazi drama, it stars Paul Lukas, Lucile Watson and Mady Christians.

"The Corn Is Green" was written by Emlyn Williams, who was born in Wales and spoke no English until he was 6 years old. It ran for two years in London, closing after the outbreak of the war. The play deals with Welsh miners and the discovery among them of a brilliant youth, whose education Miss Barrymore undertakes. Aside from being a perfect vehicle for Miss Barrymore, it won critical plaudits for a new young actress, Thelma Schnee, in a character role.

Miss Hellman, whose first great success was "The Children's Hour," also wrote "'The Little Foxes,' which Shumlin produced and directed and in which Tallulah Bankhead was starred.

"Watch on the Rhine" was awarded the American prize on the seventh ballot, receiving 12 votes, with William Saroyan's new play, "The Beautiful People," which opened last night, receiving 6 votes, in second place. "Native Son," by Richard Wright, produced by Orson Welles, received one vote and placed third.

Buick SPECIAL 6-passenger Sedanet, $1006. White sidewall tires extra.★

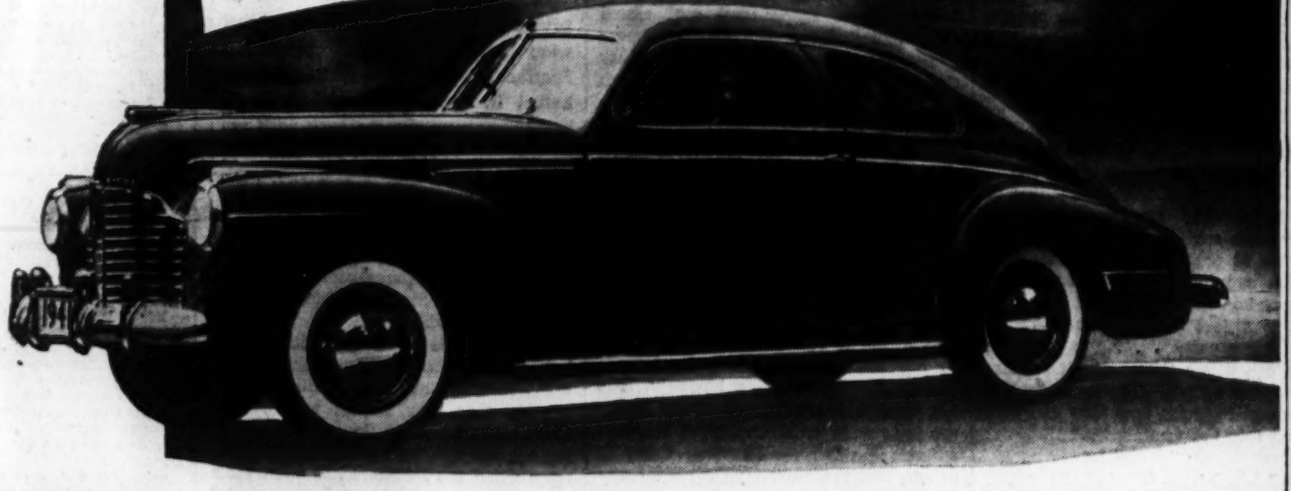
No Clothespin on this Car's Nose!



WOULDN'T a sprinter or a long-distance runner look silly trying to race with a clothespin firmly clamped on his nose!

Yet, in a sense, something fairly close to that happens in nearly every car that lacks Buick's sensational Compound Carburetion.†

For your engine has to breathe in huge quantities of air to be mixed with gasoline before it is burned in the cylinders.

The faster you go, or the more power you call for, the more air your engine needs for smooth, efficient, top-economy operation.

But single-carburetor fuel supply systems handle only a given air volume.

This volume can't be entirely enough for top-range performance or it would be too much for low-range travel, giving a thin, inefficient power-light mixture.

To that extent, then, an ordinary engine has a clothespin on its nose—a limitation on air supply for big power operation.

We remove that clothespin very simply—by having two carburetors; one that handles all casual driving smoothly and efficiently, another to jump in with more air and more fuel when you call for extra power by stepping on the gas treadle!

Simple? Very simple indeed.

And simply marvelous in the extra FIREBALL wallop it gives you and in the gas savings you get—as much as 10% to 15% over previous Buicks with the same-size engines.

Maybe you'd better go see your Buick dealer now.

Painter's Drowning Held Accidental

A certificate of accidental drowning was issued yesterday for John James Dennean, 33-year-old painter, whose body was found in the Anacostia River Friday, by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Mr. Dennean, a selective service registrant of Board No. 17, had left his home Tuesday, several hours before he was scheduled to report for his draft physical examination and apparently had rolled into the water after falling asleep while fishing, the coroner said.

Law Teachers To Confer Here

115th's Antitank Company Ends Week in Field

By the Associated Press

Fort George G .Meade, Md., April 22.—The antitank company of the 115th Infantry, Maryland, has finished a week of extensive maneuvers led by Lieuts. John Keeman and Robert Jackson, and covering a large terrain around Fort Meade.

Two platoons, each lead by a command car, were followed by a troop transport of riflemen and a prime mover containing a gun squad. Communication was maintained by members of the 115th Infantry radio school.

Lieut. Paul K. Candler has assumed acting command of the medical detachment of the 115th Infantry, succeeding Lieut. Mitchell F. Kunkowski, who was relieved from duty because of physical disability.

Two more officers have recently joined the detachment, which originally was from Chestertown, Md. They are Capt. Charles A. Cravotta, Pittsburgh, and Lieut. Millard Jeffrey, of Washington. Capt. Cravotta is from the Medical Corps Reserve and Lieut. Jeffrey has been stationed at the hospital here.

Lieut. Col. Morris T. Warner, of Staunton, Va., executive officer of the 116th Infantry Regiment, today took up duties as instructor in charge at the junior officers' school of the Twentieth Division.

He and Lieut. Col. Harry B. Jordan returned to the 116th Infantry yesterday after spending three months in Battalion Staff Officers' School at Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Jordan, who is from Bedford, Va., is commanding officer of the first battalion of the 116th.

Col. E. W. Opie, commander of the 116th Infantry, has appointed Private Russell S. Hudson and Private Jacob C. Colvin regimental color guards.

Hudson is from Company B, Lynchburg, and Collvin from Company I, Winchester. Private Alton G. Lacy, of Company A, Bedford, has been named supernumerary.

Justice Dept. Employe's Death Called Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an investigation into the fatal shooting of Carmen A. Chirillo, 29, of 2922 Nichols Avenue Southeast.

A Department of Justice employe, Chirillo was found on the floor of his bedroom about 7 a. m. by a friend, Edward J. Boyle. A .22-caliber revolver was on the floor by the body, police said, and Chirillo had a bullet wound in his right temple.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital where he lived for several hours. He died at 11:03 a. m.

Lord Halifax said in part:

"Since the outbreak of war, up to March 1, the total figure of relief made available through your great life saving institution amounted to $26,000,000. Nearly two-thirds f this gigantic sum came directly from Red Cross funds, the remainder being contributed from the unexampled appropriation by the Congress of the United States of no less a sum than $50,000,000 for war relief.

"It has thus been possible to send relief to many countries, including my own. Greece, France, Spain and China have all benefited. And, last, but not least, it has been possible to help prisoners of war of many nationalities.

"As British Ambassador, you will, I know, permit me to speak more particularly of the helping hand which you have stretched out to the people of Great Britain. Your aid to them amounts to something like $13,000,000, of which total nearly half represents supplies produced by devoted workers throughout the thousands of charters of your society in the counties and cities of this great country.

Spirit of Giving

"This latter aspect of your work is one which both I and my countrymen find especially moving. For the picture I have in my mind is something which goes far beyond checks and dollar bills, princely as the money gifts from the United States have been and grateful as we are for them. What I seem to see when I talk of these vast figures, are little groups of men and women all over the United States, sometimes working at home, sometimes in one another's houses, but all inspired with one idea—to relieve the sufferings of those who are quite unknown to them.

"There is no reward for such work, at any rate in the wordly sense of the term; it leads to no glory for the worker. It is hardly possible to thank each—there are so many; and there is neither the time nor the organization to enable us to trace them individually. They are, however, working, I know, with no idea of being thanked. That is why I wish to take this opportunity of paying my tribute to them, on behalf of Their Majesties the King and Queen, of the government and people of Great Britain, as well as of myself.

Going in Volume

"Meanwhile, shipments of relief supplies to Great Britain are going across in large volume, while the substantial grants in cash which have been made to the women's voluntary service in Great Britain have been invaluable in meeting emergency needs which could not be immediately satisfied through the shipment of supplies.

"The building and equipment of that joint venture of faith and love, the American Red Cross and Harvard Hospital, are steadily approaching completion. Everything which wounded or distressed men, women and children can need is finding its way, though with great hazard, across the Atlantic. Food, knitted articles, surgical dressings, clothing, blankets, and all manner of medical, surgical and hospital supplies, as well as ambulances and canteens, are being shipped or have been sent. The indomitable bravery of our seamen does everything that is humanly possible to ensure that they arrive. That is, indeed, a crucial point, for nothing could be more tragic than the thought that the fruit of all this devoted work should be destined to rot at the bottom of the Atlantic."

Jackson's Speech

Attorney General Jackson declared:

"We face not only a drive for power on the part of a new group of men, but a drive to substitute a kind of authority that derives its power from military terror and the fear of the concentration and which does not shrink even from transplanting populations to serve its ends. . . .

"Those who think of the Red Cross mission in terms merely of bandages for torn limbs or antiseptics for wounds, and stretchers and splints and the paraphernalia of pain, see only a part of its opportunity.

"The Red Cross has another and higher mission—to bind up broken spirits and to sustain shattering morale.

"The mission of the Red Cross is not only to supply material comforts, but to keep vital in the minds and hearts of afflicted populations the will to live and to conquer their disasters."

He described the American people as drawing together in a great enterprise which has as its object the preservation of the kind of world in which a Red Cross may flourish."

Must Be Spiritual Force

As a society the Red Cross "must be a great spiritual force, representing the ideals of a civilization," he said. "It does not stop at mamaterial supplies. It lifts up the hearts of people. It is the medicine through which both he that gives and he that receives may be blessed."

The speakers addressed a crowd which overflowed the dining halls and corridors of the Mayflower. Music was furnished by the U. S. Marine Band orchestra.

Earlier yesterday Ernest J. Swift, Red Cross vice chairman in charge of foreign operations, revealed that about $1,000,000 worth of supplies bound for Britain have been lost "due to warfare."

Some went down in British ships lost at sea and others were destroyed in bombed warehouses, he said.

Loss of life in bombed England is less today than in peacetime, delegates to the American Red Cross Convention learned yesterday.

The paradox was explained by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago Chapter of the Red Cross, as due to the fact that "during the past year more English people have been trained in first aid, accident prevention, nutrition, personal and household hygiene, sanitary precautions and health preservation than in any time in England's history.

"By taking automobiles off the highways, by exercising caution in the home and in industry, by improving diet, by safeguarding self and community from the threat of epidemics through sanitation, vaccination and immunization the English are saving more lives than their enemies are able to take," he said.

Forgan spoke at the same session at which James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic relations, announced the society will seek a 50 per cent increase in its roll call membership next fall.

Predicting this year's roll call "will smash quotas," he said growing Red Cross efforts in the field of national defense and aid to war victims abroad necessitates this increase.

He cited an "amazing" response to the society's need for volunteer workers.

"We begin to see that disaster preparation and civil defense are much the same thing," he said. "The fires of Coventry and wrecked buildings in London are part of a huge disaster, with problems of food, shelter, medical care and every other disaster work detail aggravated many fold."

In the afternoon, the convention broke up into half a dozen "working sessions" in which several of the many phases of Red Cross work were discussed.

Morale Program Related.

How the society is helping build the morale of men in the armed services was described at a session on the Military and Naval Welfare Service at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. T. Hershey, deputy director of the Selective Service System, and Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, were the speakers.

Under the direction of Don C. Smith, national director of the Military and Naval Welfare Service, it was pointed out that the Red Cross serves as liaison between enlisted men and their families and in helping in rehabilitation of men and families following periods of enlistment.

Dr. Overholser discussed the welware work carried out by the Red Cross at St. Elizabeths.

The need of cooperation among all branches of the local chapters was stressed at a session on the nursing service presided over by Walter Davidson, assistant manager of the Eastern area.

Other sessions were held on first aid, water safety and accident prevention, the Junior Red Cross, the nutrition service, public information and volunteer special services.

U. S. to Reinforce Bridge Over Boundary Channel

Plans were announced yesterday by the Public Roads Administration for reinforcing the foundation of Boundary Channel Bridge on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway between Highway and Memorial Bridges.

The work will consist of placing two steel struts between the bridge abutments 10.8 feet below the mean low water level. The War Department has been asked to approve the plans insofar as they will affect navigation. Passage of boats will be permitted during construction except for two eight-hour periods when the struts are sunk into position, it was announced.

The bridge spanning Boundary Channel was constructed ten years ago on filled ground. Settling of the abutments has necessitated the reinforcement work, it was explained.

Transport Lands More Than 2,000 Troops in Manila

Manila, April 22 (AP).—Movement to the Philippines of United States Army forces—principally Coast Artillery, Air Corps and Infantry Detachments—was heavily increased today with the arrival of the transport Republic from Fort Mason, Calif.

The transport landed more than 2,000 soldiers. Among them were 1,400 Coast Artillerymen to be stationed at Fort Mills on Corregidor Island, most distant outpost under the American flag.

The troops represented the largest single American force ever landed in the islands.

On its return trip the Republic is scheduled to carry a capacity passenger load, mostly the wives and children of Army officers and men on Philippine duty.

America Can't Escape War, Publishers Say

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, April 22.—America at war is the dire future predicted for this Nation by a representative cross-section of newspaper editors and publishers gathered in New York tonight for the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The will of the overwhelming majority of Americans is against a shooting war, say these men whose job it is to know what the people of America are thinking. But this Nation's inexorable rendezvous with destiny will lead to war, in the sober, fatalistic opinion of men who see the course of world events aligned against the will of the people.

"I don't think there's any doubt that we'll be in this war actively," said E. C. Hewes, publisher of the Commercial News in Danville, Ill., the heart of the so-called isolationist Midwest. "We'll either be in it over there, or else on this side of the Atlantic, protecting South American countries.

"Hitler has made his boast of world conquest. If he gets Europe, he will not tarry long before he moves in on South America. I believe the American people will go to war, if necessary."

Hewes, who reported his "neck of the woods" overwhelmingly against a shooting war, was typical of the many newspapermen interviewed. Invariably, with the exception of a few Southern editors, they testified that public sentiment is unalterably opposed to a second A. E. F., yet expressed the belief that the course of world affairs is such that war is almost inevitable.

Amon G. Carter, the picturesque editor and publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, declared that:

"This country isn't yet awake to the seriousness of the international situation. No one has made any sacrifices yet. We ought to supply Britain with everything—yes, everything—she needs and pronto. Of course, I believe in convoys. I believe in giving Britain what she needs.

Reed Taft Bayne, executive editor of four Wisconsin and one Louisiana paper, simply said "we're in the war now."

"People in my districts strongly oppose war, and I mean strongly," he continued. "They hope to stay out. But there is a realistic fear that we won't. They want to do everything possible to help the English. The big German population in Wisconsin has made no difference in the will of the people to give all aid to Britain."

McLean Reelected President of A.P.

New York, April 22 (AP).—Robert McLean of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin was reelected president of the Associated Press today at a meeting of the board of directors. It is his third term.

The board also reelected E. Lansing Ray of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat as first vice president, and Stuart H. Perry of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram as second vice president.

Other officers reelected were: Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, secretary; Lloyd Stratton, assistant secretary, and L. F. Curtis, treasurer.

Named to the executive committee were: Paul Bellamy, Cleveland Plain Dealer; E. H. Butler, Buffalo News; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin; Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram; and E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For the first time in 20 years, Noyes missed the annual luncheon given by Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago Tribune publisher, for friends attending the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention. Noyes was unable to leave Washington because of illness in his family.

I. B. Laughlin Left Estate Of $3,462,977

Irwin Boyle Laughlin, former Ambassador to Spain, left his $3,462,977 estate to his wife and daughter.

Mr. Laughlin, whose home was at 1630 Crescent Place Northwest, died here last Friday. His will was admitted to probate by Justice David A. Pine of the District Court.

As a symbol of affection, Mr. Laughlin left $1,000 each to his brother, George McCully Laughlin, Pittsburgh, and to his cousin, Ulysses Grant-Smith, 1222 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Mr. Laughlin left his Washington real estate, valued at $312,977, to his wife for life and after that to his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Louise Isabel Laughlin Chanler, Geneseo, N. Y. Mr. Laughlin also left his widow $20,000 in cash, all his personal belongings and the income on the entire estate for her lifetime. Upon her death the property will go to Mrs. Chanler or her heirs.

Justice Pine appointed the widow, Mrs. Theresa Eleanor Iselin Laughlin, and the Union Trust Co., Pittsburgh, executors and trustees, upon a bond of $75,000.

Mr. Laughlin's daughter, Mrs. Chanler, has two children. Her father provided that if she left no heirs, his estate should be divided equally among the survivors of his four nephews, George McCully Laughlin 3d, Pittsburgh; John Zantinger Speer Laughlin, Sewickly, Pa.; William McKenna Laughlin, New York, and Thomas Irwin Laughlin, Manhasset, L. I.

The petition for probate was presented by Edmund L. Jones, of the law firm of Hogan and Hartson.

By the United Press

New York, April 22.—Herman Shumlin, Broadway producer-director, today made a clean sweep of the New York Drama Critics Circle awards for the 1940-41 season, two of his plays being adjudged the best of the year.

"Watch on the Rhine," which opened recently, was chosen as the best American play of the season, and "The Corn Is Green," which stars Ethel Barrymore, was picked as the best by a foreign author. Shumlin produced and directed both.

"Watch on the Rhine" was written by Lillian Hellman. An anti-Nazi drama, it stars Paul Lukas, Lucile Watson and Mady Christians.

"The Corn Is Green" was written by Emlyn Williams, who was born in Wales and spoke no English until he was 6 years old. It ran for two years in London, closing after the outbreak of the war. The play deals with Welsh miners and the discovery among them of a brilliant youth, whose education Miss Barrymore undertakes. Aside from being a perfect vehicle for Miss Barrymore, it won critical plaudits for a new young actress, Thelma Schnee, in a character role.

Miss Hellman, whose first great success was "The Children's Hour," also wrote "The Little Foxes,' which Shumlin produced and directed and in which Tallulah Bankhead was starred.

"Watch on the Rhine" was awarded the American prize on the seventh ballot, receiving 12 votes, with William Saroyan's new play, "The Beautiful People," which opened last night, receiving 6 votes, in second place. "Native Son," by Richard Wright, produced by Orson Welles, received one vote and placed third.

Buick SPECIAL 6-passenger Sedanet, $1006. White sidewall tires extra.★

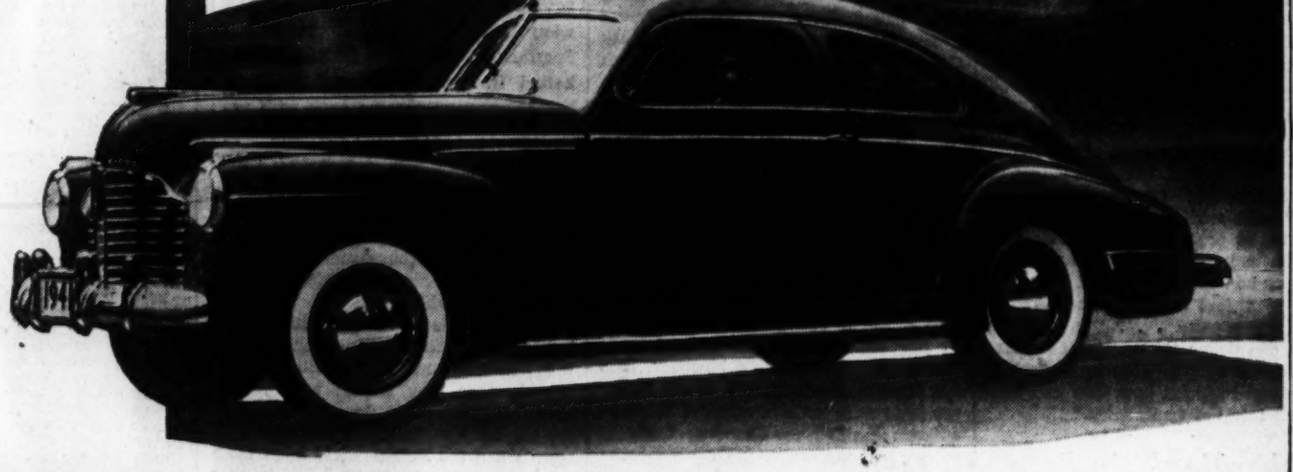
No Clothespin on this Car's Nose!



WOULDN'T a sprinter or a long-distance runner look silly trying to race with a clothespin firmly clamped on his nose!

Yet, in a sense, something fairly close to that happens in nearly every car that lacks Buick's sensational Compound Carburetion.†

For your engine has to breathe in huge quantities of air to be mixed with gasoline before it is burned in the cylinders.

The faster you go, or the more power you call for, the more air your engine needs for smooth, efficient, top-economy operation.

But single-carburetor fuel supply systems handle only a given air volume.

This volume can't be entirely enough for top-range performance or it would be too much for low-range travel, giving a thin, inefficient power-light mixture.

To that extent, then, an ordinary engine has a clothespin on its nose—a limitation on air supply for big power operation.

We remove that clothespin very simply—by having two carburetors; one that handles all casual driving smoothly and efficiently, another to jump in with more air and more fuel when you call for extra power by stepping on the gas treadle!

Simple? Very simple indeed.

And simply marvelous in the extra FIREBALL wallop it gives you and in the gas savings you get—as much as 10% to 15% over previous Buicks with the same-size engines.

Maybe you'd better go see your Buick dealer now.

Cities And Defense

Alexandrians have every reason to be relieved by the cooperation between city officials and the United States Housing Authority in the USHA project which will house Army personnel from Fort Belvoir. For the way in which this matter is being handled is in direct contrast to the treatment of a Navy housing development for workers at the torpedo station. According to Alexandria authorities, the Navy is putting up its 150 one-story, two-family houses in one of the few "Residential A" sections still open for construction of fine homes. Alexandrians say that the streets of the Navy village are far narrower than any permitted under city regulations; that some of the houses, contrary to the customary allowable practice there, do not front on streets; and that there is only one entrance to the settlement, which therefore interferes with the future development of streets.

The need for housing the torpedo-plant workers was established early last fall. The Alexandria Planning Commission apparently was not consulted in the development of the project. City Manager Carl Budwesky says that his first knowledge of it came from newspaper announcements of the contract award and purchase of site in December. He maintains that thereafter he waited in the belief that Navy officials would confer with him. When they did not do so, according to his account, he asked for and obtained a conference at which a Navy representative was present. Then, he says, he found it was too late to change the plans.

The Navy's story is that the project was submitted to the Alexandria City Council and, when no reply was received, a conference was held at which it was decided to go ahead with the plans. But the Mayor of Alexandria, who is also president of the council, has no recollection that the plans were submitted, and the clerk says that he cannot recall the matter and that it does not appear in his minutes. So what really took place will have to remain a mystery to the public at large. But the fact remains that there was a failure to cooperate, and that the City of Alexandria suffered by it. It is to be hoped that the relations between the city government and the USHA will set the style for future defense housing operations in all cities, in accord with the policy of Defense Housing Coordinator C. F. Palmer, who said recently:

"So far as possible . . . the new construction supplied for defense shall be so planned in its location and character as not to distort the permanent growth of the community . . . the planning agency can define the effects of defense projects and may be able to suggest to the Federal agencies how they can best be fitted into the community."

Bombarding Tripoli

At a time of great trial and tribulation in the Balkans, North Africa and the Atlantic the British will find much comfort in the latest exploit of their Mediterranean fleet and its air arm. A week ago a British squadron intercepted an Axis convoy in the Strait of Sicily and annihilated the five supply and transport ships and the three escorting destroyers. Yesterday, at dawn, the fleet bombarded the harbor of Tripoli, capital of Italian Libya and the principal supply base for the German-Italian forces now stretched out clear across Libya into Egypt. The attack, according to London reports, was the longest and heaviest naval bombardment of the war. It is asserted that six transport and supply ships and one enemy destroyer were hit and considerable damage done to harbor works. Furthermore, London claims that four German air transports were shot down by British naval planes.

Bad as is the situation which faces the British in Greece, a far greater threat to their position in the Mediterranean is embodied in the German drive through Libya. Unless that drive is smashed, or at least halted, Alexandria and the Suez Canal will be in danger of falling into German hands. To prevent such a happening the British must bring considerable reinforcements into Egypt, where the Army of the Nile has been reduced to skeleton dimensions because of the necessity of sending men and material to the Balkans. With fighting in East Africa soon about to end, such reinforcements may soon be available. But time is needed to move the troops from East Africa to Egypt, and the action of the British fleet is helping Gen. Wavell gain it.

The German drive east to Suez can succeed only if the supply lines across the Strait of Sicily and across Libya are maintained. Twice in a week, however, these lines have been cut by British naval power. That factor helps explain the relative lack of progress made by Axis forces since the recapture of Bardia and their failure to wipe out the British hold on Tobruk. If Egypt is successfully defended, the loss of Greece, should it occur, as now appears likely, will have only limited advantages to Hitler, despite the enormous cost to him of his venture into the Balkans.

The Vinson Bill

It is a welcome sign of our national common sense that, despite the provocation of the strike situation, the opposition to the Vinson bill has assumed formidable proportions. Organized labor has taken a united stand against the measure, and many Congressmen are skeptical of its provisions. Although Secretary Knox indorsed its general principle, the House Naval Affairs Committee failed to adjust the bill to the voluntary basis suggested by Mr. Knox and many others. As it stands, therefore, it invites opposition from thoughtful students of the strike problem.

Representative Vinson's bill is patterned after the Railway Labor Act. Yet it departs from the theory of that act in such vital particulars as to make the ultimate effect of the two imcomparable. Each provides for what is popularly known as a "cooling off" period. Each prescribes various steps that disputing employers and unions should take before resorting to dismissals or changes in working conditions on one hand or strikes on the other. But the Railway Labor Act gains its force solely from the pressure that may be brought to bear upon the disputing parties by the National Mediation Board and public opinion. The Vinson bill resorts to criminal penalties.

Obviously this is a critical defect. Notice of intent to strike or to change conditions of work which might result in slowing down or stopping defense production would be required. It would be unlawful to strike without giving such notice or without giving Government conciliators and mediators a chance to settle the dispute. And violators of this provision could be imprisoned or fined not more than $5,000. The obligation placed upon employers and employes to settle their differences around the conference table is constructive. But the moral effect of establishing such an obligation is undercut when a penalty is attached to any misstep from the prescribed path of amicable collective bargaining. The spirit of compromise cannot be encouraged by fines and prison terms.

Fortunately, no penalty is attached to that section which outlines a policy of keeping open shops open and closed shops closed during the national emergency. The question here is whether Congress should attempt to write such a delicate policy into legal form. On the ground that no group should take advantage of the emergency to press demands that might curtail defense production, the closed shop issue may well be laid aside for the present. Still there is a question as to whether the national policy on this subject should be left more flexible than a statute can ever be.

The Vinson bill is in need of a careful pruning. It doubtless could be revised into a sound and reasonable approach to the problem of strikes in defense industries. As it stands, however, it is too drastic for enactment. If the House proceeds with consideration of this bill without careful modification, there is danger that the cause which it is intended to serve may suffer an unnecessary setback.

Reprieve In Caroline

All persons of that neighborly sympathy which typifies the best in America will be pleased to learn that the Army has been able to reduce its demands upon Caroline County, Va., for land. But for hundreds of Caroline families, the news is no less than a reprieve from exile. Of the 110,000 acres originally destined to become a maneuvering ground, only 70,000 will be taken for the present at least. The lines have been redrawn to spare as much fertile ground as possible and save various historic estates. Farmers who took the advice of State authorities and went about their planting as usual will now profit by their industry, for many will be able to harvest and those who still must move will be paid by the Government for the lost investment.

Every effort is being made to lighten the burdens of those who must go. Government and local appraisers, under the direction of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, will seek to determine the fair values of the properties to be taken. State and Federal agencies, including the Farm Security Administration and the Federal Land Bank, will take part in the program of resettlement. Farms in the surrounding territory that can be bought, leased or rented are being listed for a central information office in the county, and land owners and agents in nearby areas have been asked to peg prices so as to prevent profiteering at the expense of the exiles. One factor which detracts from the general satisfaction is that the Army may need more space later. Needless to say, everyone near the training ground will live uneasily until the final extent of the seizure is known. Although some experience in operation may be necessary to show how much additional land is required, no effort should be spared to hasten the day of certainty.

Staggered Paydays

The District Leader, which covers Southeast Washington twice a month, has started a commendable campaign to stagger Government paydays. At present practically all Federal workers here are paid on the 15th and 30th of each month. The result is that on these days, when something more than 150,000 persons are flush, there is maximum congestion in the city's life. At the postoffice windows there is much queueing up to send money orders home; other long lines appear at the banks; and still others have to wait interminably at gas, electric and department store offices. Traffic, consequently, is congested, buses and streetcars are jammed, and clerks and waiters are hard put to it to serve all the customers.

The Leader's idea is to pay half the Government agencies on the 15th and 30th, and the other half on the 7th and 22d—this would keep one-half the payees off the other half's toes, not to mention the toes of the District's remaining 500,000 inhabitants. The Comptroller General will have to determine the view of the General Accounting Office. But to the layman it seems that making up the pay rolls for 150,000 persons ought to be just as easy or easier if the work is spread. Of course, in accomplishing the switch, there would be the matter of a one-week pay roll one week early for one-half the employes. After that everything should be smooth sailing. And also, after that, perhaps a man with money in his pocket could find a place to sit down and buy food on the 15th and 30th of the month.

Thermopylae

The army of the Great King which advanced from Thessaly toward the mountain pass of Thermopylae numbered, says Herodotus, more than 2,000,000. The figure is doubtless an exaggeration, but certainly, relative to the time and conditions, the force which Xerxes and his generals hurled against the pass could hardly have been much less formidable than the war machine which Herr Hitler and his marshals are hurling against it now. In the course of 24 centuries this pass has widened to about 3 miles, but it was then no wider than a carriage road."

Behind the pass to halt the [Persian] advance and to block the road to Athens were Leonidas and his handful of Spartans, Boeotians and Arcadians. They halted it, too. Again and again the barbarians were thrown back with such slaughter that, it is said, the Great King became fearful for his whole army. When at last the Persians succeeded in crossing the mountains it was by another little-known pass revealed to the Great King by a treacherous Greek. This pass, of course, was not unguarded, but the Phocians to whom the duty was entrusted were deceived into withdrawing by a ruse of the Persians. Learning of this, Leonidas sent away his allies, "being anxious that they should not perish." Then he and his 300 Spartans prepared for annihilation. And annihilated they were when the Persians fell upon them from the rear. Nevertheless, theirs was the victory, for at Athens time had been gained by Themistocles to organize the evacuation of the city and to prepare for what was to be the great naval victory of Salamis. Such is the story of the most celebrated defensive operation in all history.

Today, 2,420 years after Leonidas, a tiny, battle-weary band of Greeks, Britons and British Imperial troops is attempting to hold the pass of Thermopylae in a last-ditch stand against a vast and formidable war machine. And again the civilized world waits the outcome with suspended breath. Again delay may avert disaster. Every day, indeed, every hour, that the defenders of Thermopylae delay the barbarian advance serves the civilization of which we, as well as they, are part.

HYMN TO MORNING

This is the golden hour,
The shining tide;
This is the budding flower
Opening wide;

God of the Day, beware!
Apply thy touch,
Keep pure the virgin air,
Attend thy watch;

Let not the morn be done
Before the noon,
Nor the bright waning sun
Go down too soon.

Full Mobilization

Democracy has failed because freedom was interpreted as license to seek comfort and self-advancement in the way one pleased. We did not learn that individual liberty must be paid for daily by self-discipline and frequent sacrifice. Democratic leadership failed because officeholders would not take a new step until sure that the majority would approve of it. Politically minded leaders actually follow the ill-informed public.

The prime example of the lazy stupidity of the ill-informed public was the selection of a small group of 2,000,000 young men to bear the sacrifice the whole Nation should have shared. The conscription act, without a parallel mobilization of industry to provide them with arms, was a crime in which the fathers and mothers of these boys are shamefully complacent.

Fifty million adult workers approved conscription under the illusion that 2,000,000 boys deprived of their chances for education or careers could protect them and their opportunity to do business as usual. These youngsters cannot defend America. Nothing but war machinery more effective and more plentiful than Hitler's can defend it. As the parent of a son of draft age I ask other parents to join in the following demand upon Congress:

(a) Proclaim a total mobilization before May 15, for the rapid equipment of the draftees or

(b) Return the drafted Army to its homes.

I am afraid you will agree, as do other perceptive minds, that it is not in the present character of this country to take the uncomfortable step to mobilization. This means, sadly enough, that it has decided to accept Hitler's program if he destroys England. A nation that let the last 12 months slip by, when a marvelous press service informed it daily of the progress of German and Japanese plans, can have no possible thought except to make the best possible bargain for the continuation of its personal comfort.

The draftees now imperil the country as well as their own lives. Because some pills have been drawn from glass bowls we think we have an Army, and our politicians have wooden swords. Our true defense is bottled up in strike-bound mines and factories in muddled plans, and is poured away in steady streams of chromium-plated pleasure cars.

Conformists All

Permit me to thank you for publishing in Sunday's Post Carl Sandburg's comments "About the Strange Suicide of Virginia Woolf," and to thank Mr. Sandburg for expressing these thoughts.

He who deviates from the pattern of the times either mentally, temporally or spiritually is in dire need of defense. We talk about individualism but just try to practice it. It will soon be hinted that you are completely out of your mind and ought to be in an institution. Practice individualism and be pounced upon and what is left of you will not be worth burying.

We talk about self-expression, but if you wish popularity or even tolerance, do not practice it. The tribe is still fearful of the ones who deviate from the mode of the day and unless you wish to be ridiculed or worse you had better conform.

It seems to me that we prate more and more about self-expression and individualism, and that we are, in reality, becoming more standardized each day. Make no mistake! It is impossible to be outwardly standardized and inwardly flexible. "A man cannot serve two masters."

The Importance Of National Representation For D. C.

Permit me to comment on your excellent editorial in Saturday's Post under the title "Power Over D. C."

Your conclusion is that there should be retained in the constitutional amendment proposed by the pending Capper-Sumners resolution the provision expressly granting to Congress the power "to delegate to such government as Congress may establish" in the District "all or any of its power over" the District.

That conclusion and the reasoning that led you to it accord with the views of those of us who have been advocating the passage of this resolution without change.

In the course of your editorial you make a concession which may be literally true but may be understood as implying more than you say and more than is true. You say:

"Congress did set up a District legislature here in 1871. It does not appear that this system was questioned during the three years that it was in operation."

It is true that it was not until 1879 that the first and only appellate case deciding the direct question of the 1871 District legislature to enact laws as distinguished from municipal regulations got to what was then our local highest court. The general term of the Supreme Court of the District then held that the attempt by Congress to delegate its power to make laws for the District to the District legislature was unconstitutional and void. The case was Roach vs. Van Riswich, 11 D. C. (MacArthur & Mackey) 171, and was argued on both sides by leaders of the local bar. The opinion was delivered for the Court by Mr. Justice Walter S. Cox, and was long and learned, but exceedingly well reasoned, and merits study today. It includes the following:

"There has been an instinctive reluctance, on the part of bench and bar, to recognize the legislation of the late government of the District as valid, so far as it transcended the limits of strictly municipal action."

All the considerations which have been recently talked about, including comparison with Congressional power to set up legislatures in Territories, are ably discussed in the opinion. The Court remarks, as your editorial implies:

"It will at once suggest itself, that it is difficult to draw the line between powers that are strictly municipal, and may rightly be conferred on local corporations, and those which are properly legislative and cannot be delegated. But this difficulty does not disprove the existence of such a dividing line."

The question and the principle involved did not become unimportant when the present form of Commissioner-administered government was adopted, as could be demonstrated by a review of the decisions down to very recent ones, if the reasonable limits of length to such a letter as this did not forbid. The provision in the pending amendment would eliminate question as to the validity of border-line regulations of the present Commissioners, which might be attacked as invading the field of legislation even though authorized by Congress.

There is, however, need for careful consideration of Chairman Sumners' admonition that if he were in charge of the proposal on behalf of Washington citizens, he would take the clause out to better the chances for adoption of the amendment. His view that the clause is unnecessary, and that the decisions to the contrary would now be overruled, is entitled to respect.

I have for a long time been identified with the Citizens Joint Committee for National Representation for the District of Columbia. I have represented that committee before Congressional committees. Inasmuch as some supporters of that committee believe in so-called "local" suffrage, which means a locally elected local government, and some do not, those of us who speak publicly for the committee are careful to emphasize that we are united on only one thing, and that is that we want, and believe the people of the District are entitled to, representation in Congress and in the electoral college (to elect the President and Vice President) according to our census population.

In this letter I am not speaking for the citizens' committee.

Personally, I firmly believe it is more important to us to get a voting representation in Congress, the ultimate authority in District affairs, than it is to elect any local officials who would necessarily be subordinate to Congress. To get that representation in Congress in the near future by the adoption of the pending proposal, I personally would be willing to eliminate the provision which Chairman Sumners says would impede the adoption of the amendment.

Whether the Citizens Joint Committee would or should consent I have not yet a firm opinion, but there is, as your editorial points out, a serious question of strategy and practical political wisdom involved, and Chairman Sumners' ability and desire to give us good advice along this line are beyond question.

Primarily, it seems to me, it is for those organizations which desire and consider most important the so-called "local" suffrage to say how important this provision in the amendment is to them. I am not directly affiliated with any such organization, but they have supported also the national representation for which I am working, and I do not want to be too quick to give up something that may be important to those with whom I have worked.

Many "local" suffrage advocates have, however, publicly proclaimed that they need no amendment to the Constitution—that their proposals can be put into effect by simple legislation. They may have in mind municipal powers only for a local government. If this is the authentic position of the "local" suffrage group, then it would seem that no person of my own view, who is advocating national representation as the important goal, need hesitate to agree that the provision in question go out of the pending proposal if that will aid its passage.

I personally am clear about this: I do not want the project for representation in Congress and in the electoral college to fail or be in peril because of objections to what is rightly or wrongly considered a "local" suffrage clause in the same proposed amendment. I would rather separate the proposals.

The question, in my opinion, needs discussion. Thanks again for your editorial, which should provoke discussion.

Caskaskie Frenchies

Two recent books, "For Us the Living," by Bruce Lancaster, and "River Out of Eden," by Shirley Seifert, speak of the Illinois country as it was a hundred years ago, or 150 years ago. In both books that country of the lead mines is looked upon as a sort of earthly paradise by those who are striving toward it up the river, through the wilderness. Not many people know, perhaps, that a bit of that French settlement near the great rivers still survives, in the Parish of Sainte Genevieve in Missouri, and that "Caskaskie Frenchies" still inhabit it.

The parish is an odd mixture of Louisiana and Canadian French. Many of the Canadians who came down to the Illinois-Missouri country came in search of gold and silver, but remained to found a trading post for lead at a point where shipping was easy. In that one parish the customs and the mother tongue are still French—after 200 years.

Colonization had begun, probably, as early as 1723; in 1777 it was still going on, for the lieutenant governor wrote in that year to the governor general: "I will employ all the means in my power to attract French-Canadian families." The territorial government lasted until 1812. By this time many of the settlers had adopted American speech and customs. In the peasant communities to the west, however, national traits were so strongly emphasized by exile that they have kept alive a little bit of old France even in Missouri.

With the aid of the parish priests and the people themselves, Mr. Ward Allison Dorrance, of the University of Missouri, made a careful investigation recently into the historical and social background of the inhabitants of Sainte Genevieve, studying their language, their daily life, their amusements, even their folk tales and songs. The results of his studies he has incorporated in a rather fat pamphlet for University of Missouri studies.

Father Van Tourenhout, a Belgian Creole born in St. Louis, was of great assistance to Mr. Dorrance in gathering his material. He, too, is old now, but he continues to make long journeys to hear confessions in French; he encourages the celebration of traditional feats, and, unlike most modern priests, he wears his cassock and biretta on the street, going about among his flock like another Father Felicien in the Grand Pre of Evangeline. Often he may be seen talking with a peasant woman in a blue kerchief beside the convent gate. That gray arch and its wall are older than the Louisiana Purchase. Besides these, there are 30 or more of the old houses still preserved, among them that of the popular and easy-going commandant, Francois Valle.

Mr. Dorrance describes very charmingly the life of these settlers of the eighteenth century and the villages where they gathered in order that they might not miss the wine, the dancing and the festive gatherings to which they had always been accustomed. "Paring potatoes between the geranium pots of their kitchen windows, village women could nod to the passing cure as if they were yet in France. The village had neither streets nor shops; its houses were farmhouses set in large grounds, with orchards and gardens and fields. The architecture was that of the Santo Domingo dwelling, popular in Louisiana and imported into Missouri. Stairs, if any, were added on the outside. Furniture was simple—tables, beds, chairs, cabinets, the prie-deu below the crucifix."

The people seem to have had an easy-going life. In the spring there was a little work mixed with a good deal of frolic. The villagers and their slaves rode out in their bouncing charettes to the sowing. Once sown, the fields were left until harvest, while the people busied themselves with salt-mining, lead-mining, boating, trapping. Many of the old receipts still exist: "paid in pelts," "paid in salt," "paid in lead."

Although it has been a long time since the people of this section had any contact with France, there are whole communities where people speak and live like the French peasants of the eighteenth century. In the Parish of Sainte Genevieve there is a hamlet called Old Mines, with Santo Domingo houses with low roofs and whitewashed "galleries." There are still, as of old, crosses on the gates and ridges of the houses, and holy figures in niches and grottoes. There are still, as of old, church processions to drive back the waters when the Mississippi is in flood.

Life goes on here much as it used to do, with taletellings in the evenings on the long "galleries," with songs and gatherings for wine and cards and dominoes. "As for the rest, the Creole drives for a few provisions to Potosi, which he still calls the Mine a Breton. On Sundays he goes to mass at St. Joachim's, walking with a group of friends or driving a wagon crowded with his formidably numerous family—the lot of them chattering their thorny and twisted patois . . . In the evening word will have gone round that a ball is to be given at a certain house, although the owner of the house may remain in ignorance of the event until he hears fiddles and guitars down the moonlit road. Or it may be a party for cards and singing." Sometimes an old woman sings a song of shepherds and their loves, in a voice like the tinkle of an ancient music book, filling the whitewashed room with visions of the court in seventeenth-century France.

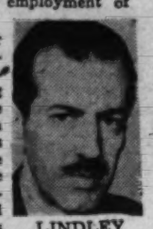
Negroes In Defense

By Ernest K. Lindley.

Discrimination In All-Out Effort

SIDNEY HILLMAN brought into the open last week one of the most ticklish problems in defense production: the employment of Negroes.



LINDLEY

The all-over fact is that relatively few Negroes are getting jobs in defense industries. In some localities employers are importing white workers—intensifying housing and health problems and adding to the postwar problem of population readjustment — while able-bodied Negroes already on hand are left on WPA and relief. A certain number of Negroes who have had training or experience in skilled work are idle, and the employment experts of the Government say that a higher percentage who could be trained quickly are being kept out while time is devoted to training less promising white material.

So Hillman is urging employers to take on Negro workers, especially those in their own localities. In some respects the Negro seems to be getting less of a break in the North than in the South; and, in the South, less of a break from Northern employers than from Southerners. Excepting Ford, all the major automobile plants exclude Negroes from skilled assembly-line jobs; and the same rigid line is drawn by many other Northern industries. It is held in the rapidly growing aircraft industry—except for a small breach just made in one California plant.

IN NORTHERN industrial centers Negroes are admitted to the special training courses for prospective defense workers. At first many Negroes eagerly sought this training. Then they found, in many cases, that they could not get jobs. So in most lines the number of new applicants is falling.

In the South, few training courses in skilled lines have been set up for Negroes. This is not surprising, in view of the perennial labor surplus in many parts of the South, the dual educational system, and the shortage of equipment for training in Negro schools. Moreover, the bulk of defense orders has gone to the Northeast, the Central States and the Pacific Coast.

The Negro has an old history as an artisan in the South. Even in more recent times he has found a place in industrial work in many localities. Negro leaders complain that Negroes get lower pay than white workers for skilled work; craft union policy generally has kept Negroes in the status of helpers. Nevertheless, in shipbuilding, construction work and many other lines, Negroes are employed in skilled and semiskilled capacities.

OPM LABOR-SUPPLY experts say that on the employer side, one of the chief obstacles in the South is the reluctance of managers from the North to touch the race question in any way. They are afraid that if they get into it they will do something which violates local custom and bring all kinds of trouble on their heads. Therefore they often make it a rule not to employ Negroes at all in production jobs. Southern employers, knowing what custom sanctions and what it does not—and being Southern—are said to be more flexible.

When labor is scarce the Negroes usually get a chance. During World War I they won a permanent foothold in a few industries in the North, notably the packing industry. This time Negro leaders are driving with special vigor to capture a place in aircraft production. This is the most rapidly expanding of all industries and by late 1942 or early 1943 it will employ at least as many men as the automobile industry.

HERE NEGROES have run into established policies of exclusion. Among the companies adhering to this policy is the North American Aviation Co., a subsidiary of General Motors. To complicate matters, the new assembly plants for bombers in the Middle West and South are built with Government money, although they are being operated by the established aircraft companies. Negro leaders and their supporters are especially hot under the collar over the announcement of an official of North American Aviation that Negroes would not be employed, except for custodial duties, in a new Government-built assembly plant. Representations were made to William S. Knudsen by labor-supply people in OPM, and it was reported that he would join Hillman in the appeal to employers to find places for Negroes. He did not do so, however.

The only breach in the color line of the aircraft industry occurred recently in California, where one company, faced with an acute white-labor shortage, set up a Negro unit.

Labor-supply experts say that in many localities the pick of the unemployed, for industrial purposes, are to be found among Negroes. Many of them have decided aptitudes for handling machinery and tools. The better white workers with similar aptitudes have long since been employed, and a percentage of them have advanced to engineering, managerial and other important jobs. One expert cites an earlier experence of an important Southern company making iron products. It found that it could train a selected group of Negroes in less than half the time it took to train white labor seeking the same kind of work.

RECENTLY, in another Southern locality, contractors were arranging to import large numbers of carpenters and other skilled construction workers from the North. Government officials pointed out that experienced Negro workers were available locally. Civic leaders in the locality promptly and energetically protested against the importation of unneeded outside labor. The local Negroes were employed instead, with benefits all around.

The defense boom and sharpening labor shortage in many sections presents an opportunity which leaders of the Negro race understandingly are quick to seize. As a matter of justice and policy the Government is obligated to make some provision for Negroes on projects built with Government money. As a matter of defense, it is important that the labor resources of the Nation be used in the most effective way. Despite the difficulties involved, there must be some way—or many ways—of getting the maximum value for the Nation from the more capable of the Negro unemployed.

A Change In Policy

By Mark Sullivan

Our Responsibility

WHETHER the United States should participate in this war was debated as soon as the war began. The decision—at that time—was that we should not participate, that we should remain rigorously neutral.

The war began on September 1, 1939. Soon thereafter President Roosevelt called a special session of Congress, to act about neutrality. To Congress President Roosevelt proposed neutrality legislation of exceptional rigidity. The special session sat some six weeks. It debated neutrality, thoroughly. It passed a neutrality law; the President signed it, November 4, 1939.

That was the most rigid neutrality law ever adopted by the United States, probably by any nation. In order to avoid danger of involvement, we put extraordinary prohibitions upon our own people. We made it a crime for an American citizen to loan money to a nation at war, a crime to extend credit to a nation at war. In order to avoid involvement, the neutrality law surrendered immemorial rights we possessed under international law. It went so far as to forbid our ships and citizens to enter any waters within hundreds of miles of the fighting nations. That was a voluntary sacrifice so extreme that, in the past, when it was proposed during the great war, Woodrow Wilson described it as a "national humiliation," which "national honor" would not permit.

THE NEUTRALITY law of 1939 was our official position about the war—proposed by the President, passed by Congress, signed by the President. This official stand was borne out later by unofficial or semiofficial declarations—particularly by the two party platforms of 1940, and the utterances of the two Presidential candidates. The two were in the main to the same effect—the Democratic one the more important because the Democrats were the party in power, the Democratic President was a candidate for reelection and he was subsequently elected.

The Democratic platform said: "We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack."

This declaration of the Democratic platform was indorsed by Mr. Roosevelt; again and again he repeated the exact words of it, making the words his own, adding to the force of them the emphasis of his own tone of voice and oratorical manner. And in words of his own choosing, even stronger than those of the platform, he repeated and stressed the position of the Administration, and our Government, as one which would not participate in foreign wars.

About these declarations of policy, statutory in one case and formal in all, there is a common quality. They are addressed to our own people. So far as they are a compact, they are a compact between the American people, and the American Government and President in office. Departing from them, if we choose to do it, is a thing for decision within the boundaries of the United States. It is solely a domestic matter.

THERE CAME a time, however, when statements were made which were addressed to a different audience—statements directed to foreign peoples, or meant to be heard by foreign peoples, or from which foreign peoples received an impression. In many addresses Mr. Roosevelt used words meant to encourage foreign peoples, victims or potential victims of Nazi aggression, to resist. On January 6 last he said: "Freedom means the supremacy of human rights everywhere; our support goes to those who struggle to gain those rights or keep them." On March 15 he said: "Our country is going to play its full part," and used the phrase "until our victory is won." On April 6 our State Department said specifically and publicly, "This Government, with its policy of helping those who are defending themselves against would-be aggressors, is now as speedily as possible to send military and other supplies to Yugoslavia."

In the same spirit of those utterances, we took concrete steps, actions meant to implement the utterances. We enacted, by an overwhelming vote in both Houses of Congress, the lease-lend bill. (The lease-lend bill, incidentally, was in effect a partial repeal of our neutrality law.)

AS A RESULT of our utterances to foreign peoples, and the lease-lend bill, foreign peoples have received an impression. The nature of the impression they have got is eloquently and poignantly expressed by Greece's new premier. In a radio address to his people, in their time of tragedy, he said:

"Greece will remain faithful to her commitments and she is grateful to her great ally, Britain, who came here on her own initiative to fight. Behind us we also have the assistance of the United States, from whose great humanitarian principles mankind will benefit. With such allies we may be sure that right and justice will prevail."

Here is a situation which the United States cannot omit from consideration. It may be that the impression in the minds of the Greek people, and the other peoples attacked or menaced by Hitler, is more than we meant them to understand from our words and actions. It may be their impression is composed in part of their own hopes—it often happens so. But the measure of the responsibility in which we have become involved, the measure by which those peoples and the whole world will judge us, will be based, not upon narrow legalistic interpretation of our words and actions, but upon the impression that arose in their minds.

This is a factor which will enter into our reputation as a nation for generations to come.

Economic Half-Measures

EVERY INFORMED person here agrees that the result may be tragedy abroad if the all-out American war effort is put off much longer. A few of the more farsighted Government officials are also beginning to realize that a secondary result will be tragedy at home. For it will be impossible to control the economic effects of the defense program, so long as the country continues on a business-as-usual basis, and until the real all-out effort starts, the transition from business as usual to a state of emergency can hardly be made.

ALSOP

In certain offices at the Treasury, among both businessmen and economists at the Office of Production Management, and almost everywhere else in Washington where men know the true facts, you hear the same desperately worried murmuring. In two years the national income is to be increased by $30,000,000,000. In two years $40,400,000,000 is to be poured into the national economy by the Government. In two years the entire visible labor supply is to be exhausted, and an acurate labor shortage is to be created. Without the most stringent controls, such overwhelming stimuli as these can produce only one reaction—complete economic chaos.

A STRIKING SYMPTOM of the growing concern for the economic future is the informal negotiation now in progress between certain Government leaders and executives of the automobile companies. The Government men are asking the motor companies to cut the term of their installment buying contracts from the usual 18 to 20 months down to a maximum of a year. It is thought that if the motor and finance companies agree, this will have the effect of reducing total automobile purchases. And this, in turn, will tend to ease the automobile business's competition with the defense program for raw materials and semi-finished products, and will also have an anti-inflationary effect.

The negotiation, which is still only in the sounding-out stage, is part of a broad plan that is to apply to all the other so-called "consumers' durable goods industries"—such as the refrigerator industry, the washing machine industry, and so on. The plan will, of course, meet with the bitterest sort of opposition from the finance companies. Labor groups are likely to be aroused. The general buying public itself is hardly likely to understand such an indirect attack on its buying power. In short, while the plan may be a step in the right direction, it has all the usual defects of half measures.

SOME OTHER half-measures are also being taken. The improvised system of price control put in force by Leon Henderson's Price Administration is one of these half-measures. Another is the Treasury scheme to divert national income from consumption-spending to saving, by a big drive to sell new defense bonds and stamps, now set to start on May 1. Moreover, there is the Treasury tax program, which cannot be classed as a mere half-measure. By raising revenues all along the line, it is calculated to produce $3,500,000,000 in revenue. The test of its honesty of purpose is the fact that heavy taxes are to be imposed on the lower income groups which have the largest mass buying power, yet which have always escaped almost scot-free from the annual tax revisions.

The President himself has largely accepted the theories of war-time economics propounded by the British economist, John Maynard Keynes. The Keynesian plan is to finance the war and prevent consumer competition with defense by restricting consumer opportunities and forcing savings. Taking an imaginary case, this means that a munitions worker with 5 pounds a week cannot spend more than 3 pounds on consumers' goods, and must pay over the rest to the government, to finance the war, either in taxes or in the form of investment in war-savings. The plan has been adopted by the British government, and has worked very well to date. It has many natural friends here, since Keynes is also the author of the celebrated New Deal spending theory of peacetime economics. And if it has been largely accepted by the President, it has been swallowed whole by most other men in Washington, both business leaders and New Dealers.

IF YOU LAY the half-measures thus far embarked on against the Keynesian plan, their utter inadequacy is immediately revealed. It is frankly and gloomily admitted, indeed, by virtually every competent authority in the Government, while business leaders, such as Bernard M. Baruch, beat the Government men to the post in pointing out the dangers inherent in the present situation.

KINTNER

The essential difficulties to be overcome before the situation can be dealt with are the same difficulties that stand in the way of a proper war effort in all other fields of activity. The Government is disorganized, and instead of a unified, coherent approach to the problem, the country gets the results of the incoherent clamor of half a dozen differing advisers at the President's ear. The country is on a business as usual basis, and therefore the drastic steps required if the economic problem is squarely faced cannot be taken for political reasons. The war efforts is not all-out, and therefore only the handful of men in daily contact with the facts can avoid the sin of wishful thinking. The disagreeable thing is not done because, though vitally necessary, it is disagreeable. As was remarked at the start, all these difficulties will be removed if an all-out war effort is made.

Call For More Eggs

(Washington—C. R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, has announced a Nation-wide drive to produce more eggs as part of the aid to England and defense plan. He sets the goal at 300,000,000 extra dozen eggs for the next 15 months."—News item.)

Come on, hen!
Say when!

Don't be a cluck!
Don't pass the buck!

Hey!
Lay!
Today!

Across the country goes the call—
The barnyards hear it, one and all;
The message sweeps from east to west,
"No longer, then, your second best!"

A buzzer busses and it's done . . .
A paper's signed in Washington . .
Stenographers rush here and there—
There's action in the very air;
Officials leap to telephones—
The orders ring in solemn tones—
The message flows from silver pens:
A Proclamation to The Hens.
In headlines big the news is played:
"ALL POULTRY CALLED FOR ALL-OUT AID."

The wires 'cross the nation sing,
An ultimatum's on the wing
By horseback and by auto, too,
By radio and by canoe,
By every telegraphic loop
To every hennery and coop,
"Come, hen, your country calls to you—
One egg is not enough! Give two!"

The message whistles through the trees
To startle birds and busy bees;
It leaps across from farm to farm
And spreads a "Hen" Revere alarm . . .
"Awake! Get up! The going's tough!
"Get up there, hen, and do your stuff!"

The chicken houses rock and sway
To this one order, "Lay, hen, lay!"
The roosts vibrate to one word "Scram!"
As they're abandoned on the lam;
The nests they seem to snap and creak
As orders reach an all-time peak!

The hens outside now scamper in,
Their faces drawn a little thin;
"We've laid one egg," say three or four;
The others answer "War is war!"
Mayhap one sulks; she hears a "Boo!"
And yell of "You appeaser you!"

Then looms some organizer hen
(From Layers' Union Number 10);
"Arise!"—her cry is loud and clear,
"Demand the right to bargain here!
"Production speed is very nice,
But are we hens or are we mice?"

Then Washington by hens is stormed
And nest-coop picket lines are formed;
Hark! Overhead the transports dive . . .
The mediation boards arrive!

But lest this tale be far too long
The hens are saved; they ain't done wrong;
They sign to do the best they can
But scrap the big production plan.

Then to their nests they quickly scram
And give three cheers for Uncle Sam,
Three lusty cheers (and shake a leg)—
Three cheers, ah yes, but just one egg!

Will Hitler Strike Through Spain?

THE BATTLE for the control of the Mediterranean, reduced to its barest essentials, is a battle between German military might and British sea power. Despite what has been happening in the Balkans and Libya during the last few weeks, the outcome of that struggle remains decidedly in doubt. Germany will not have won the battle even should her troops occupy the whole of the Greek peninsula, as now seems probable that they will. Britain will not have lost it even if she is forced out of Greece with or without another Dunkerque.

NOVER

The problem for Germany is to find a way to nullify British sea power whose effectiveness in the Mediterranean has been demonstrated at Taranto, Genoa, Cape Matapan, the Strait of Sicily and, most recently, in the heavy shelling of the Axis supply base at Tripoli.

So long as the British fleet can retain a foothold in the Mediterranean, the gains achieved by Hitler in the Balkans at a not inconsiderable cost in blood and treasure will have only a limited strategic importance.

THAT EXPLAINS why Hitler is doing everything possible to capitalize on the prestige gains arising out of his successful blitzkrieg in Yugoslavia, the drive into Greece and the thrust of his mechanized forces across Libya into Egypt.

In that connection it is well to contemplate the repeated trips made recently by Franz von Papen, the Nazi Ambassador to Turkey, from Ankara to Berlin and back; the recent coup d'etat at Bagdad which saw the seizure of the government by pro-Axis elements; the renewed pressure on Vichy to restore Pierre Laval to power; and the demands believed to have been made on Gen. Franco that he permit German troops to move across Spain for a land assault on Gibraltar.

In addition, Germany is doing everything possible to send reinforcements to their army in Libya which after a remarkable drive which recaptured all the Libyan territory which the Italians had previously lost to the British, appears to have made little if any progress during the past week.

THE OCCUPATION of Greece, when and if it is completed, will give Germany valuable bases for aerial assaults on the great British naval base at Alexandria and on the Suez Canal. Similar assaults can be launched from the Dodecanese which the British never succeeded in wresting from the Italians and from recaptured Libya. Such attacks may succeed in doing considerable damage. It is extremely unlikely that the Suez can permanently be closed by aerial bombardment alone nor can the British fleet be driven out of the Mediterranean by German air power.

That explains why, concurrent with the German invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece, German forces began their ambitious offensive in Libya. The ultimate results of that offensive remain to be seen. If the British are able to reinforce the Army of the Nile promptly, the German drive on Suez may be beaten off. The fact that Tobruk still holds out and that in the air battles along the Libyan-Egyptian border the R. A. F. gave far better than it received suggests that Hitler may have bitten off more than he can chew when he embarked on his Libyan venture. However, it is far too early to assume anything of the kind.

BUT IF IT cannot for a moment be assumed that Suez is temporarily safe, neither can Hitler take for granted that Suez will fall. And even if Suez should fall and the British fleet be driven out of the Mediterranean, the war would be far from over. For as long as the British lifeline in the Atlantic can be maintained in going fashion, Hitler must reckon on the possibility of American industrial power tipping the scales against him.

No wonder, then, that his agents are putting great pressure on Turkey to make terms with the "new order," on Vichy to "collaborate" and on Spain to accept the role of another Hungary or Bulgaria.

The coup d'etat at Bagdad gave Hitler a temporary advantage. The establishment of a pro-Nazi government in Irak opened the door for a squeeze play against Turkey, already confronted by a large number of Nazi troops on her western flank, and also for the possible seizure of Syria. As it happened, the British moved into Irak before too much damage had been done.

THE PRESSURE on Vichy has also increased. Hitler is holding out tempting bait to Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan. He has offered, it is reported, to reduce the intolerable costs levied on Vichy for the maintenance of the German army of occupation. He will ease the restrictions on traffic between occupied and unoccupied France. He will guarantee the integrity of the French Empire. He will even cede back bits of Alsace and Lorraine to France—all provided Laval is allowed to rejoin the Vichy government. It can be assumed that Darlan is inclined to accept this offer. More and more his views have come to resemble those of Laval, the man he replaced. That Hitler still insists on Laval suggests that Darlan continues to harbor scruples about the use of the French fleet against the British. And with the Italian fleet in shreds and tatters Hitler does need the French fleet. He also needs French Africa, particularly Dakar, for an assault on British shipping lanes in the South Atlantic.

In the west Hitler needs Gibraltar and the Spanish and Portuguese ports on the Atlantic. With Gibraltar in his hands the British navy would have to clear out of the western Mediterranean. Temporarily, it is reported from Madrid, the pressure on Gen. Franco to permit a passageway for German troops has been eased. Spain is starving. A German occupation would make the food situation worse. So Madrid resists. But the Spanish press, listening to the voice of their pro-Axis master, Serrano Suner, is already preparing the harassed people for the worst. Whether American and British pressure on Madrid can offset the pressure from Berlin is anything but certain.

Roosevelt Won't Interfere In Texas, But Suggests A Friend

President Roosevelt yesterday gave his blessing to the candidacy of Representative Lyndon Johnson for a Texas Senatorial toga but worded it so that no one could say that the President of the United States had taken part in a Texas primary.

Johnson, who declared himself yesterday a candidate for the Senate seat of the late Morris Sheppard, is a very old and close friend, the President said—but, naturally, the Chief Executive did not stick a finger in the Lone Star political battle.

Speaking with great care, and obviously enjoying the fun he was having with the English language, Mr. Roosevelt admitted to a crowded press conference that Johnson had told him of his candidacy just a few moments before the Texas Democrat had informed the press.

"Would the White House indorse Johnson," who is a White House intimate and was a troubleshooter for the Democratic campaign committee during the 1940 elections, a reporter asked.

Of course it is up to the State of Texas to elect its own Senator, said the politically aware President.

He could not take part in a Texas primary, he said in apparent seriousness, nor could he take any part in Lyndon Johnson's election.

All the President can say, said Mr. Roosevelt, is that Johnson is an old and very close friend of his.

An outburst of laughter greeted his remarks.

Johnson will run against a field of other candidates, notably Representative Martin Dies, who has been on the outs with the White House at various times over policies of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Gov. O'Daniel also is expected to be a candidate.

National Parley On Food Is Called By President

President Roosevelt has called a national conference on nutrition to meet here May 26, 27 and 28, he told his press conference yesterday.

Pointing out that nutrition was an important part of the defense program, Mr. Roosevelt declared that although the country has an abundance of food, there are many people who are not receiving the right types and amounts needed for full mental and physical vigor.

With "Citizenship Training for Internal Defense" as their central theme, some 1,000 boys and girls are meeting in the New Interior Department Auditorium this week to determine how they can make their organization, the American Junior Red Cross, more effective in the task of preserving democracy.

They have come from nearly every State in the Union, and represent a membership of 9,000,000 in 3,716 chapters.

To talk about democracy they had first to be democratic. So they elected their own officers: Clifford N. Cassidy, 17, of Boston, Mass., chairman; Thomas Hughes, of Peoria, Ill., vice-chairman; and Jean Elizabeth Smith, of Waukegan, Ill., secretary.

Yesterday members took the floor to talk not about vague generalities but about concrete experiences. When they wandered, Chairman Cassidy rapped them back into their train of thought.

Developing responsible citizenship through schools and communities was the general theme of yesterday's afternoon session.

Walter Rheingold, of South Pasadena, Calif., started the ball rolling with a discussion of how the Junior Red Cross in his home town has helped drive dangerous "jaloppies" of the high school boy's variety off the highways.

When Elizabeth Walters, of Newark, N. J., started talking in a similar vein the chairman turned her down because "There isn't time for everybody to talk, and that's been covered."

Cy Rose, of New York City, then received the floor and told about the methods of student court in his high school and how it is penalizing students who break rules of good citizenship.

A hundred hands were waving for the chair's attention when he sat down.

Today the Junior Red Cross delegates will elect ten of their number to serve as an advisory committee to the national chairman of the junior organization.

42-TON TOWING MACHINE, which carries model hulls through Carderock model basin at speeds up to 20 miles per hour, is inspected by reporters. Note hull (arrow). Water in basin reflects structure of towing machine

Reporters Launch Model Hull at Carderock

The champagne and flowers were missing but the Navy and the press participated in a launching yesterday.

The event took place inside the long gray David W. Taylor Model Basin, at Carderock, Md., which was completed in June, 1939, and opened to press for the first time yesterday.

It may be the last time because the Navy doesn't like the idea of too much publicity about this very important development where fighting and merchant ships, and submarines are designed for the expanding fleets. As a rule visitors are barred.

Convoyed by Marines through a white granite administration building of ultramodernistic design, newsmen found themselves in the arched basin building. It is a structure a quarter-mile long whose walls, 2-feet in width, curve over three channels of green-black water.

Straddling one of these channels is a ponderous metal towing machine which propels ship models through the water and includes measuring apparatus so precise its findings are true to within one-20,000 of an inch.

Hitherto, experiments at the basin have been carried on not for purposes of future design but to check the exactness of this measuring machinery.

The towing machine yesterday held a cargo ship of the C-1 type developed by the Maritime Commission. When reporters had climbed aboard the motors started with a roar and the towing machine was launched for a sample run.

Beneath the steel "deck" of the machine the model of the cargo ship was being pulled through the water at a speed of 3 knots, proportionate to the actual 14-knot ocean velocity of the ship on the scale of the model.

As the knife-like prow cut the water, curling wavelets across the basin, the measuring mechanism was inscribing on a chart, "heiroglyphics" from which will be deduced the exact resistance of the hull to the water.

From such information as this, scientists base designs for hulls of the future as well as the specifications for the machinery to drive them through the sea.

Officials said yesterday the basin building, which cost $3,500,000, may be considerably enlarged in the near future. The Navy would like to extend the basin to provide a longer "high speed" channel.

If models of combat ships are to be tested at speeds up to 40 knots a longer stretch of water will be necessary. At present tests are conducted only up to 18 knots. There is a half-mile of land on the reservation adjacent to the basin that could be used for this purpose.

An idea of the preciseness of the measuring machinery can be obtained from these facts: Builders of the basin dug down to bed rock for the foundation of the structure to preclude any possibility of settling. The tracks on which the towing machine runs were laid out so as to follow the curvature of the earth. Had this not been done findings might have been off a fraction of an inch, it was said.

MACHINE GUN used by Germans in World War 1 is inspected by the soldiers

More than 200 soldiers from the Arlington Cantonement, well scrubbed and sporting freshly creased trousers and well-shined Sam Browns, yesterday joined several thousand tourists in absorbing for two hours the culture of centuries at the Smithsonian Institute.

With military precision they marched from 12 Army trucks and eight blitz-buggies to the central building, to the museum of history and to the three other institute buildings. Breaking ranks, they proceeded to take the situation in hand.

Models of prehistoric mammals, ancient races, and rare nature specimens each got a quick once-over. Martial eyes noted exhibits of life in far-away lands, art relics and implements of the past and occasionally gave a casual glance at a pretty visitor.

But the center of attraction was a collection of guns and cannon used in past wars. Dozens of serious-faced soldiers examined curiously a giant machinegun used by the German army in 1917, expertly pointing out defects and peculiarities.

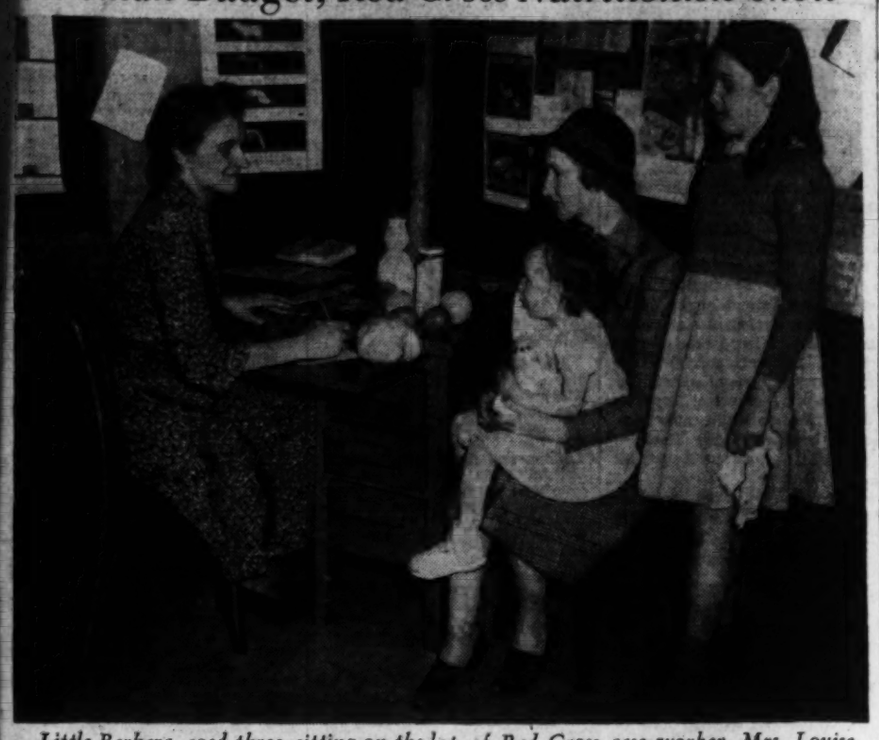
Children May Be Given Balanced, Healthful Diet On Small Budget, Red Cross Nutritionists Show



Little Barbara, aged three, sitting on the lap of Red Cross case worker, Mrs. Louise Varney, came to the headquarters with her sister, Elizabeth, age 10, to be checked physically and given diet specifications by Mrs. Thomas Hoxie, who is one of the consultants in the nutrition division of the American Red Cross.

Less Expensive Meats and Vegetables Contain Needed Vitamins and Minerals, And May Be Prepared Appetizingly

By Martha Ellyn

WHENEVER there is counsel and aid needed the American Red Cross is on the front lines. Inspired by the National Defense Program, which is stressing proper nutrition for all, the Home Service Department, District of Columbia Chapter, has opened an interesting service conducted by volunteer nutritionists. These women devote their time to working out plans with mothers, to enable them to get better food for their children. Mothers may obtain advice about these diets by bringing their children to the Red Cross headquarters.

Mrs. Thomas Hoxie, one of the volunteers, points out that it is not safe to make any hard and fast rules about the cost of a good diet because prices vary from week to week and from store to store. Also, according to Mrs. Hoxie, the difference in returns of money spent for food is determined largely by how much the mother knows about the food needs of her family, as well as food values.

Use Enriched Bread

"Mothers are delighted with the enriched bread which looks and tastes just like white bread, but which contains additional vitamins, thiamin and nocotinic acid and also iron, and important mineral," she said. If children refuse to eat whole wheat bread the enriched bread will solve the problem and should be used."

Another point Mrs. Hoxie emphasizes to mothers of growing children is that mere gain in weight, in and by itself, is not the only indication of good health in a child. Many children who gain steadily may still have bodies that are vitamin and mineral starved. Some of the effects of this starvation, Mrs. Hoxie says, may be seen in deformed and decayed teeth, flabby muscles, anemia, fatigue and poor appetite.

The following simple rules are suggested by this nutritionist for mothers to follow:

Serve ample meals.
Serve well-balanced meals.
Serve food in attractive manner.
Serve an abundance of the protective foods.

As to marketing, Mrs. Hoxie says, "Good buying means looking over the stock at your local grocer's carefully in order to obtain the most for the money. For instance, every day as the seasons change there are certain, green, leafy vegetables which are cheaper than others; and many meat dealers now feature daily specials. Carrots, cabbage, kale and other green leafy vegetables are the least expensive vegetables in the markets, summer and winter, and are the best sources of minerals and vitamins for building strong muscles and a sound nervous system.

Inexpensive Meats

"Good, inexpensive meats are stew meats, chopped meats and pot roasts for they are rich in proteins, minerals and vitamins. Beef, sheep and hog's liver are less expensive than calves' liver. Liver of some sort should be served once a week because of its high iron content and blood-building properties. There are many kinds of inexpensive fish, for instance, cod and haddock, which contains iodine as well as protein."

MINIMUM ADEQUATE DIET FOR THREE-YEAR-OLD

Weekly

Milk, 7 quarts
Potatoes, 1¾ lbs.
Citrus Fruit, 1¾ lbs.
Green or Yellow Leafy Vegetables, 2½ lbs. per week
Dried Fruits, 1 oz.
Other fruits and vegetables, 2½ ozs.
Eggs, 3
Meat or fish, 4 ozs.
Bread and cereal, 1½ lbs.
Sugar or Molasses, 2 oz.
Butter, 3 ozs.

Daily

1 quart milk, ½ may be evaporated
1 small potato
1¼ cup orange juice or 1 cup tomato juice
2 heaping tablespoons green or leafy vegetables
1 small serving dried fruits twice a week
2 or 4 servings other fruits and vegetables a week
Serve 1 egg a day at least 5 days a week, cooked in any way but fried.
1 oz. meat or fish four times a week
2 servings dark cereal, 3 slices of bread
Less than 2 teaspoons sugar or molasses
Less than 1 tablespoon butter

According to Mrs. Hoxie the above furnishes an adequate diet at minimum cost and if there is more money to spend for food, a child of this age would benefit by 2½ pounds more fruit and vegetables, another egg and half again as much meat per week.

Animated Face, Vital Voice Called Chief Beauty Aids

Hollywood, Calif.—A new kind of beauty is more important in the world today than mere beauty of face and figure, declares Ilka Gruning. Miss Gruning is the noted 70-year-old actress, a refugee from Nazi Germany, now playing in "Underground," at Warner Bros.

A "voice with personality" and "self-willed animation" complete 1941's triumvirate of beauty, the actress says. The modern girl simply can't get by with just a pretty face. She must look alive and interested, be animated in body as well as face. And, according to Ilka Gruning, you can think yourself into a sparkling countenance, you can "play a part" just as any actress does. Daily exercise counts for a great deal too.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed to 'Perfect Husband,' With Everything in World She Wants, Bride of 30 Is Increasingly Dominated By Lifelong Neurasthenic Fear of People; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bride of a year, and I am 30 years old. My husband is all that any woman could hope for—a "perfect husband"—and I think I am extremely lucky in having found him. I have everything in this wide world I want, including money. My husband gladly gives me anything and everything I want, and is so eager to do things to make me happy. Yet in spite of all this I am miserable, because of my shortcomings. I am frightened beyond words of people. When I meet anyone I blush furiously, stammer, my voice fails me, and I am overwhelmingly ill at ease.

This has gone on all my life, although I have tried desperately to overcome it, to no avail. I have read books on the subject, studied people generally and otherwise earnestly worked to discover and correct the source of the trouble. But I just can't. When I (or we) are invited anywhere, the days leading up to the appointment become days of anguish. When required to entertain, I am nervous and distraught, an agitated hostess. When I go down town, I tremble at the thought of meeting anyone I know and, in the event I do, I flush and stammer and make the situation uncomfortable for all concerned.

I have purposely avoided people to ward off such embarrassment, and as a result, there is much lifting of eyebrows and people feel I am snubbing them, when in reality that is the last thing I want to do. Quite naturally, I have not made friends, and this is a source of much discomfort to me. Why, just going down in the elevator, in our apartment house, petrifies me,—for fear the elevator will stop to take on a passenger I know, and throw me into my customary embarrassment.

My husband is a fairly prominent man here, and in fairness to him I should entertain and go about with others, as well as with him. He has questiond me several times about my scarcity of girl friends. But I have never discussed the subject with him. I just can't bring myself to it. Apparently he is well liked by men and women and I know I am doing him a great injustice by my performance, but I know of nothing to do about it.

I should like to go places, do things and meet people, but after 30 years of the experience described, I don't want to. We receive a moderate number of invitations, most of which I decline, explaining to my husband that I would rather be alone with him. However, of late, my agitation has reached extreme proportions and from morning until night, my life is hell. I have reached the point where I feel I cannot face it any longer. Everything,—even the smallest chore,—seems a tremendous task, because of my brooding.

After a social encounter and the usual subsequent embarrassment I lapse into silence and feel so badly that, if I were alone, I would burst into tears—to think of the stupidity of it all. My whole life is before me, but unless I can get rid of this phobia, I feel I don't want to go on. I had thought marriage would help me, but instead, it has added to my misery. Now I see a thousand and one things I should do, but I am simply unable to carry on. Had I thought for one instant that my problem would continue persistently, I never would have married.

I feel it is enough to spoil my own life, without ruining the life of the person who is dearest to me. Of course, I knew I couldn't expect to rid myself of this complex in a week or a month, but I felt I could gradually master it. Now I see I was wrong. We all have to face facts, sooner or later, and today I face the fact that I am a total failure,—that I can't whip this nightmare.

Incidentally, I have no physical defects, and because of my grades in school and college I feel that I must have a reasonable amount of intelligence. Can you offer me any helpful advice? If so, I shall be indebted to you all my life. I have read your column for several years and have utmost faith in your counsel. Sincerely,

MADAME X.

Review Past History And Banish Bogeyman

DEAR MADAME X: Your involuntary aversion to meeting people is characteristic of the individual who is burdened by great anxiety. For instance, a person who suffers, say, heavy financial losses, business reverses, the emotional shock of bereavement by death, a sharp disappointment in love, or whatever, immediately inclines to avoid his friends or to withdraw from society generally. The same is true of the person who is afflicted with chronic mental depression, based on anxieties to which he can assign no cause—the seeds of which either escaped his conscious notice at the time they were planted in his subconscious mind, or else were sowed so early in his social experience that they have since receded to the limbo of forgotten shocks.

Anyone who has ever lived through a period of great anxiety—lasting for a week, or a month, or even for years—knows how difficult it is, when thus afflicted, to deal equably with persons and social situations. One must be comparatively free from anxiety in order to treat confidently and competently with one's fellows, in the arenas of work or romance or play. Feelings of security, self-confidence and buoyant self-esteem—the sense that "God's in his heaven and all's right with the world" (and particularly with one's self!)—are essential to a successful social performance. And nobody whose personality is irradiated by such feelings is going to recoil in dread from the prospect of "going places, seeing people and doing things."

Now, here you are, morbidly averse to meeting people. There is no acutely distressing outward circumstance to account for that attitude. It is an attitude which has existed for years,—in fact, for as long as you can remember. And an attitude, moreover, that invariably stems from anxiety—despite the fact you profess to have nothing to worry about, except this "phobia." So what? So all this adds up to evidence that you have suffered for years from subconscious anxieties,—the origin and nature of which have never been clarified. Because these anxieties cause you to feel (1) inadequate to a normal social exchange, and (2) unworthy by comparison to other people, you diagnose your neurosis as, simply, an unreasoning fear of people.

It is commonplace, the mental hygienists tell us, for the subconsciously anxious individual to "project" his distress upon his environment; hy which is meant that (1) he assumes causes outside himself are responsible for his discomfort; (2) looks around for a plausible exterior explanation of his uneasiness; and (3) finally fixes, with obstinate conviction, upon the supposed environmental cause-for-alarm. Yet, almost always, the alleged cause for anxiety is totally unrelated to the actual trouble-center, which is locked in the individual's subjective experience of an earlier day. Thus, if you could review the history of your subjective experience—which is to say, your emotional reactions to all significant episodes in your life—it is possible you could arrive at a healing understanding of the (when objectively viewed) perhaps trivial instigator of your longtime anguish.

Suppose, for instance, you were reared by a possessive, dominant, ambitious parent, who was never quite satisfied with your social performance, so that you were subjected to a continous barrage of unwitting fault-finding. In that event, you might have reached, unconsciously, the despairing conclusion that you were, essentially, an intolerably worthless person, who must be anathema in the eyes of all. That parent might have been the most significant figure in your life for years, the one person whose wholehearted love and approval you always wanted, yet never felt you had,—so that you became steeped in the conviction that you would always fall equally or even farther short in others' regard.

Or, again, an instinctive dislike for (say) an ill-tempered, unjust parent, if deeply repressed,—in deference to the conventional theory that it is a child's duty to love his parents, regardless of their desserts,—may have a poisonous effect upon a child's spirits, and become a prolific source of indefinable anxiety, lasting for years, or until recognized and sensibly dealt with.

Still other causes are (a) the sense of unredeemed sinfulness, stemming from a conviction of childish wrong-doing that was never discovered, punished and atoned for; and (2) a child's feeling that he isn't wanted by his parents; a feeling which engenders hostility and resentment in his breast,—essentially valid emotions which, if cautiously or conscientiously repressed, may beget farflung neurasthenic reprecussions.

In your nervous attention to that area of your experience in which your neurosis is most obviously "out-pictured," you overlook the area in which your difficulty is rooted,—namely, in your early subjective experience. With the aid of a psychiatric consultant,—or perhaps without such aid,—you can, if you will (and as I have said here earlier), review your experience and come to a reasonable understanding of the motivation for your bootless anxiety. Once consciously come upon, once subjected to your adult, intelligent appraisal, that psychic fester will begin to heal. Free of its malign power to cripple your conduct, you can begin at once to pursue normal social trailways and create new habit-patterns for yourself.

Social Dancing Easily Learned By Home Study

"S O S!" Will some stag take pity on him, a dancer in distress! For in the toils of her hook grip he can't lead a step. And she, poor girl, senses she's a failure.

Yet she could have been such a success. If only she'd polished her steps at home with diagrams, learned correct and graceful posture, he'd be beaming now.

Yes, you can learn steps, too, with footprint diagrams. And for that light-as-thistledown air, dance with head up, hips firmly under your body. Rest your left hand on your partner's shoulder. Never, never hook your arm under his or let your weight be a drag on him!

And men, don't assume your dancing's foolproof. There's no more unpopular person than a cave man on the dance floor. So hold your partner lightly but firmly. Indicate your lead with a gentle pressure of arm or hand.

Develop Chest To Improve Bust Contour

By Ida Jean Kain

AS LONG as fashion continues to follow the line of the figure so closely, the girl with the scanty bust contour will be keenly interested in any measure which promises lovelier curves.

The well designed brassiere can do a lot. But it can't solve the problem of underdevelopment of the chest and that is often the main trouble. When the chest is filled out, this portion of the figure takes on a better contour.

Sometimes the line is spoiled by a hollow between the shoulder and the bust. The muscle tissue can be toned and the hollow filled out with this type exercise:

Lie on the back on the bed with head and arms dangling over the edge. Very slowly raise the arms upward and lift the upper part of the body until the entire figure is in a straight line. At the same time, tip the head backward and chew vigorously to increase the muscular pull on the network across chest and bust and particularly on the strands from throat to breast. Begin easily and gradually increase the number of times you repeat the exercise.

Good for Figure

Here is another good exercise for figure and posture: Stand with feet apart and parallel, hands down at the sides. Bend the hands back at the wrists so that the palms are turned up and fingers point back. Then, very slowly, raise both arms up in front of the body until they are stretched high overhead without hunching the shoulders. Pause for an instant, straighten the hands and turn them out at the sides, and lower the arms sideward and down. Do this exercise very slowly and concentrate all the effort in those upper arm muscles.

It may be that your flat-chested appearance is caused by underweight. To have a well proportioned figure, the weight must be normal and you may have to go on a diet to gain. The specific dietary measures which seem to be most helpful in this respect are an increased quantity of milk and the inclusion of a vitamin A and D concentrate.

Increases Vitality

The addition of a few pounds should mean more vitality—which would make it easier for you to hold yourself erect and would make your figure look better. But to make sure of improved vitality, get some outdoor exercise every day. Walking is fine but as soon as it is warm enough to swim, you can make real progress. There is nothing to equal swimming for the improvement of the chest, bust, posture and vitality.

The Gentler Sex

Queens of the Day

"Every woman a queen" is the campaign slogan of Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey in her fight to retain the presidency of the Do Something About It league.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The noted reformer, who is opposed for reelection by Mrs. Buffington Blah, announced her campaign plans at her press conference yesterday.

"Every time I pick up a newspaper," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "I see another picture of a queen of something or other. Now that is a fine idea, but it is not carried far enough. We really do not have enough queens each spring—nor enough pictures of queens in the newspapers. Why should just a few lucky young women get a monopoly on the queen business?

Give Housewives Chance at Crowns

"Moreover, why should we stop with queens of apple blossoms, cherry blossoms, potato blossoms? Or with queens of beauty, fashion, love, yearbooks, proms, carnivals, circuses, barn dances, bathing beaches, etc.?

"There is no reason why we shouldn't have thousands, even millions of queens every May—or all the year for that matter—and give every woman a chance at royalty. For instance, why shouldn't we have a queen of the kitchen, and honor the women who have to hover over the cookstove preparing mothers' day dinners, etc? Or a queen of the chain grocery shoppers, thus honoring the woman who can manipulate her wire cart with the greatest ease? Or a queen of the office—the girl who could do the most work with the least griping?

"For that matter, we could have queens everywhere we went—every cocktail party, every Sunday school class, every bridge party, every club or other feminine group, selecting its queen of the day at each meeting—and then calling a newspaper photographer."

"Wouldn't that cheapen queens generally by upsetting the law of supply and demand?" asked a representative of The Economic Review.

America Must Meet Queen Shortage

"No, for with queens becoming scarcer every minute in Europe, this country must keep up the supply. Besides, think of the spur to American business! Think of all the crows, scepters, robes, jewels, etc., that would be needed. Also think how much more colorful our street crowds would become with so many crowned heads in the throngs! Above all, think how happy the women themselves would be!"

"I suppose you would have kings chosen to supplement the queens," observed a representative of "Rights for Men."

"That would be entirely unnecessary" said Mrs. DeGoofey. "Every man already thinks of himself as a king.

"The whole thing is that I am tired of seeing the same types of pretty girls year after year in the newspapers as queens of one thing or another. In fact, all queens look alike to me. Besides, what have these young women done to deserve their crowns and scepters? Nothing but smirk at a camera.

"Now I intend to see that we have some plain and deserving queens for a change—queens who have to wear their last year's suits and hats this spring; queens who have to work in maidless kitchens during the summer humidity, queens who have to toil in offices while their idle sisters hie away to beach and mountain. A crown for every unsung queeen is my motto, and if that doesn't get me 20,000,000 women's votes, I don't know what will."

Parties for Out-of-Town Guests Take Over Social Calendar

By Hope Ridings Miller

THE CAPITAL'S TEA-GOING contingent had a full calendar yesterday afternoon when fetes for out-of-towners and official intowners took over the social round. Mrs. Carter Glass and Mrs. Dave E. Satterfield, jr., shared honors at a 4-to-6 party given by Mrs. Walter Wyatt at her home on Kalmia Street. Between the same hours, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson gathered in a sizable company for Mrs. J. C. Cain, daughter of the Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. Alvin J. Wirtz, and Mrs. L. H. Hopkins, of Gonzales, Tex. Meanwhile, Representative and Mrs. John Vorys had a few friends in to meet Mr. and Mrs. Ferris Hamilton, of Springfield, Ill., who are in town for the Red Cross convention.

Receiving with Mrs. Wyatt, Mrs. Glass and Mrs. Satterfield were the hostess' house guests, Mrs. Mark Mote, of Columbus, Ga., and Mrs. B. A. Knowlton, of Columbia, S. C. Mrs. Wyatt has chosen a frock of smoke-colored lace; while Mrs. Glass appeared in orchid chiffon and Mrs. Satterfield was in eggshell crepe. Lilacs, apple blossoms and Daffodils from the hostess' own garden decorated the drawing room where guests were received. Tea was poured in the dining room at a long table, centered with a bouquet of yellow and white daffodils and lighted with tall yellow candles in silver candelabra. On the porch, which overlooks a lovely garden edging Rock Creek Park guests gathered around the punch bowl and lingered on to enjoy the pleasant party.

Among those assisting the hostess were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Harry Coffee, Mrs. Laurence Arnold, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. John McKee, Mrs. Donald Woodward, Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. R. C. Allen, Mrs. Charles Crawford, Mrs. Bruce Kremer, Mrs. Elsworth Alvord, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Seiford Stellwagen and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Glenn Gulickson, of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Honeyman At Johnson Party

Over at Mrs. Johnson's party, at Woodley Park Towers, Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, former Representative from Washington State, was a popular center of attention. In town for a short visit, she is the guest of Representative and Mrs. Johnson.

Receiving informally, the hostess was trimly turned out in a floor-length frock of dark blue chiffon, fashioned with long sleeves and a square neckline edged in a narrow white organdy ruffle. Mrs. Cain wore a green and white costume, and Mrs. Hopkins, who is the house guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Welly Hopkins, had chosen a black dress, set off with a brief jacket.

Among those who took turns pouring tea or coffee were Mrs. Eugene Worley, wearing a smart brown crepe frock with a dusty blue turban; Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Albert Thomas, whose wide-brimmed black and white striped poke bonnet featured red roses across the top and a white veil; Mrs. W. R. Poage, Mrs. Welly Hopkins and Mrs. Alvin J. Wirtz.

Swedish Countess Coming Here Soon

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom will have as their guest next week Countess Bernadotte, of Sweden, the former Miss Estelle R. Manville. She arrived in New York a few days ago on the liner Siboney and she plans to be in this country until May 6, returning to Europe by clipper.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville, of Pleasantville, N. J., Countess Bernadotte, came here to take her two children, Folke, jr., and Bertil, back to Sweden. They have been staying with her parents. Her husband, Count Folke Bernadotte, is a nephew of King Gustaf V and was in charge of the Swedish Pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

CUFF NOTES: Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller may as well get ready to make an acceptance speech that will sound well translated into Portuguese. I understand that a good-will gesture from Brazil will evidence itself in a concrete fashion very soon when a personal representative of President Vargas of Brazil presents to her, on behalf of the government, a gift insured for $25,000.

No, I can't tell you what it is; but I'll give you a hint—it's something for her jewel case . . . The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun will be guests of honor at a supper party to be given by Mrs. Ollie James on May 2 . . . Mrs. Sydney Cloman has invited a few guests to her apartment this evening to meet Mrs. Thomas Eastland, of Burlingame, Calif., and Mrs. Samuel Knight, who are visiting Mrs. George Marye . . . Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March spent several hours on Capitol Hill yesterday and lunched there with Senator Robert M. La Follette and Joseph Davies. The Marches are staying with Maj. and Mrs. Edwin Clarke, whose after-the-theater party on Monday night was both large and lavish—so I've been told.

Mrs. Marshall And A. A. Smith To Marry May 17

Mrs. James Jones Marshall, of King George County, Virginia, announces the engagement of her daughter, Mrs. Amelia Cary Marshall, to Asa Albert Smith, of Portland, Me., and Washington, D. C. The wedding will take place on May 17 at Evergreen, the home of Mrs. George Strother Cabel, near Warrenton, Va. Mrs. Cabel is a sister of the bride-elect.

Mrs. Marshall was educated at Mary Baldwin College. On her mother's side she is a great-great-granddaughter of Col. Samuel Hay, founder of the Order of the Cincinnati. On her father's side she is a great-great-granddaughter of Chief Justice John Marshall.

After their marriage the couple will live in Yates Gardens, Alexandria, where Mr. Smith has bought a home.

Mrs. J. S. Kemper Gives Luncheon

Mrs. James S. Kemper was hostess at luncheon yesterday in her apartment at the Shoreham.

Her guests included Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. John O'Connor, Mrs. George A. Paddock, Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. John S. Brooks, Mme. Felix Somary and Mrs. Anne Wheaton.

Nicholsolns Back In Home Vacated By T. V. Soongs

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Nicholson are back again in the home which they rented to the Financial Counselor of the Chinese Government and Mrs. T. V. Soong. The Soongs have taken the Woodland Drive home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, which the Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. James Forrestal had earlier this season.

Tonight the Nicholsons' home will be the scene of a political rally when their daughter, Miss Dorothy Nicholson, entertains at a "Katherine-Byron-for-Congress" conclave. Mrs. Byron, widow of the late Representative from Maryland, has recently been nominated for Congress.

Wedding Bells To Ring for Her

Underwood & Underwood

Miss Lynne Wear, whose engagement to Philip L. Schwarz was recently announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ellis Wear, of San Francisco, will be married in the late summer or early fall. At present Miss Wear is pursuing her studies at George Washington University. Mrs. Wear visited here for a month or so in the early spring but has returned to California

Drs. Brin, Silva To Share Honors

The Ambassador of Panama, Dr. Carlos Brin, who is a distinguished physician as well as diplomat, will share honors with Dr. A. C. Pacheco e Silva, professor of psychiatry at the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil, at a luncheon today. Hosts are members of the International Medical Club and the event will take place at the Mayflower.

Others in the party will be the Mexican envoy, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Cuban Ambassador, Antonio Concheso; the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins; the Ambassador of Chile, Rodolfo Michels; the Ambassador of Colombia, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; the Bolivan envoy, Luis Fernando Guachalla; the Minister of Nicaragua, Leon DeBayle; the Minister of Uruguay, Jose Richling, and the Minister of Paraguay, Dr. Juan Soler.

Also Charles Thompson, chief of cultural relations in the State Department; Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union; Arno Konder, minister counselor of the Brazilian embassy; Juan Ehrman, of the Panama embassy, and Harry Pearson and Richard Patti, of Cultural Relations.

Daughter Is Born To A. C. Bruces

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Craven Bruce announce the birth of a daughter, Margaret Macdonald, in Maplewood, N. J., on April 15.

Mrs. Bruce is the daughter of Mrs. Harry Taylor and the late Gen. Taylor, former chief of engineers, U. S. A. She made her debut in Washington several years ago and is a member of the Junior League.

Committees Are Tea Guests

The Washington Chapter of the Junior League held a committee meeting and tea yesterday afternoon at the league headquarters for the Red Cross Nurses' Aid committees. Mrs. Lewis Clark is chairman of the Nurses Aid and Mrs. William S. Anderson is chairman of the Red Cross committee.

Those who attended included, for Nurses' Aid, Miss Helen-Marie de Limur, Miss Margaret Sperry, Miss Anne Sperry, Miss Ann Sterrett, Miss Caroline Beall, iss Sally Bradley, Mrs. Edward Page, Mrs. John Rayburn, Miss Dorothea Sowers, Mrs. Hugh Rowan, Mrs. Donald McKnew and Mrs. Dallas Dort.

For the Red Cross Committee, those attending included Mrs. Horace Peaslee, Mrs. Maclin Davis, Mrs. Frank Fletcher and Miss Harriet Bachelor, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. Cornell Acheson, Mrs. Irving Camp, Mrs. Thacher Winslow and Miss Elizabeth Sladen, the latter two members of the placement committee.

Last evening the reception committee for National Child Health Day met at the Junior League Headquarters to discuss plans for the Child Health Day dinner which will take place on May 1, in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Chairman of the reception committee is Miss Caroline Willcox.

Ushers for that event will be Mrs. Francis Scott Carter, Miss Elizabeth Champe, Mrs. Wilson Christian, Miss Anne Holloway, Miss Bambie McKenna, Miss Lucia Murchison, Miss Alice Parker, Miss Priscilla Parker, Miss Eleanor Powell, Mrs. Mason Rainsford and Miss de Grassenreid Woolley.

Suzanne Walker's Engagement Is Announced

Mrs. Harrison Howell Dodge announces the engagement of her granddaughter, Miss Suzanne Carolyn MacLean Walker, daughter of Commander Hugh MacLean Walker, U. S. N., to Capt. Joseph Treacy, jr., U. S. A.

Miss Walker attended the Eastman and Gunston Hall schools here. She was graduated from the Fifth Avenue Hospital School of Nursing in New York City. She made her debut in Washington several seasons ago.

Capt. Treacy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Joseph Treacy, of New York and Cedarhurst, Long Island. He was graduated from St. John's Preparatory School, Danvers, Mass., and the United States Military Academy.

The wedding will take place the latter party of May.

Mrs. Nevile Butler Honored at Dinner

Mrs. Nevile Butler was guest of honor last night at a dinner party given by Mrs. George Wythe at the Army and Navy Country Club. Mrs. Butler is the wife of the British Minister. Later Mrs. Wythe took her guests to the concert given at Fort Myer for the benefit of the British War Relief Fund.

Also in Mrs. Wythe's party were the Secretary of the Legation of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Jan R. Jordaan, the Attache of the Legation and Mrs. W. C. Naude, Dr. John C. Patterson, Commander and Mrs. John Reynolds, Lieut. and Mrs. Garry V. Graves and Mrs. Harrison Mann.

Bolivian Envoy Gives Reception For Garlands

By Carolyn Bell

After a staggering round of farewell parties, the Peruvian Minister to the Dominican Republic and Senora de Garland looked amazingly fresh at the reception given in their honor yesterday afternoon by the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla.

Guests arriving at the legation gasped at the crown of blooming wistaria rioting over the building. Inside Senora de Guachalla received, wearing a floor-length frock in "mospaca"—that's Spanish for pale gold. Senora de Garland was smartly turned out in a black and white frock and fetching black hat.

Peruvian Envoy Attends Party

The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel Freyre y Santander, chatted animatedly with a group about his son. Others there included Mrs. Natalie Phillips, whose frock was of black and white print; Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, who had a gardenia pinned to her smart black and beige ensemble; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, she wearing a silver fox jacket over her black ensemble; The Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, and his son, Jaime; and the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos. Their daughter, Senorita Laura Recinos, had a fetching veil swathed about her hat, under her chin, and pinned demurely to her frock.

Senhora Martins Wears Red Roses

Mrs. Laurence Duggan was trying out her Spanish (and getting along nicely, thank you) with several Latin ladies. The Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins were in the throng. Senhora Martin's hat was edged in red roses and a silver fox jacket completed her ensemble. The Ambassador had a cluster of cherry blossoms tucked in his lapel. The retiring Air and Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Godoy were there, as were Miss Lolita Dawson, the First Secretary of the Uruguay Legation, Juan D'Aniello; Mrs. Robert Knowlton, smart in purple; Mrs. Thomas Burke, Senora de Pardo, in a beige frock; Mr. and Mrs. Abbot McGinnisk, Robert Woodward, Andrew Donovan and Senorita Eugenia Sosa, in a red and white printed frock.

Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, was smartly turned out in a pale gold crepe frock and matching turban. Not far away was her pretty daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels. Still others there were Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, and many others.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

FEW PERSONS at the opening of the Frederic March play at the National the other evening seemed aware that one member of the audience was Katharine Hepburn. But it couldn't have been Miss Hepburn's fault, for she was all over the place. Instead of remaining in her seat during intermissions, as you would expect one who has made a name for herself as a publicity-hater to do, the actress wandered about in the lobby. She looked stunning in a street-length black dress, open-heeled black sandals and a long fitted jacket of pale pink. With Miss Hepburn was one of her two sisters—who is equally good looking—Theresa Hepburn, of the Theater Guild, and Lawrence Langner. Miss Hepburn came all the way from New York to see the show.

Other first nighters included Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Laura Tuckerman, in black; George Agnew, John Stonborough and many more.

THE LIBRARIAN of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish will go to New England the first week in May. Mrs. MacLeish will speak at Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges and Deerfield Academy. They will also visit their farm in the Berkshire foothills, about 20 miles from Northampton, Mass.

Mrs. MacLeish worked so hard over the Piccadilly Arcade that she has had to abandon her singing for a while. She cannot appear with the famous harpsichordist, Ralph Kirkpatrick, at the concert in Charlottesville May 3, which is being held in connection with the Bundles for Britain Garden Tour.

Mrs. Arthur Woods, who arranged the concert, will of course go down to Charlottesville. Mrs. Truxtun Beale is another planning to attend.

PADEREWSKI has a standing invitation from Mrs. Roosevelt to visit the White House. Carlton Smith, the critic, was in town for a day or two this week mustering interest in the concert to be held in New York next fall to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Paderewski's arrival in this country. There's a possibility that a concert will be organized at the Polish Embassy here in Washington for the same cause. Funds raised will be sent to Polish refugees in England.

Another of Mr. Smith's many causes is that of entertaining the American soldiers. After a visit to several army camps he has decided they are in need of some diversion. But artists are falling all over themselves to offer "divertissement," among the volunteers being Lawrence Tibbett, Tommy Dorsey and Joan Crawford. Larry Adler wants to form a "harmonica brigade" among the soldiers. Lily Pons told Mr. Smith that after months spent working for the French, she is eager to do something for America.

LIFE IS CERTAINLY changing these days. The other afternoon a young lady met a man at a cocktail party and he offered to take her out to dinner afterward. "How much money have you?" he asked. A dollar and a half" was the answer. "Well, I've got $6" "Oh, that's wonderful," she replied; "we can eat well off that." "The only trouble is," was the answer, "I gave up a big job in New York to work for the War Department. I sent the rest of my salary home to my wife and this $6 is my allowance for the entire week." So they went to a drive-in.

SOCIAL NOTES: Former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham will give a dinner on Friday. . . . Mrs. English Gordon will entertain on Saturday evening. . . . Mrs. Leon Moyse, a refugee from London and the French Riviera, has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park. . . . Mrs. Foster Penick, of New Orleans, will arrive May 7 to visit her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hyde.

Wives of British Aides to Be Guests

Wives of several members of the British Embassy staff will be honor guests at a tea to be given tomorrow by the Englishing Union. The party will take place at the Union's headquarters, 1107 Sixteenth Street, from 4:30 to 6.

Among the honor guests will be Mrs. Nevile Butler, wife of the Minister; Mrs. H. A. Pott, Mrs. Beaumont-Nesbitt, Mrs. G. C. Pirle, Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Derek Hoyer-Millar, Mrs. A. V. Golding, Mrs. Heathcoat-Amory and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart.

Mrs. McNutt Entertains Her Committee

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt entertained at tea in her apartment in the Shoreham yesterday for her committee for the United China Relief Benefit to be held at Constitution Hall next Sunday evening.

Among those present were: Mrs. Eugene Meyer, vice chairman of the committee; Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of boxes; Mrs. Irene Caldwell, chairman of arrangements; Mrs. V. K. Kwong, of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Donald C. Blaisdell, Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt, Miss Lura Loomis, Dr. Mortimer Graves, Dr. C. C. Hung and Olin D. Wannamaker.

Mrs. Dougherty reports all boxes sold and other members announce an increased demand for tickets since the addition to the program of the violinist, Mischa Elman. The entertainment will also include a speech by the former United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, and the Ray Scott film, "The Bombing of Chungking."

In addition to the boxholders already mentioned the following have taken tickets.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tidings, Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. William E. Borah.

Also, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Nelson Johnson, Admiral and Mrs. Harry E. Yarnell, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Sydney Cloman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berryman and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

U. S. May Face World-Wide Totalitarian Alliance Alone, L. R. Edminster Warns Voteless League

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Sounding the keynote of the all-day Foreign Policy School conducted yesterday by the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters at the Shoreham Hotel, Lynn R. Edminster, special assistant to the Secretary of State, declared that "as matters now stand, we face the possibility of being confronted, virtually alone, by a world-wide totalitarian alliance against us."

"This challenge," asserted Mr. Edminster, "cannot be diverted or abated in the slightest by adherence on our part to policies of strict neutrality. The program of the Nazis is completely, even boastfully, predatory in intent and method. Toward weakness anywhere, be it enemy, neutral, or even ally, it holds only supreme contempt. Its only god is force.

"With such a system no compromise is possible. It will go on ruthlessly attempting to devour all that lies in its path, unless and until it is stopped. There are still some, unfortunately, who refuse to believe this; or who, if they do believe it, prefer nevertheless to maintain a fictitious neutrality until the whole force of power-intoxicated dictatorship, backed by the resources of two-thirds of the world, is turned against us as a "reward" for our extreme considerateness while other nations were being victimized, one after the other.

"Fortunately, the good sense of the American people has come to their rescue, and the vast majority now realize that to predicate our policy upon any such wishful basis would be to gamble recklessly with the lives of our people and the future safety of our Republic."

Mr. Edminster extended the good wishes of the Secretary of State to the league on its effort to face the situation with accurate information and clarity of thought. Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, president of the local league, opened the meeting, which was attended by more than 300 women.

Dr. Clyde Eagleton, of New York University, who followed Mr. Edminster on the morning program, discussed "Fundamentals of American Foreign Policy," asserting our policy must be altered, to meet demands of the times.

"The United States must make and uphold an international system which shall be able to prevent the use of force between nations, to establish justice between them, and to give opportunity for the further improvement of the welfare of individuals everywhere," he said. "The United States having thrown her strength into the present war, is prepared to join with other states supporting these aims in a union of economic and military forces for that purpose, to be developed into a permanent and universal system for maintaining law and order between the nations of the world."

Barnet Nover, columnist of The Post, also on the morning program, discussing "The Trend of Foreign Policy," said:

"For the first time in 150 years the United States faces the prospect of being isolated. The prospect is infinitely less pleasant than we supposed it would be during the years when we were presumably pursuing an isolationist course.

"A German victory might not necessarily or immediately lead to an invasion of continental United States. But there is very real doubt of our capacity to defend the hemisphere, given our present limited state of rearmament against a German attack. And this attack may not necessarily take the form of direct military or naval invasion," said Mr. Nover.

"Hitler did not break the national line, he went around it. So, too, if he finds that the United States is too difficult a nut to crack militarily, he may try to circumvent our defenses. The prestige of a German victory would very seriously weaken the desire of the more exposed countries of South America to cooperate with us in the defense of the hemisphere. Besides, Hitler could very easily foment conditions of internal strife in such countries by sending arms to dissident elements or Fifth Column groups that already are well organized in this hemisphere."

The afternoon session was a panel discussion under the chairmanship of Anne Hartwell Johnstone, program secretary of the league, by four other authorities on the world situation.

Quincy Wright, professor of international law at the University of Chicago, took a long-range point of view, going on the assumption of an Axis defeat and emphasizing the United States' responsibility to help build a better world after the war.

Clark Foreman, coauthor of "Total Defense," speaking on "The Latin American Front," took issue with this viewpoint, urging a realistic program of national defense that takes into account the possibility of a German victory over England. "The attack which Germany would use in the future must be guessed from the past," he said. "It would be economic and propagandist first, and military only if the others didn't succeed." He urged working out a complete hemisphere civilization, so as to be able to maintain ourselves, even in event of a Hitler victory.

Representative Thomas H. Eliot, of Massachusetts, speaking on "The Domestic Front," also urged a realistic attitude and declared there must be no conflict in this country between private and public enterprise. "There are native forces," he said, "that fail to realize that the future of democracy and freedom depend on freedom from fear and want for our own people, as well as the other freedoms of speech and press, etc."

Herbert B. Elliston, associate editor of The Post, the final speaker, dealt with the new situation arising in the Far East as a result of the new Russo-Japanese neutrality pact. This, he said, would ease the Japanese position in the event that the Japanese wanted to seize Singapore, which, he said, must be regarded as a Japanese objective.

To frustrate such a design Mr. Elliston advocated a strong line with Japan. He declared: "No time should be wasted. We should say that we will join with the British in defending Singapore to prevent the cutting off of supplies to the Chinese government by way of the Burma Road and also in order to maintain our own supply sources in Asia. This would forestall the seizing of Singapore by Japan in event of a striking Hitler success in Europe."

Several Hundred Guests Attend G. O. P. League's Housewarming

Several hundred members and guests of the League of Republican Women yesterday attended the housewarming which marked the formal opening of the league's new clubhouse at 1612 Rhode Island Avenue. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president, and past presidents of the organization received.

Mrs. Gann headed the line, wearing a blue lace gown and a picture hat matching it and trimmed with flowers. The past presidents were Mrs. Virginia White Speel, who is also founder and first president of the league and Republican national committeewoman for the District, and Mrs. William Fitch Kelly. Mrs. Speel wore a black velvet gown with a white lace collar and violet flower-trimmed hat. Mrs. Kelly wore black, also trimmed with white lace, and a black hat with white pique flowers. Mrs. Edward F. Colladay, wife of the Republican national committeeman for the District, also was in line. She wore a brown print frock with a hat of white lilacs trimmed with a blue velvet bow.

Members and guests inspected the new 15-room clubhouse, which is much larger than the quarters in which the league has been for the past three years at 1301 Seventeenth street. There is a large reception hall on the first floor, with a large staircase leading to the upper stories. Off the hall is a drawing room with a large room adjoining and beyond that, the dining room, so arranged that all three may be opened into each other and serve as one. Oriental rugs and other handsome furnishings contributed to the attractiveness. Several gallant G. O. P. elephants in prominent positions left no question as to the auspices under which the club was maintained.

Spring flowers decorated the rooms and the tea table in the dining room, where the Republican women members of Congress and wives of the Republican Senators and members of the House alternated in pouring. Other members of the league also assisted.

The house has four stories and a basement. On the second floor the office of the president is pleasantly located in a front room, overlooking Scott Circle. Mrs. William H. Scott, executive secretary of the league, is in the office daily.

Other rooms on the upper floors, many of which have adjoining baths, are furnished as bedrooms and will be available for rent to out-of-town members of organizations affiliated with the Federation of Women's Republican Clubs while they are visitors in Washington.

No sooner were moving days over and the rooms ready than some were occupied by Republican women spending a few days in the Capital.

Yesterday's tea will be followed tomorrow by the regular Thursday luncheon, which was canceled last week because moving was in progress. Mrs. Edward L. Springer, as chairman of the house committee, has been in charge.

Those pouring included Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, Margaret Chase Smith, Jessie Sumner, Frances P. Bolton and Jeannette Rankin. Also Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. C. Wyland Brooks, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Frank Crowther, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. John M. Robsion, Mrs. Albert E. Carter, Mrs. Harry Engelbright Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, Mrs. Richard B. Wrigglesworth, Mrs. Edward H. Rees, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. James E. Watson, Miss Marion E. Martin, Mrs. W. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Charles Lea and Mrs. Cleveland Newton.

Bank Women's Club Will Meet Friday

The regular meeting of the Bank Women's Club will be held Friday evening, at 6:30, at Brook Farm Tea House. Miss Miriam Fort is in charge of the arrangements.

This will be the first meeting of the 1941-42 season. Miss Helen Healy, of the National Savings & Trust Co., newly elected president of the club, will preside.

Col. Frederick A. Fenning will speak on "Police of Europe, Asia and Africa," and Miss Temple Bailey, well known author, also will be a guest.

Deelta Zeta Alumnae Will Entertain Tonight

The Delta Zeta Alumnae sorority will entertain at a buffet supper at the home of Mrs. Kenneth S. Boardman, 6639 Thirty-second Place, tonight at 6:30.

Those assisting Mrs. Boardman in arranging the meeting are Mrs. Glenn H. Breen, Mrs. David L. Bryant, Mrs. V. W. Clapp, Miss Lavira Shodd, Mrs. William D. Thompson, Mrs. Dan Weggeland, Mrs. William Wildhack.

1812 Daughters Hear Address By Rep. Bolton

"The need we have in this country is to pull in our belts and realize we have been spending the richness of our land and it is high time we gave something back," Representative Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, declared last night in an address before the National Society Daughters of 1812.

"The opportunity for our young men to serve the colors may turn them to a renewed understanding of true patriotism and a fervor for America," she said. "They will begin to re-evaluate America and what it means to them."

"It is we who have despoiled our country—cutting down trees, polluting streams and destroying game—now we must rebuild. We have not done the job we should have in assimilating those who have come to our shores during the last 50 years. We need to see to it that we ourselves understand what the America we say we love is to us and what she means not only to us, but to the world."

Representative Bolton was introduced by Mrs. Percy Young Schelly, president national of the society, who presided at the banquet and at the business meetings during the day, all at the Willard Hotel.

Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, who shared the program with Representative Bolton, predicted that this country inevitably would go into the war, but asserted that, instead, it should stay out and continue to build national and ehmispheric defenses to protect it from attack. He advocated the building up a nationalistic spirit in America such as Hitler has built in Germany, although not for the same purposes.

The mothers of America made a great contribution in flesh and blood in 1917 to "make the world safe for democracy," he said, but, in the light of present events, it now seems a useless sacrifice. "There is no use doing the same again," he declared.

Also on the program last night was Mrs. David Noble Patterson, who gave a short inspirational talk on the subject, "Food For Thought." There was music by the United States Marine Orchestry.

Reports during the business meeting in the afternoon included that of Mrs. Samuel Hawkes, of Florida, national chairman of the mountain schools.

This morning the business sessions will continue and resolutions will be acted on.

P.-T. A. Group Meets With Mrs. Graham

Preparing for the annual summer round-up of pre-school children for physical examination, conducted by the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. R. W. Graham, State chairman of the project, called a meeting yesterday in the board room of the N. E. A. Building.

Presidents of the local P.-T. A. units and their summer round-up chairmen attended. Visual test charts were shown and instruction for members of the committee who will assist at the clinics were given. The women give the tests, which are simple means of determining whether the children have vision defects, thus relieving the examining physicians of this detail.

Richmond Club to Hear Mrs. Lydia Van Zandt

Mrs. Lydia Van Zandt, of Washington, will be the guest speaker at the Tuckahoe Woman's Club in Richmond, Va., this afternoon.

By special request of the program committee Mrs. Van Zandt will talk about the national defense program under the title "Behind the Scenes in Washington."

Texan Named For Director Of the Census

James Clyde Capt, 52-year-old Texan, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be Director of the Census, to succeed William L. Austin, retired.

CAPT

Capt joined the Census Bureau in 1939 as confidential assistant to the director, aiding in the assembling of the staff of 120,000 field workers employed in the recent national count.

He entered New Deal service by way of the Texas Relief Administration. Coming to Washington in 1934, he served first in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, later the Works Progress Administration, and most recently the Census.

Born of pioneer stock on a farm near San Antonio, Tex., he worked his way through San Antonio public schools and Baylor University.

His early years were spent in railroad work in New York City. He enlisted in the Army at the outbreak of the World War, served overseas, and after the armistice had charge in London of liquidating the equipment of the motor transportation service. After the war period he organized a large creamery business in Texas.

Capt has two daughters, Mrs. Milton Cinners, Ocean City, Md., and Miss Berlette Capt, San Antonio.

Sen. Glass Hints Reynolds Won't Get Sheppard Job

By the Associated Press

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, acknowledged yesterday that he had written Mrs. Susie Orr, of Charlotte, N. C., who had protested against the projected elevation of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, to the chairmanship of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, that the matter "very likely will be settled to your satisfaction." Glass declined, however, to comment further.

Senate attaches said the Democratic Steering Committee, which appoints the chairmen of standing committees, probably would meet next week. In the meantime, it was said, members were holding informal "conference" over the Military Affairs post.

Under seniority custom, almost invariably followed, Reynolds would be entitled to the chairmanship, vacated by the death of Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas. Reynolds has been sharply critical of the Administration's program of aiding Great Britain, although he voted for the $7,000,000,000 appropriation for that purpose.

Only 890 U. S. Planes Actually Used in Combat by English

By J. Reagan McCrary,
International News Service Special Correspondent.

New York, April 22.—Out of all the American aircraft flown or shipped to Britain only about 890 are "operational"—in actual combat or patrol service.

America has sent some 570 Curtiss P-40 fighters to Britain, where they have been christened with a good American name, Tomahawks. Of those 570 planes, only about 18 were "operational" when I left.

The rest were in storage "somewhere in England."

There seems to be little doubt that there is a definite, carefully planted prejudice inside England, sponsored by certain British aircraft manufacturers, against American aircraft. The "brains" of this clique has been Charles Grey, former editor of the technical journal, Aeroplane. It was under his direction that the offending caption "The United States has decided to support the war financially to the last Englishman" was published in the semiofficial volume "All the World's Aircraft."

Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's fiery little pro-American minister of aircraft production, has already taken care of Mr. Grey.

Need Better Assemblage

It is only fair to say, however, that in a certain sense American aircraft manufactureres have played into the hands of their critics by not having enough skilled men over in England to see to it that their "babies" are carefully assembled and tested after arrival in England.

There has also been a lack of systematic coordination by the British in seeing to it that the American planes are tried out and any lack of armaments quickly pointed out to the manufacturers so that speedy corrections could be made in American factories.

I must hasten to add, however, that Mr. Averell Harriman, the new industrial expert sent over by President Roosevelt to coordinate such things, and Gens. Svanlon and Harmon, United States Army Air Attaches in London, are cleaning up this mess as rapidly as possible. I know, I saw them in action at close range, saw them use tact when necessary, and forcefulness when that was the right medicine.

Last week, 14 combat pilots of the United States Air Force landed in Britain as observers; those men know how to handle the P-40's as well as other American fighting ships, know how to get the most out of them. Beginning this week they'll demonstrate that our aircraft can hold their own with Britain's Hurricanes and Spitfires.

Says Aircobra Takes Back Seat

But this I must add: There is no fighter now in production in America that can touch the Hurricane III's and the Spitfire II's, the Tornadoes and Whirlwinds, that are already in action in Britain.

The Bell Aircobra is the best fighter we've got; its speed is topped by the Hurricane III, which carries more armor and air cannon in the wings, as compared to one in the nose for the Aircobra.

Prediction: Before November, Hurricanes will carry eight air cannon in the wings.

Nor do I believe that any bomber now in production in America can equal the bomb-carrying capacity or the speed or the armament of Britain's three new bombers, the Stirling, the Manchester and the Halifax.

But now to sweeten the brine with praise for two American aircraft that are doing a superb job:

Lockheed Hudson Is Tops

First, the Lockheed Hudson, which looks like a transport, except for the twin-gun turret sticking out of its spine like a bump on a log.

"Old Boomerang," the boys call them—because they get you there, and they get you back.

I had a run out of the north of England in one of them; the pilot that day was a boy who had flown them over Dunkirk:

"Listen, Yank, this is the greatest kite in this show. I've flown them as dive bombers—look, here's how they handle when you're dive-bombing . . . See that neck of water down there . . . here we go . . ."

He aimed his Hudson as you would aim a gun . . . then over we went . . . Vooooom! . . . with every rivet screaming "Take it easy, old boy, I can't stand much more." . . . Down and down. . . .

"And then you flip the Mickey Mouse"—that's the bomb switches—"and then you pull it out before you get down to 800 feet. . . ."

It felt as though we'd swallowed a billiard ball when he pulled "Old Boomerang" out of the dive; he just laughed: "That's not half these Hudsons will do. . . ."

Used as Fighters

And then he told us how they'd used them as fighters over Dunkirk, knocking down the Junkers 87 dive bombers. And there was the time a flight of three Hudsons whammed right into a squadron of 12 Messerschmitts, scattered them like pigeons:

"I got an air cannon shell right in the air screw. . . . She never stopped grinding. . . . Right on . . . like that geyser you call Old Faithful. . . ."

That's the Hudson. There's another that the British boys swear by and not at—the Douglas DB-7, built first for the French as an attack bomber. All instrument panel markings are still in French. It was first rechristened "Boston" by the R. A. F., and now it's been converted for night fighting and rechristened "Havoc."

I have never seen such an ominous aircraft, soot-black and frightening. Three-placed as a bomber, it carries only two now—the pilot, who operates a whole battery of forward-firing wing guns from the teat on his stick, and behind him, where a gunner used to sit, now sits the man who operates the secret device that searches the night skies for the Jerry raiders.

The whole life of a Havoc is "blacked out"—the pilots wear dark glasses all day, and eat carrots because their vitamins improve night vision.

And when the Havocs roar up into the dark skies at night they are completely blacked out. . . . Not even the glow of a light on the instrument panel to dull the pilot's night vision for the nerve-wracking search ahead of him. All the dials gleam faintly with radium paint.

As soon as the chocks are taken away, you "go into your office," concentrate on the instruments. You don't even have a chance to lift your landing gear until you have about 3,000 feet under you—a second's distraction from intense concentration on the instruments might send you spinning into a dive that you would never come out of before your 3,000 feet were eaten up and you are splattered over the earth.

And up in the air, you patrol a plotted area, until you see the dark blob in moonlit skies that means a flight of Nazis is near . . . or until your "A1" operator picks up the scent and guides you to the quarry.

Then its "Tallyho, there they go" and you begin to chase. You get on their tail first. Then you stalk them—their engines drown the roar of your own.

Closer and closer you creep up—because your Havoc is faster than the Jerries. Your fingers ache to press the teat, to let him have a burst at 300 yards, at 200 yards . . . but no . . . hold it . . . hold it . . . 100 yards now . . . still you must hold it . . . and now it's 50 and you press the teat and your guns blaze and the Jerry explodes in the night like a box of matches . . .

The Havocs are doing that job, the Yankee Havoc—even better than the Beau fighters the British built for the night hawking.

But we'll never be satisfied until the superiority of all the American aircraft that have gone "over there" to help beat Hitler is so clearly established that the American boys in the Eagle Squadron will unanimously demand, "Give us American planes."

Today, they fly Hurricanes.

Judges Decide On Plan to Speed Police Court Cases

Plans to speed up prosecution of more than 600 jury cases waiting trial in Police Court have been completed, it was said yesterday, following a meeting of the board of judges Monday.

Two steps were agreed upon by the four magistrates, Judges John P. McMahon, presiding; Hobart Newman, Walter J. Casey and George D. Neilson. The changes were:

To place two prosecutors in the jury court branch instead of the usual one, and to post the jury assignments two weeks in advance instead of the usual one week.

The posting of the jury docket two weeks ahead, it was stated, will give lawyers more time to prepare their cases and do away with a large number of continuances.

Figures released by Walter F. Bramhall, chief clerk of the court, showed that 639 jury cases were pending as of last Saturday. At the first of this year, 476 cases were pending, and 584 jury trial demands have been recorded since then. A total of 421 jury cases have been disposed of since January 1, 1941.

The Federal Diary

Defense Agencies To Curtail Vacations

Plenty of Federal employes in defense agencies aren't going to be permitted to take all of their earned annual leave this year. The pressure of work is just too great. In some quarters it has been proposed that annual leave for all Government employes be curtailed during the emergency. However, no such plan has a chance of being put into effect. Instead, each agency will continue to control the leave of its employes. Officials in several defense agencies are understood to favor the limiting of vacations to two weeks except in unusual cases. It's also the policy of most defense agencies to see that their hard-working employes take vacations. The employes, officials believe will turn out better jobs if they are made to take holidays.

It's a fact that defense agencies like War, Navy and State departments, Civil Service Commission, CAA, Maritime Commission, OPM and OEM among others frequently refuse employes' extended vacations. It's also a fact that the average amount of accrued annual leave per employe is growing rapidly in nearly every defense agency. This upward trend is conclusive evidence that fewer vacations are being permitted.

Employes are entitled to 26 days leave each year. They can carry over to a new year only 60 days accumulated leave. And on January 1 hundreds of employes and officials forfeited up to 26 days vacation under the 60-day limitation. Some War, Navy and Coast Guard employes are paid double time for staying on the job when they are supposed to be taking vacations. These same employes are paid time and a half for overtime, but this doesn't apply to the entire Federal service.

OPM is hiring stenographers and typists at the rate of 30 a week. It prefers to take experienced ones from other Federal agencies, but the other agencies don't like it a bit. . . . John H. Sieker has been appointed chief of the division of recreation and lands in the Forest Service. He succeeds Bob Marshall who died two years ago. . . . UFWA has again charged Labor Secretary Perkins with antiunion practices, such as failure to settle long-standing grievances.

Transfer of the Coast Guard from Treasury to Navy, revealed here last week, is being worked out on a partial basis. Secretaries Morgenthau and Knox are understood to be agreed that only that part of the Coast Guard the Navy can use should be shifted, but that routine jobs of patroling and life-saving should remain in Treasury. Both Secretaries have discussed the plan with the President. Several admirals are understood to be anxious to get the entire Coast Guard as they did during World War I.

The President has called a national conference on nutrition for May 26, 27, and 28. He has placed Federal Security Administrator McNutt in charge, but Surgeon General Parran is understood to have instigated the conference in the hopes of whipping together a definite nutrition program. . . . Presidential action on the Ramspeck bill was delayed again yesterday. It's reported that the Civil Service for lawyers plan as proposed by Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter is causing the tie-up.

Open continuous exams for female senior typists and junior stenographers are expected to be announced soon by the Civil Service Commission. Open male tests for typist and stenographer have been in effect for weeks and qualified persons are urged to apply. The commission also is expected to announce tests for punch card operator. New registers for punch card operators and female typists and stenographers were set up just a few months ago, but agencies are finding it difficult to induce eligibles to accept jobs here. The percentage of typist refusals has reached 50 per cent.

Postoffice Department is losing so many of its employes to defense agencies and the military services that it has refused to permit skilled mechanics, needed vitally in key defense jobs, to take leave to accept the defense jobs. . . . Civil Service Commission wants auto spare parts experts for work in the War Department. The jobs pay $2,300. . . .

Was Her Face Red!

"My dear, you need some more make-up or something," Mrs. Warner Ragsdale, of Dale Drive, Silver Spring, Md., told Mrs. James W. Douthat, 605 Bonifant Street, as the two women were playing bridge at the Bundles For Britain tea yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club.

She had the measles.

What! No Drugs?

Over the weekend thieves looted Riverside Pharmacy, 2125 E Street Northwest. An inventory yesterday revealed the loot to include 2 cash registers, 24 decks playing cards, 156 razor blades, 12 wallets, 36 watches, 6 alarm clocks, 58 cartons cigarettes, 40 bottles liquor, &c.

Loss was estimated at $1,000.

Bach Cantatas Are Presented At St. John's

By Ray C. B. Brown

St. John's Church (Lafayette Square) presents Sebastian Bach's Church Cantatas Nos. 67 and 180 on Tuesday night, under the direction of Arthur Howes. Soloists: Cathreen Carrico, soprano; Helen Benham, contralto; Joseph Florestano, tenor; Raimonde Aubrey, basso.

Since Arthur Howes became choirmaster and organist in the historic Church of St. John on Lafayette Square, he has from time to time directed the choir in weekday performances of two Kirchen Cantaten by Sebastian Bach. These events have always drawn interested audiences, and last evening's presentation was no exception. The cantatas offered were "Halt' im Gedaechtnis Jesum Christ," composed about 1735 for the first Sunday after Easter, and "Schmuecke dich, o liebe Seele," composed about 1740 for the twentieth Sunday after Trinity. Solo parts were sung by Catherine Carrico, Helen Benham, Joseph Florestano and Raimonde Aubrey.

BROWN

In the church cantatas of Bach is to be found the very essence of his genius. Multiple as were the manifestations of that genius, it burned with its purest flame in the music he wrote for the regular services of the Churches of St. Thomas and St. Nicholas in Leipzig. In this field alone his activity was extraordinary, for he composed 295 cantatas of which 202 have survived. They are naturally not all of equal merit, but in each of them are embedded melodic beauties, and no two of them are alike in vocal or instrumental treatment.

Aside from the personal characteristics of Bach's style and feeling, the principal difference between his cantatas and their Italian forerunners is the important part played by the chorales or hymns, which were typical German Protestant products. When they were performed, the congregation would join in the singing of the chorales.

Last evening the two cantatas were sung in English to the gain of the auditors, if to the loss of certain rhythmic relations between words and melodies. In Cantata No. 67, notable features were the opening chorus, "Hold in Remembrance Jesus Christ," in which the word "hold" is treated both as a hortatory exclamation and as a sustained tone; the tenor aria, "Now Is Risen Christ Jesus;" the contralto recitative, "Yet Lord, I Know;" and the basso aria, "Peace Be Unto You," with its interruptions by the chorus, "Amen, Jesus With Us Fighteth."

Gems of Cantata No. 180, "Deck Thyself, My Soul, With Gladness," are the soprano arias of contrasting emotional color; the yearning simplicity of "O What Longing Fills My Spirit" and the buoyant lilt of "Sun of Life, My Spirit's Radiance." Subtleties of musical expression are also striking in the contralto recitative, "My Heart Is Filled With Fear and Joy" and in the florid tenor aria, "Arise, My Soul."

Worker Loses Arm In Archives Accident

David Norleems, 52-year-old engineer, had his right arm amputated above the elbow yesterday when it became jammed between a cable and spool of the elevator at the Archives Building.

Norleems, who lives at Capital Heights, Md., was cleaning the machinery of the elevator when a brush in his hand got caught in the steel cable.

Pan-American Program Given By Students

Miss Pan America, Miss Latin America, Mr. Anglo-America and Mr. Inter-America of the Future last night represented an array of reasons for cooperation among the Americas at a celebration by eighth grade pupils of Sacred Heart School.

These four characters in the Pan-American program were Patricia Zimmer, Greta Hendricks, James Gingell and Hubert Nucci, respectively. In the auditorium decorated with flags from the Pan American Union, the pupils presented a program of talks and music on kinship of the Americas.

Arthur Cranston, president of the Eighth Grade Civics Club, opened and closed the celebration, with short talks.

Msgr. James Smith, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, announced that Angelia Bier and Marjorie Burgan, eighth grade pupils, were winners of four-year scholarships to Sacred Heart Academy in competitive examinations.

William F. Montavon, head of the legal department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and William V. Griffin, chief clerk at the Pan American Union, brought brief messages. About 50 children took part.

Capital Woman Named Sponsor Of Destroyer

Secretary of Navy Knox yesterday designated a Washington woman and another from Annapolis as sponsors for the destroyer Jenkins and the transport Doyen.

Mrs. Marion Parker Embry, 2129 Florida Avenue Northwest, will sponsor the Jenkins, named for her grandfather, the late Rear Admiral Thornton A. Jenkins. The vessel, second of that name, probably will be launched in November, 1942, at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Kearny, N. J.

Miss Fay Doyen Johnson, of Annapolis, will christen the Doyen, named in honor of her grandfather, the late Brig. Gen. Charles A. Doyen, United States Marine Corps. No date has been set for the launching of the Doyen at the plant of Consolidated Steel Corporation, Los Angeles.

Police Boys' Club No. 2 Marks Fourth Year

More than 2,000 boys and their families last night celebrated the fourth anniversary of Police Boys Club No. 2 at club headquarters, Twelfth and U Streets Northwest and heard Police Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger call No. 2 "one of the finest clubs of its kind in the country."

Speakers, who pointed out that the club has grown to be the largest police boys club in the city with more than 8,000 members, and one of the largest colored boys' clubs in the country, included John L. Young, Mrs. G. C. Wilkenson, Mrs. Mary Plummer, Dr. I. N. Cupid, Rufus Byers and Mrs. eMarian Burke.

Red Cross Area Offices To Be Moved

Eastern area headquarters of the American Red Cross will be moved "as soon as possible" from Washington to Alexandria, Va., Gardner L. Boothe, counsel for the society, informed the city council of Alexandria last night.

The offices will be housed in the Portner Building, 600 block of North Asaph Street, which will be remodeled, Boothe said. An addition to the structure also is planned.

Present offices of the Eastern area are in the Red Cross Building in the 300 block of Eighteenth Street Northwest. Increased personnel has caused overcrowding, it was said.

Approximately 240 employes will be affected by the change, Boothe stated. Whether other Red Cross offices also will move could not be immediately learned.

U. S. Fire Defense Tops List, Expert Tells Citizens

George Richardson, secretary of the International Association of Firefighters, told the New Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night that fire prevention preparations in the United States were "far ahead" of other civil defenses.

He said fire defense work would have to mark time while the others caught up.

A nominating committee to draw up a slate of new officers of the association, which met at Barnard School, Fourth and Decatur Streets Northwest, was appointed by Harry Miller, president. Members are Francis Taylor, chairman; Mrs. Arthur Reid, Don Lamborne, Mrs. Dora Leizear and P. J. Ableman.

C. U. Law Debate Winners Named

A team composed of John J. Daunt, jr., George S. Elmore, and Vincent R. Fitzpatrick, last night were adjudged winners in the annual court competition of the Catholic University Law School.

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Harlan F. Stone headed a tribunal of three jurists who heard the debate, dealing with a labor jurisdictional dispute in which an employer sought an injunction against unlawful picketing. The others were Justin Miller, associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals, and Oscar R. Luhring, of District Court.

The Rev. Robert J. White, D. D., outlined the case which was argued in MacMahon Hall. Other students debating were John H. Fanning, John F. X. Gaguin, and James A. Hurley.

Rep. Southoff Criticizes D. C. System

Congress Ought To 'Keep Hands Off' Local Government, Member Asserts

A House member's criticism of Congress for not "keeping its hands off" strictly District affairs yesterday highlighted hearings on the McCarran-Schulte bill to boost the pay of policemen and firemen here by approximately $600 a year.

Five representatives of the fire department and the Metropolitan, Park and White House police appeared in support of the bill. On the side Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers' Association, declared the bill would cost Washington an additional $1,500,000 a year, and asked:

"Where are we going to get the money?"

Criticism of the system under which Washingtonians lack a voice in their local government was delivered by Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, a member of the District police and firemen subcommittee.

Asks About Politics

Sauthoff asked John L. Werheim, president of Local No. 36 of the District Firemen's Association, if "politics" played any part in the activities of the trial boards. Werheim replied in the negative.

Sauthoy remarked upon the excellence of a police department in his home State and observed that it was because "the people won't let the politicians" touch department officials.

"It is unfortunate that people here don't have a voice," Sauthoff declared. "This criticism is not of the department but of Congress because it doesn't keep its hands off and mind its own business."

Representative William Pittenger (Republican), of Minnesota, came before the subcommittee as a representative of "the people here." He urged a favorable report on the bill, stating:

"The District doesn't have any Congressmen of its own. I want to do my part."

No Change Since 1930

Werheim told the subcommittee that there has been no change in police and firemen's pay since 1930 and that rents and other living costs were getting out of the reach of earning capacities of many members of the departments.

Members of the Fire Department, he said, work 60 hours a week and on that basis are paid the "scale of common laborers at 64 cents an hour."

Development of new techniques, he added, have made the fireman's job far more complicated than it was years ago. He estimated $1,237,700 would cover proposed salary rises.

Sitting beside the subcommittee chairman, Represetnative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, was Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan Police superintendent. Schulte is the House author of the bill.

Appear in Court

Lieut. Walter H. Thomas, speaking for the Metropolitan Police, told of the frequency with which policemen are required to perform extra duty and to appear as witness in court, all without additional compensation.

Thomas stated that frequent court continuances were another police burden, citing one intsance in which a case was noctinued 26 times.

"You ought to get after your prosecutor," said Sauthoff, a former prosecuting attorney. "That's pretty lousy work."

Sergt. Paul W. Proctor of the White House Police, asserted that White House social functions a factor in piling up overtime, while George R. Richardson, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Firefighters, cited the need for expert fire protection in a time of national emergency.

Calling attention to bombings of European capitals, Richardson declared:

"We feel that . . . Washington . . . should be the city where men should be of unquestioned ability and integrity. Thus they must have commensurate salaries."

Appearing for the Park Police, Raymond Selby said the large area covered by his department made overtime work necessary.

Facetiously, Lusk declared he represents "more or less the Tories and the well stocked club." He admitted that a good case had been made for the police and firemen, but asked:

"Would it not be advisable to get more policemen—that's on the House, Maj. Brown—or to handle our police force a little more efficiently?"

Women in Overalls Finish Course in Motor Corps Work

LAST EXAM—J. F. Locke, instructor, tests members of the American Women's Volunteer Services on their knowledge of the automobile engine. "Graduates" of 14-week training course are (left to right) Elizabeth McHugh, Nell Tyson, Jean Bernstein, Mrs. Wylie W. Barrow and Eleanor Mulliken

Laughingly the class members called it a "graduation," but they wore overalls, didn't mind having smudges on their cheeks—and it all took place at a filling station.

A dozen women last night completed a 14-week course in running repairs, as part of their preparation in motor corps work for the American Women's Voluntary Services. They met at a filling station at Wisconsin Avenue and Q Street Northwest, where their instructor, J. F. Locke, tested their knowledge of spark plugs, fuel pumps, carburetors and coils.

Although the blue overalls with "A. W. V. S." in red letters on their backs made them look like one-of-a-kind, the group was varied enough to include Mrs. W. W. Barrow, housewife; Eleanor Mulliken, sculptor; Nelle Patterson, teacher at Paul Junior High School; Dorothy Jemison, stenographer at the Navy Yard; Elizabeth McHugh, social worker.

Other members of the class include Jean Bernstein, Katharine L. McKiever, Gretchen Simmons, Nelle Tyson, Caroline Willcox.

The members last night had convinced their teacher that each could change a fan belt or a spark-plug, and could generally locate the trouble if a car balked, for an "elementary cause of motor failure," it was explained.

"Do women have as much aptitude for this sort of tinkering as men?" Locke was asked. A circle of eager overalled pupils hung on his answer. He hesitated a moment and said warily: "Most of 'em do."

The class has to take other courses to qualify for motor corps work, but last night was at least a landmark in its progress.

Washington to Raise $250,000 For Military Men's Recreation

Plans for raising $250,000 as the District's quota in a Nation-wide drive for funds to provide religious, welfare and recreational facilities for the armed forces will get under way today.

At a District Building conference yesterday, Coleman Jennings, former president of the Washington Community Chest, was named chairman of a committee to organize the campaign and nominate permanent personnel.

Sponsored by the United Service Organizations for National Defense, the total national goal has been set at $10,765,000. The drive will begin June 3 with radio appeals by President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie.

More than a score of local welfare and civic leaders met with the Commissioner yesterday. Although the U. S. O. program calls for Washington to raise $145,000, spokesmen at the conference predicted that extra needs would bring the amount to $250,000. A special budget committee will be appointed to study requirements, it was announced.

In addition to Jennings, the planning group includes James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade; Walter Clarkson, president of the Travelers Aid Society, and Robert Bondy, director of public welfare.

The U. S. O. is composed of six organizations—the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., Salvation Army, Jewish Welfare Board, National Catholic Community Service and Travelers Aid Society.

It is planned to establish service clubs and other recreational facilities adjacent to some 300 service training centers across the country.

Maj. Charles Dodd, of the Salvation Army, pointed out that within a short time approximately 100,000 men will be located in camps not far from Washington.

"And," he added, "it is not enough to tell these boys to 'go straight'—we must provide them with facilities."

After the planning conference, Jennings called for cooperation and pledged his committee would immediately begin work.

"This is not an optional thing," Jennings said. "It is something that Washington just has to do. No matter what the need, we will have to go and get it."

Commissioner J. Russell Young, who presided at the meeting, stressed the necessity for speed in organizing the campaign.

Western Students To Stage Fiesta

A "Fiesta Latino-Americana," with songs and dances by Latin Americans, will be presented at Western High School at 8:15 p. m. today by Western Evening School's Good Neighbor Forum.

In tune with the good neighbor policy, representatives of Mexico, Nicaragua, Argentina, Chile, Brazil and Venzuela will perform.

They include Senorita Erma Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador; Senora Lupe Alfaro, niece of the Mexican Ambassador, and Marita de Brito, daughter of Dr. Mario de Brito, supervisor of Brazilian government students in the United States.

Rent Board Possible Here —Roosevelt

President Says Plan Is Under Study; Rates Are Being Investigated

President Roosevelt yesterday admitted that high rents in Washington might necessitate the creation of a rent commission similar to that which regulated housing costs here during the World War.

Although he told his press conference that he had not yet received recommendations for the establishment of a rent-control body, Mr. Roosevelt said he knew the proposal was under study and that it was perfectly possible the city might have to come to such an agency as a solution to the problem.

The President raised the question of housing difficulties here in the course of a discussion of generally mounting prices. Pointing out that generalizations on price rises stimulated by the defense program were meaningless, he cited conversations of a few days ago leading to mutually contradictory conclusions on the local housing situation.

Very Much Aroused

A District citizen, the President related, came to his office very much aroused about the increased rents which faced new Government employes called to Washington on defense work. Immediately following the first visit, Mr. Roosevelt continued, a Congressman paid a White House call and reported that his new secretary had experienced no difficulty whatsoever in finding adequate living quarters here at a price no higher than that paid by the legislator's former secretary.

The President asked which of the two stories was, right, and implied that the only answer lay in adequate statistical information, which, he believed, was in the hands of Government housing agencies.

As a contribution to solving the problem, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced yesterday that it has begun a survey of changes in residential rents during the last year in nearby Maryland and Virginia communites. The study, it was explained, is being made at the request of the National Defense Advisory Commission "because of the increased demand for housing resulting from the influx of workers in connection with national defense activities."

To Be Made Public

The report, which will draw on the information of local chambers of commerce, real estate boards and civic organizations, will be made public when it is completed, the bureau promised.

Meantime, the Defense Housing Coordination Division announced yesterday that the President had approved a temporary shelter program which includes units for 200 families at Aberdeen, Md. The shelter will be demountable dormitories for single workers and trailers for families. They will be used, the division said, only until such time as more permanent housing can be built.

The World War Rent Commission to which President Roosevelt referred, was created by an act of Congress and had power to order rent reductions on complaint from tenants. In the six years of its life it fixed rents in 359 apartment houses and 2,233 dwellings and flats.

Actors' Fund Benefit Set For National on May 11

Will Be Memorial to Late Daniel Frohman; Miss Hepburn Says She Has 'Retired'; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE RECENT LAMENTED PASSING of the beloved Daniel Frohman, dean of American theatrical producers, did not put an end to the Actors' Fund Benefits that have so richly regaled Washington audiences through the years.

BELL

A letter from Keane Waters, so long identified with these worthy enterprises, brings the information that this year the Actors' Fund Benefit will be held in the National Theater on the night of Sunday, May 11. On this occasion it will be presented as a memorial to Mr. Frohman, the nonagenarian who devoted so great a part of his life to the succor of the ailing and the indigent—through no fault of their own—of "the profession."

Walter Vincent, acting president of the Actors' Fund of America, is the chairman of the benefit committee, which also includes Vinton Freedley, Harry Sommers, Warren Munsell and Sam Forrest. Sue Seymour Cooke, another veteran in the service of this admirable charity, will continue as business manager, under Mr. Waters' general direction.

As a foretaste of the caliber of artists who may be expected to appear on this program, Mr. Freedley makes known that Gracie Fields, England's most popular and highest-salaried singing comedienne, already has consented to appear.

There will be much more of this coming along in this space during the next three-quarters of a month.

An added fillip that multiplied the zest of a zestful evening in the theater was discovered at the "Hope for a Harvest" opening, at the National on Monday night, when we glanced across to the other side of the fourth-row-on-the-aisle and saw Katharine Hepburn enthusiastically ensconced between the Theater Guild—which, of course, would be Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner. Miss Hepburn, more or less fresh from her triumphs in the stage and screen versions of "The Philadelphia Story," confided, between the acts, that she had come down to the Capital on the spur of the moment and one of the better trains just to see Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in what she had heard was one of the best plays of the season. In the Marches' duplex dressing rooms, after the performance, she assured all and sundry that she had heard correctly. She had. Asked about her own plans, now that "Philadelphia Story" is out of the way, she was a shade cryptic. "Oh, I've retired," is what she said. "For how long, something like 15 minutes?" The reply was mostly laugh, but had an "I hope so" mixed up in it somewhere. She returned to New York, or Connecticut, or wherever it is she returns to, yesterday.

Where to Lay the Weary Head?

Theresa Helburn had a confession to make, too. She had come to town on that same train and spur of the moment and, once here, found it impossible to secure hotel accommodations. So she was given hospice as house guest in one of Washington's most representative homes, thus depriving future historians of that hallowed line, "On April 21, 1941, Theresa Helburn, one of the founders of the Theater Guild, spent the night on a park bench in Washington, D. C."

Our reception by Mr. March and Miss Eldridge, backstage Monday night, was a trifle disconcerting. "Now don't tell us you're back here to guide us through another long tour through the kitchen entrances of all the Washington hotels!" That harked back to the President's birthday business in 1938. They were swell that night. They still are.

That Jubilee Gets in a Jam

"The best laid plans of mice and men, etc." For instance, RKO-Keith's Theater was to have begun that "May Movie Jubilee" this weekend, but the popularity of "The Devil and Miss Jones" has preempted a third week for that rousing comedy and Loretta Young, in "The Lady from Cheyenne," will have to wait. There will be one important change in the bill's third week. March of Time's "Men of the FBI" will be substituted for its "Australia at War." "Pluto's Playmate," one of Walt Disney's more whimsical Technicolor cartoons, will be continued, as it frivolously and delightfully deserves.

Jubilee or no Jubilee, Keith's could afford to stand on its recent record. Only six feature attractions have been shown in Manager Meakin's Fifteenth Street opera house during the past 17 weeks. That is approximately three weeks to a picture. They must have been good. Or had you heard about that?

The 'Souse American Way' Seems to Please Them

ALICE FAYE AND DON AMECHE

in two of the stellar roles in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "That Night in Rio," coming to Loew's Capitol Theater as chief screen feature of the bill, beginning Thursday. Carmen Miranda, flamboyantly known as "The Brazilian Bombshell," also lends the luster of her beads and bangles to a cast that includes many famous names

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 22 (INS).—Should Maureen O'Hara, by any chance, win an Oscar for her performance as "Angharad" in "How Green Was My Valley," Twentieth Century-Fox won't have to worry about building another studio star. Before Darryl Zanuck ever completed plans to borrow her from R-K-O, he made arrangements to take over half her contract and to share 50-50 with R-K-O.

LOUELLA PARSONS

This is by no means an unusual procedure. Producers hate to build stars whose services belong to other studios. Jack Benny, for instance, has a contract in which both Paramount and Twentieth share. Ida Lupino, who will probably have one of the head femme roles in "How Green Was My Valley," also is under contract to Warners.

These last few days Harriet Parsons has been surrounded by scripts, reading stories for her first feature movie for Republic. She signed a new contract with M. J. Siegel which calls for her services as producer, director and writer—one of the few three-way contracts in the industry.

When you see the way John Halliday lives in Honolulu with his comfortable ranch, his pleasant neighbors and his fishing boat, you can not blame him for hating to leave that garden spot of the world. He has turned down more offers for movies than any actor I know, but now he's back in town working in the Merle Oberon picture, "Illusions."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Geza Herczeg, Hungarian playwright, is expected to wed Mrs. Arthur Minnich, widow of the late New York financier, immediately after his divorce. He leaves for Reno next week to obtain his legal freedom, having been separated from Mrs. Herczeg for a long time; Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul are honeymooning at the Santa Barbara Biltmore; Ben Alexander, former juvenile star and now in radio, will marry Elizabeth Robb, nonprofessional, late in July.

Paul Sunday, son of the late Evangelist, Billy Sunday, is critically ill; Jackie Coogan in town on leave from Camp Roberts; Bettye Avery and Orrin Lehman, nephew of the Governor of New York, have said au revoir to romance and will not wed in June; the dinner given by the Don Ameches at their valley home will long be remembered. Spaghetti, such as you dream about with Don mixing the sauce, cooked for two days, was the piece de resistance. The Danny Dankers, the Robert Youngs, Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown, the Walter Langs, Eloise and Pat O'Brien, Chet Louck were a few of those who enjoyed the Ameche hospitality.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Blackout' At the Little

By Richard L. Coe

In "Blackout" the British studios again demonstrate their facility at yarn-spinning—a devious gift curiously whetted by "blood, sweat and tears." The latest to come Washington's way, opening at the Little this morning, is an espionage thriller of the "Night Train," "The Lady Vanishes" variety, but replacing the humor of those successes with an uncanny sense of atmosphere.

Sea scenes, ships at dusk and dawn, the bleak harbors where once the Atlantic greyhounds called but are now the ghostly settings for an unknown present, all these things set the mood for a tale that begins slowly and builds steadily into a baffling chase. At first one wonders just which side is to be "ours."

Conrad Veidt is a neutral sea captain, Valerie Hobson his most recalcitrant passenger. The Danish vessel is stopped by contraband control, told to hold port for clearance and allowed two passes for shore leave. When both of these are stolen from the captain's cabin, the chase begins, a near-rout that takes the story to London and the heart of the Nazi spy ring.

It's all done in that cold, factual fashion which seems to be England's own. While the general result is not up to the incomparable "Night Train," its atmosphere and shrewd camera effects are far finer than any in that "sleeper." Source of this decided merit is Director Michael Powell, who also coauthored the script.

Nor is the newcomer's atmosphere confined to its sea scenes. A startlingly real Waterloo Station greets the darkened train, a salesman does a brisk trade with his electric torches, heavy curtains mask crowded restaurants where enforced gayety is the order of the evening and A. R. P. officers patrol the streets dousing Mr. Edison's invention. Besides its story, "Blackout" thus depicts a London only recent travelers know.

The cast is obedient to the traditions of British thrillers, which Director Powell generally observes. Beside Stars Veidt and Hobson, Hay Petrie, Esmond Knight, Raymond Lovell, Charles Victor and Paddy Browne are others of importance in the action—and engrossing action it is.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywod, April 22.

In RKO's "Parachute Battalion" you'll see American training methods compared with the German. Two reels of Nazi propaganda, seized by the Government en route to South America, have been cut into the footage. The Germans guide their flight with their bodies; our boys have the advantage of guide ropes on their chutes. This picture will show you war is not a game—it's hell.

At last Bill Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" opened here. By the end of the first act, the entire audience argued on the meaning, if any, of his play; but at the end, play got thunderous applause.

Here's a honey on Greta Garbo, whose salary is $25,000 a week. She was supposed to begin her latest picture eight months ago. The story wasn't ready, so she waived her salary. Another starting date was set, and they're still not ready. So Greta, thinking her salary should begin, quietly came into the studio the other day and in order to get up courage to beard the producer in his den, stepped in a little room next his office. When Sam Behrman, who's writing the story, hurriedly went into that room, you can imagine his amasement when there stood Greta. He said, "What on earth are you doing HERE?" Without turning around, she said, "I'm just looking at the view." And the view was a blank wall mixed with a lot of plumbing.

Universal dined the photographers the other night to discuss plans for photographing Deanna Durbin's wedding. When Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque were married years ago, a newsreel camera was hidden in the balcony of the church, which created some unpleasant comment. The Durbins don't want that to happen to Deana.

Well, Melvyn Douglas is making headlines again. Understand he signed his name to the petition protesting the deportation of one Harry Bridges.

Milton Berle had written down 40-odd new gags (what do you mean—new?), and someone lifted the whole batch. "I'm used to having my gags stolen," said Milton, "but I hate to lose the paper."

History repeating itself! When I complimented Ann Sothern on the nifty little bonnet she wears in "Lady Be Good," she said, "And would you believe it, Hedda, it's an exact replica of one my grandmother used to wear." And to prove it, she showed me a photograph of her granny, taken 50 years ago, wearing that hat.

A New Drama, Fresh Films Mark Week

"SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE." Although its subscription season in the Capital is ending this week with Sophie Treadwell's "Hope for a Harvest," the Theatre Guild is presenting its final production of the season Monday evening in the National Theater for a week's run prior to its New York engagement. This new drama by Carl Zuckmayer and Fritz Kortner, both outstanding in the middle European theater of pre-Nazi days, concerns France during 1939 and 1940. The scene is an inn, near Rheims, whose patrons are caught in the backwash of war. Dudley Digges has the leading role in a notable cast including Walter Slezak, Karen Morley, Alexander Knox, Wesley Addy, Arlene Francis, Art Smith and Flora Campbell. Worthington Miner has directed and the setting is by Watson Barratt. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Palace

Earle

"PENNY SERENADE." Irene Dunne and Cary Grant are costarred in this story of the music store salesgirl who marries an irresponsible reporter half-hour before he sails for the Orient on an important assignment. Beulah Bondi, Edgar Buchanan, Ann Doran, Eve Lee Kuney and Leonard Willey are featured. Joe Cook tops the stage revue, bringing with him his comical associates of "It Happens on Ice"—Sir Geoffrey Hale, Will Ritchie, Charles Senna and the Juggling Deweys. Lane and Ward and the Roxyettes complete the stage bill. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"THAT NIGHT IN RIO." Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Carmen Miranda star in this Technicolor comedy with music by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, who wrote the songs for "Down Argentine Way." Among other activities, Miss Miranda introduces the popular Brazilian dance, the Samba. On the stage, Lew Parker headlines a revue titled "Fashions of 1941," with Sid Gold, Alphonse Berg, Peggy Bernier and the Four Coeds. Lynn Allison sings with Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestra and Art Brown returns with his organized singing. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"MAN MADE MONSTER." With Lon Chaney, jr., in a role reminiscent of those played by his father, this horror tale concerns a scientific genius who transforms a friendly and affectionate human into a "super-charged monster." Lionel Atwill, Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson and Samuel S. Hinds are others in the cast. "Wings of Steel," a Technicolor film detailing the training of air pilots, shares top billing with Tom Neal, Herbert Anderson and Ralph Byrd heading the cast of the new short subject. Opens Friday morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE DEVIL AND MISS JONES." Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn and Robert Cummings continue on Fifteenth Street for a third week in this highly-praised comedy of a department store executive and his labor troubles. On Friday the latest "March of Time" issue, "Men of the FBI—1941" will succeed the current release, "Australians at War." Walt Disney's "Pluto's Playmate" also is on the bill.

Columbia

"MEN OF BOYS TOWN." The Mickey Rooney-Spencer Tracy film returns to F Street after two weeks at the Palace. This is a sequel to their earlier success based on Father Flanagan's model experiment, "Boys Town." Larry Nunn, Bobs Watson and Lee J. Cobb top the supporting cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"GROWING UP." The Dionne quintuplets' first film in a year and a half finds the noted 7-year-olds subject of a brief biography narrated by Dr. Allen Roy Dafoe. Their part in Britain's war effort is pictured in this incoming short subject at the newsreel house. "The Life of an Ant," a magnified nature study, and a color cartoon also are on the bill. Opens Friday morning.

Glen Echo

A SECOND WEEK of incomparable weather finds the amusement park already at top speed. While the swimming pool is not yet open, more than 50 amusements are available from 1 p. m. until midnight, including dance music in the Spanish Garden ballroom from 9 p. m. until closing by Paul Kain's orchestra, with vocals by Adele Van.

Gayety

"TOP HATTERS." Marian Miller stars in the incoming burlesque revue opening Sunday afternoon, with Charlie Kemper and Dick Richards in the leading comedy roles. Bess Calvert, Jean Lee, George Hagerty, Jess Mack and Jack Curtis are the other principals. Georgia Sothern, this week's headliner, continues at the Gayety through Saturday's midnight performance.

Open-Air

"TRAIL OF THE VIGILANTES." This genial spoofing of the exciting dramas of the great open spaces shares the outdoor screen with "Sandy Gets Her Man" for a three night run beginning tomorrow evening. Franchot Tone and Broderick Crawford head the cast of the horse opera. "Spring Parade," starring Deanna Durbin, and "Slightly Tempted," with Hugh Herbert, conclude their run tonight

James Strates Shows

THE JAMES E. STRATES SHOWS conclude a ten-day visit Saturday evening. The Carnival is pitched at Fourth Street and Florida Avenue Northeast, featuring Zacchini, the "human cannonball," and an aggregation of 500 performers. Saturday is Children's Day, offering reduced rates to the youngsters on all attractions.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 22.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: The job of heading the Nation's Home Defense Bureau—which you declined, when the President offered it to you last Tuesday—therefore will go to William C. Bullitt, the former Ambassador to France . . . Col. Frank Knox: On May 15, Nelson Rockefeller's Pan-American Committee will release for South American distribution a Spanish magazine called "Defense." It will feature color-photos of our fleet—with descriptives of American might—to counteract the Nazi propaganda in those countries.

LEONARD LYONS

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN: Your daughter, Kathleen, who has been working in New York, will leave here this week, to join your staff in London.

J. P. Morgan: One of the officers of your company still treasures an old card of his, which he still carries—card which denoted membership in the I. W. W. . . . Col. Bill Donovan: When Capt. James Roosevelt leaves the Orient, he'll head westward and try, as much as possible, to cover the same territory you did—as the President's personal representative.

CLARE BOOTHE: Elsa Maxwell has been seeking a tiny pig, to fit into an orchid-box, as a going-away present, when you leave for China. She'd like one similar to the pig-in-the-orchid-box which you presented to her, when she left for Monte Carlo. Elsa gave that pig to King Gustav of Sweden, who returned it because it grew up and killed two of his dogs. Then it killed 24 of Elsa's chickens.

FRANCES PERKINS: On the day Martin Gumpert dellevered the final chapters of his autobiography, "First Papers," he also filed his final citizenship papers . . . Elmer Rise: Horace Braham, who was featured in your "Street Scene," has an old actress-aunt living in London. When she finally was persuaded to leave the city for a safer place in the country, the railroad station was bombed just as the train had pulled out. The venerable actress looked back at the flaming station, and sighed: "What an Exit." . . . George Abbott: Your employe, Ezra Stone, now is your daughter's boss. Judy is working with Ezra in his "Aldrich Family" program.

NORMA TALMADGE: Last week George Jessel was introduced to Mr. Justice Douglas, of the United States Supreme Court. Jessel related the trouble he's having, trying to sell his Hollywood home—about his wife being a minor, necessitating the appointment of a guardian, and a suit vs. that guardian; then, because your Mexican divorce against him isn't recognized, your delivering a quitclaim deed; and then the final discovery that inasmuch as you had a Mexican divorce from Schenck, before marrying George, Schenck's signature was necessary too, etc., etc. "What does it sound like to you, Judge?" Jessel asked the jurist . . . "To me," ruled Mr. Justice Douglas (Robert J. and Hughes, C. J., probably dissenting), "it sounds like a WPA project for lawyers."

JACK DEMPSEY: Another famous former champion will invade the Broadway district—Tony Canzoneri, who is negotiating for the defunct Hurricane night-club . . . Lord Halifax: The Ranee of Sarawak, who has been working here only to pay her current expenses and fare back to Britain, states that there will never be another white Rajah of Sarawak. After her husband's death, the rule will revert to Great Britain . . . Maury Paul: Miss Harvey Brown, of the Social Register, won the Sunday night audition at El Morocco, and will sing there for one week—at $100. This is the first money she's ever earned . . . Danny Kaye: You and Artie Shaw will receive the Advertising Club's 1941 Awards—Order of the Rake—for young men who've made their mark.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD: Plans are being made for the foremost radio comics to broadcast each week from various Army camps. Jolson, Cantor and Jack Benny are expected to start the practice . . . Secretary Stimson: Here's a heroic Army note: One of the chefs at Fort Bragg discovered that he had measles—a few days before the soldiers expected their Easter furloughs. The chef therefore hid for four days, in the hope that the boys would get their vacation. But he was discovered, and the quarantine was ordered.

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE: Doesn't your lawyer, Fanny Holtzmann, expect to leave with you—when you return to London? . . . Emily Post: When the polygamous Prince of Nepal was asked what would happen if he married Honeychil' Wilder, he confessed "I'd just be in a helluva mess."

NOEL COWARD: At Saturday night's benefit show, stripteaser Ann Corio's complete costume was auctioned off. Bramwell Fletcher and Melville Cooper purchased most of it—including the most intimate items. When they were asked what they planned doing with those items, Cooper replied: "Send it to Winston Churchill as an indication that America really means all-out aid."

MIKE JACOBS: RCA's world premiere of its large-screen television will be the telecasting of the Soose-Overlin championship fight . . . James Cagney: Elia Kazan, who made his film debut with you as the gangster in "City for Conquest" has been signed by Warners, for a role in "Hot Nocturne." Kazan, who wanted to forego his acting career, had arranged to co-produce and direct this play on Broadway last season—until Warners withdrew its backing.

BASEBALL WRITERS ASSOCIATION: Last year Sports-Columnist Jack Miley wrote that Tex Carleton, the pitcher, was finished, and should give his arm to the Smithsonian Institution. The next day Carleton pitched a no-hit no-run game. Miley never forgave him, and stopped speaking to Tex—until yesterday, when Carleton approached him, and informed that he is going back to Texas, as a radio announcer. Miley, who became a free-lancer on Saturday, told Tex: "Now we both got waivers." And so Carleton has offered him a job as an assistant—a job which he may accept.

University Theater

"COOK BOOK." The Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University's annual musical opens a week's run at the University Theater on the campus tonight, with Joe Cook, the comedian whose biography it is, in the audience. The musical thus follows the pattern set last year by the widely-discussed "Yankee Doodle Boy." Leo Brady, Marion Walberg, James Graham, Frank Spitzig, Lois Barlow, Lionel Booth, George Burst and Kay Becker head the large cast.

Joe Cook Here For Opening Of 'Cook Book'

"Joe Cook" and Joe Cook got together yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel to compare notes.

One of them, Broadway's original "one man show" who has been making people laugh from coast to coast since 1896, is here to give a bit of advice to the other—whose real name is Leo Brady, a senior at Catholic University and "Joe Cook" in the C. U. Harlequin's production of "Cook Book," a musical show based on the actor's life.

The production, staged in 20 scenes, opens tonight at Catholic University. In addition to playing the lead, Brady coauthored the show with Walter Kerr, another student.

As guests of local Warner Brothers representatives at the Raleigh yesterday, "Joe" and Joe for the first time met to talk things over. But the original Cook said he didn't want to know too much about the presentation.

"I'd rather wait," he said, "and let my past come as a surprise."

The actor will attend opening night. He appeared very pleased yesterday that Brady was to portray him in the show.

"Why," said Cook, "he looks more like me than I ever looked."

Father Gilbert V. Hatrke, of the C. U. speech and drama department, who is directing the show, predicts big things in the theater for Brady. The 24-year-old student-actor-author is probably the only collegian in the country who is spending full-time on an academic education while learning the theater from the ground up.

"Not only is he learning to be an actor, but he is learning to spell at the same time," quipped comedian Cook.

Brady has been in Washington ten years. He was born in Wheeling, W. Va., but calls himself a "native" of the District. He recently received national recognition for his part in adapting for stage purposes "Brother Orchid," a short story by Richard Connell, Warner Brothers script writer, which was recently produced in movie form. Last year he and Kerr wrote C. U.'s production of "Yankee Doodle Boy," a story of the life of George M. Cohan.

Joe Cook opens Friday with his own show at the Earle Theater, but came to Washington a few days in advance to confer at rehearsals and attend the opening night of "Cook Book."

Seven Who Were Moaning Cross Bar After All

Seven students who missed passing the December bar examination by a slight margin were informed yesterday that they are entitled to become lawyers just the same.

Moved to compassion by the toll taken of 703 applicants—only 249 passed—the District Court's committee on admissions reconsidered the examination papers of 30 who had barely missed success.

Col. Walter C. Clephane, chairman of the committee, yesterday announced admission of these seven:

Paul T. O'Donoghue, son of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, 2303 California Street Northwest; Dennis Chavez, jr., son and secretary of the Democratic Senator from New Mexico, 2718 Cortland Place Northwest; James A. Purcell, jr., Municipal Court attache, 4714 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest; John R. Brasel, 3832 Garfield Street Northwest; James Robert Harris, Arlington, Va.; Marshall Carpenter, Arlington, and Wilfred Montague Dyer, jr., 2726 Woodley Place Northwest.

Destroyer Joins Fleet

Boston, April 22 (AP).—Uncle Sam added another destroyer today to his fast growing navy.

The U. S. S. Wilkes, named in honor of Rear Admiral Charles Wilkes, who commanded a round-the-world exploring expedition in 1838-1842, was commissioned at the Boston Navy Yard.

C.I.O. Council Here Assails Navy Yard

The Washington Navy Yard yesterday was accused of "discriminatory, illegal and antilabor practices" by the Washington Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.) in a petition demanding rerating of Paul Wills, a laborer, on the basis of his operating a battery crane.

His job calls for a rating of helper-general, which the Navy Yard has refused to give him, according to the council. Lieut. J. P. Bernard, aide to the Navy Yard commandant, said last night that he knows nothing about the case and that virtually all workers there "are well satisfied in their jobs."

Halifax to Open British Art Exhibit Today

Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, will open an exhibition of contemporary British painting at 4 p. m. today at the Phillips Memorial Gallery, 1600 Twenty-first Street Northwest, the British Embassy announced yesterday.

The Ambassador will be introduced by Duncan Phillips, director of the gallery. The exhibition is sponsored by the British-American Art Gallery of New York City.

Mobilization of Nation's Schools Is Urged For All-Out Training of Workers for Defense

A call for mobilization of the Nation's schools for an immediate "all-out" training job for defense workers was sounded in a joint statement issued yesterday by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District public schools, and 16 other educators on the 1941 Occupational Education Tour, which had reached Seattle.

"School systems must not wait for factories and shipyards to be built before they start training men and women for defense industries," said the statement, carried by the Associated Press.

"School administrators must anticipate immediate and future needs. They must act with all speed if this country is to meet the greatest threat the civilized world has ever known.

"In many localities defense job training is already on a 24-hour basis. Any school system which has lagged does not fully realize the gravity of the program of defense activity that lies ahead.

"Lack of machinery must not cause school superintendents to delay. Programs can be started despite this handicap. Even without machines, there can be preliminary training. Some schools are building their own machines. Every available machine anywhere should be placed in use immediately in public school vocational shops."

The tour concluded in Seattle more than a week's study of defense job training in the West, with funds provided by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. David E. Wegelin, Baltimore; Alexander J. Stoddard, Philadelphia, and Ben G. Graham, Pittsburgh, were among the other school superintendents on the tour.

Court Aide Pleads Guilty in Thefts

James E. Sullivan, former Police Court bailiff, pleaded guilty yesterday to charges that he collected fines from traffic law violators and put the money in his pockets.

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse said Sullivan would testify against Joseph R. Burke, former Police Court deputy clerk who is under indictment on similar charges.

Sullivan pleaded guilty as both men were about to go on trial before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in the District Court. Justice Letts postponed Burke's trial to May 5 at the request of his attorney, James J. McLaughlin.

To Be Observed Today Shakespeare's Birthday

William Shakespeare's 377th birthday will be celebrated at the Folger Shakespeare Library here at 8:30 p. m. today when Allardyce Nicoll, Yale University professor of the history of the drama, will speak on "Shakespeare's Experiments in Evil."

A reception for Prof. Nicoll will be held in the reading room.

Cook Indicted For Murder In Dress Shop

William T. Munforde, 20, colored cook, was indicted yesterday on a charge of first-degree murder in the death of Miss Fannie Cohen, 62, in the holdup of her dress shop at 1512 U Street Northwest the night of February 15.

He is scheduled to be arraigned in the District Court Friday.

The indictment was one of 49 presented before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

The charges against those indicted were:

Many Doctors Offer Services To Great Britain

American Red Cross national headquarters here was deluged yesterday by telegraph and telephone queries resulting from a call earlier in the week for American doctors to volunteer for duty in Great Britain.

A New Yorker flew to Washington to register in person. Recently returned from Australia, where he completed post-graduate work in surgery, he told the Red Cross:

"If England needs doctors, I want to be among the first to volunteer."

Another candidate wired from Chicago: "Bags are packed, ready to leave. When and where do I report?"

Meantime, the Red Cross is establishing a central clearing house for applications. Dr. George D. Williams, who is in charge, said the Red Cross has taken on a staff of ten to make a preliminary check of applications before they are turned over to the National Research Council's division of medical sciences for verification.

Ringside Table

... With Mary Harris

THE CORDIAL COUNT. A real count now greets you in the Anchor Room. He's Louis Demme, of amazing international background. His French ancestors went to Rome early in the thirteenth century to become officers in the papal guard. Within a few years one of them was created a count by the reigning Pope. When Peter the Great of Russia visited the Vatican he promptly snapped up the current Count Demme as a military instructor for his comparatively untrained armies. The counts Demme resided in Russia from the days of Peter until the Red revolution, but always regarded themselves as French. Like many other aristocrats, Count Louis went into the restaurant business and forgot his title. He's roved from smart spots in London to Montreal and the Bahamas. As the Anchor Room's new manager, he prefers to skip his ancestry, says, "Just call me Louis."

It's a baby boy at Paul Young's. He bounced in with a lusty bawl on Sunday eve. Proud papa Paul is chortling, "Now I'm starting to raise my own emcees."

A NICKEL FROM THE VICE PRESIDENT. Gene Archer and his accompanist, Johnny Hartsfield, who decorated the Neptune Room last winter, were on the same train with Vice President Wallace last week. Said Johnny, "So you're the Vice President! Would you mind giving me a nickel?" Mr. Wallace not only complied with a grin, but mentioned the gift over the radio that evening. But Gene has been complaining ever since. It seems that Johnny clutches that nickel in his hand all the time—even when he's playing piano.

CAVALLARO'S FAMED IN KANSAS CITY. Comes a letter from a Washington leddy visiting in Kansas City, saying that all good Kansascitans rush to their radios at the witching hour of 11:30 for Carmen Cavallaro's broadcast and besieged her for particulars about the Cosmos Room.

OUR FAVORITE MAGAZINES. The Mayflower Log. Cover of the April issue combines realism and surrealism. There's also a handsome dividend in a separate map of Washington keyed to indicate important points of interest . . . The Madrillon Gourmet. Host Peter Borras writes it from cover to cover, gives a Proustian flavor to reminiscences and descriptions of cuisine . . . The Beverage Bulletin, a compendium of business developments in niteries, with legal sidelights by "Jiggs" Donohue and an occasional rousing editorial by Milton Kronheim.

Paul Kain's Glen Echo band is hoping for an early opening of Echo's Crystal Pool. They're planning to cool off each evening before they warm up in the Spanish Garden Ballroom . . . Coming out of the Metronome Room we noted that the Wardman Park pool is being shined up for an early opening.

LOTUS BULLETINS. A razzle-dazzle, over-size revue for next week is being cooked up by Manager Dick Lam. New Manhattan stars, dimpled dancers and maybe (we hope, we hope) a Chinese swing songstress . . . Buddy Shaner will give a birthday party on Sunday for his year-old son, Danny. And he'd better sing "Danny Boy." Or how about "Daniel in the Lion's Den?" . . . Blonde Kay and Kay, boy and girl hand balancers, are setting Lotuseers agasp with new flashes of dare-devilry.

MARJORIE GAINSWORTH, whose Troika engagement has been extended to May 8

"TINKLE DANCE." Caperton and Carroll, dancing at the Shoreham, use champagne glasses as chimes in their "Tinkle Dance." It's so contagious that all the customers join in the glass tinkling. Shoreham approval of C. and C. is confirmation of the good opinions they gathered in Florida where they broke all records at the Miami-Biltmore with a solid 10-week engagement.

HITHER AND THITHER. There's a big bonus of dance music in the Rainbow Room at afternoon cocktail time. You can trip to your pet tunes from 5 o'clock clear through to 8:30 . . . Smart Fred Johansen, owner of the Silver Fox, has produced some new tricks in lighting. Coral, orange and lemon light now suffuses the Silver Fox ceiling, contrasts warmly with the symphonic blues of the walls . . . Many folks from the Pan-American Union go to the King Cole Room to enjoy the authentic Mexican songs of Vicente de la Garza . . . Pete Smith, maitre d'hotel at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street, was in charge of the Congressional Club for ten years, has been in Washington since 1916 . . . Esquires who participate in the "boompsa-daisy" in the Pall Mall Room, get a thrill out of having their Gay 90's mustaches adjusted by Dancer Dorothy Pond . . . Van Taylor, of Restaurant "823," both looks and sings like Don Alfonso Zelaya, who has often appeared at the Earle Theater . . . Jose and Paquita, of La Salle Versailles, say that it was one of the biggest moments of their lives when they danced at Founder's Day at West Point last year.

"Brownie" (William S. Brown) who's led the orchestra at Kavakos Grill for the last five years, is off to the British West Indies for Uncle Sam. Bill Kavakos is now trying to pick himself a new maestro.

PEOPLE TELL US.—That Jerry Junkin's singing at Ciro's Famous Village is of splendid light operatic caliber . . . That they wish drummer Buff Amorosi, of the Casino Royal, would sing at more frequent intervals because his voice has "that certain something" . . . That the trick trumpet of Mayfair's George McGivern sends them "out of the world" . . . That violinist Michel, of the new Plymouth, has them weeping in their cocktails when he plays "A Gypsy Made His Violin Cry" . . . That they're coolly glad Jimmy Sumerville and his Four M's are to stay on at the Hi Hat . . . That they don't know what they'll do for rare Hawaiian music when Don Carper's Four leaves the Cafe Caprice.

HARVEST IN APRIL. Regardless of calendar time, River Bend celebrates "Harvest Night" every Friday night in the year. And what a harvest! Home made pies, cakes and what-nots for the lucky customers. All this on top of a big evening of dancing to George Stein's rhythms.

DON WILSON and his celesta have joined the Rodd Raffell Orchestra at Nightingale. Don is also a pianist and arranger. You'll enjoy his fresh version of "I Understand." He's a grad of the University of Iowa, where he majored in psychology.

2 Flee Meade Guard House, Held in Car Theft

Two soldiers accused of escaping from the Fort Meade guardhouse were seized yesterday and turned over to military authorities by the Prince Georges County police.

The soldiers, Theodore Gray, 18, 1457 Harvard Street Northwest, and Lawrence Angolia, 1311 Otis Place Northwest, who gave his age as 18, were captured by Policeman Richard A. Pearson after the car in which they were riding, crashed into a pole at Hyattsville. Police said the car belonged to the Laurel Motor Co.

Pearson, off duty, was standing in front of a Hyattsville restaurant, when he was sighted by Gray, who knew him. The soldiers attempted to turn the corner at the intersection to avoid him but hit the pole on the corner instead, police said.

With the aid of Dr. Martin A. Keane, of Riverdale, police physician, Pearson caught the pair when they attempted to escape on foot. Dr. Keane treated Gray for injuries sustained in the crash.

Capt. Hoover Corrects Report On Golf Courses

The Welfare and Recreational Association has no connection "whatsoever" with Washington's public golf courses, Capt. F. W. Hoover, association general manager, pointed out in a statement to The Post yesterday.

In Tuesday's paper, The Post, in an account of hearings to be held next week by the House subcommittee on parks and recreation, stated that the association two years ago let leases for the golf courses. The statement was incorrect. The leases were let to the S. G. Loeffler Operating Co. by the National Park Service.

From the operation of recreational activities in the parks last year, including swimming pools, tennis courts, boating and bicycling, the association suffered a loss of nearly $9,000, Capt. Hoover stated.

Dietrich Near No-Hitter as Chisox Win

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

From this distance, the May 3 Kentucky Derby is a fine muddle, which does not displease the folks who operate Churchill Downs. Their panic sets in when the pre-race situation comes up crystal clear and presents a stand-out favorite that knocks the suspense out of Derby Day. The track operators want their Derby picture scrambled, like our metaphors.

POVICH

That's what they have 11 days before the band strikes up My Old Kentucky Home and calls the expensive horseflesh on the track, a wide-open free-for-all. No Bimelech, no Johnstown is around to obscure the opposition in this year's race and reduce it to a seeming formality. The horse that does wind up as the betting favorite will go to the post as the highest-priced public choice in years. At least seven horses will command a heavy play in the betting. It's wonderful, says General Manager Matt Winn, and if he doesn't say it, he's thinking it.

The Derby got a fine stimulant the other day up in New York. Curious Coin and Dispose, two steeds who were bolting into something like stand-out favoritism were rudely deflated. They couldn't finish in the money in the Experimental Handicap at Jamaica, won by Mettlesome, a nag whose owner hadn't even bothered to enter him in the Derby. Dispose and Curious Coin will go to Churchill Downs next week, but they won't be going as exactly stylish steeds.

However, Dispose and Curious Coin will not be without their backers despite the Jamaica incident. Down in Florida six weeks ago they showed that they could go the route when they finished one-two, heads apart in the mile and an eighth Flamingo Handicap. Up in New York they were racing only six furlongs, and the Derby is a mile and a quarter. Dispose, out of the distance-running Discovery, will like that route, or at least ought to.

The same day that saw the ignominious defeat of Dispose and Curious Coin, turned up an entirely new Derby threat. He is Robert Morris, the son of Jacopo trained by Major Tom McCreavey. On the same afternoon, Robert Morris outran such older horses as Hash and Fenelon to win the mile and sixteenth Excelsior Handicap. Horsemen place great store in a three-year-old's ability to beat his elders at any stage of the campaigning. Robert Morris, bought at the Saratoga Sales for only $3,000, and threatening to be a bargain, dropped suddenly from 100 to 1 to 20 to 1 in the future book following the race.

Still rated a serious factor in the race is the Calumet Farm's Whirlaway, the Blenheim II colt who took on added luster last week by winning an allowance race at Keeneland in Kentucky. Whirlaway is the "if" horse of the field, a confirmed in and outer. He has a pernicious habit of running wide at the turns and his backers will be gambling that he won't on May 3. His stretch rush is his greatest asset and if he is among the leaders after the last run, it would be comforting to have a bet on him.

One of the seven first flight contenders seems definitely to be carrying a hex into the race. He is the Woodvale Farm's Our Boots, which may have had the ill luck to win the Belmont Futurity as a 2-year-old. No winner of that race has ever won the Derby. His daddy, Pompey, won the Futurity and fizzled in the Derby. So did a half brother, Pompoon. So did Top Flight, a winter book Derby favorite. Our Boots demonstrated he is sharp when he won an allowance race at Keeneland Saturday, but on May 3 he'll have to lick tradition.

Speaking of tradition, if any unseen forces figure in the Derby outcome, the winner can very well turn up in Charles S. Howard's Porter's Cap. The son of the Porter has much to recommend him anyway. He romped away from 3-year-olds in the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby during the winter, and the other day he licked Little Beans to win the Chesapeake Stakes at the Graw. That's a good race for Derby candidates to win, the Chesapeake. Three of them have gone on from that race to win Derbys, in contrast to the Derby fortunes of Belmont Futurity winers. War Admiral, Cavalcade and Whiskery shipped from winning races in the Chesapeake to winning races in the Derby.

Up in New York, Ogden Phipps has entered the Derby picture with his once lightly-regarded King Cole, a Pharamond II colt which romped home by 3½ lengths in the Paumonok Handicap two weeks ago. Johnston won that race before going on to his Derby victory in 1939. It was only a six furlong affair, but Phipps thinks enough of his nag to pay a supplementary fee of $1,500 to enter him in the Preakness, a week after the Derby.

And that's the Derby picture, a fine, unrecognizable blur that is making the Churchill Downs folks happy.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 22—Well, fellows, wasn't that tough luck about Fritzie Zivic? The wise old welterweight titleholder nonchalantly dropped a decision to Mike Kaplan in Boston the other night and now Fritzie will have to fight him all over again in front of a full house . . . Bobby Feller will get $1,000 for appearing on Eddie Cantor's radio program, a la Tommy Harmon. Will that bar Bobby from the All Star game on professionalism charges? Incidentally, he'll get $2,000 if he pitches a no-hitter between now and the night of the broadcast . . . Johnny Paycheck suddenly lost 25 pounds after entering upon his year of military duty. Maybe the KP looks like Joe Louis.

CONSIDINE

Judge Landis is letting his hair grow and stepping on his hat twice a day, getting ready for his appearance at Washington's first night game next month . . . The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will play a return engagement when Jones-Hagen-Armour-Sarazen play in Washington in August. We trust that during their sightseeing they'll neglect Wally's old home in Baltimore where the proprietor was charging two bits to peek at the plumbing . . . George Riley, who was host to thousands of ball players while managing hotels along the big league stops, has quit a profitable job as manager of New Orleans' biggest hotel to accept a commission as major in the ordnance division.

Who Said it Takes Two Hands to Play Ball

The American League won't permit its players to endorse cigaretts beer, wine or whisky. Which leads us to wonder how Frank McCormick is managing to field so well this year, with that pack of cigs in his mitt . . . Glad to see old Mike Ryba win a game for the Red Sox . . . wonder what kind of odds you could have gotten a couple weeks ago that Feller, Newsom, Derringer, Walters, Leonard and Higbe would lose their opening games, and that the Giants would start off with five in a row?

Alice Marble writes, "what a tour we're on! Never a dull moment. We're still alive after 46 matches, out of which I've won 43 and Mary (Hardwick) 3, much to my Chagrin. Playing under lights is pretty glamorous. Bill Tilden never fails to amaze and amuse us. He has played some really beautiful tennis and all of us enjoy being with him. He and Teach (Eleanor Tennant, Alice's coach) are doing a lot of fine work in the tennis clinics they hold in each town. Tilden's name is still magic. He was playing Don Budge recently and I overheard a woman in the audience say, 'that red-headed boy is a right fine player.' The man next to her laughed and said, 'why, that's Don Budge.' The woman wasn't impressed. 'I don't care what his name is. He's nearly as good as Mr. Tilden.' At the moment, I'm suffering under a dryer, to look pretty for the people of Youngstown. What a dog's life we women lead!"

Draper Proved It to the Justice

Paul Draper, the great dancer, is an incorrigible sports fan with a strong leaning toward racing cars. He has a Mercedes. He got arrested not long ago for doing 115 M. P. H. along an open road. He was fined $100 but the old Justice of the Peace got so interested in the car, after fining Draper, that he asked him to go up the road a ways and come by the JP's cottage, a' hellin'! Paul got a mile up the road and came by at a little over 100 M. P. H., and the JP slapped his knee in glee and waved Paul on . . . It is trite to repeat that horse racing is big business, but its truth strikes you every time Herbert Bayard Swope releases the N. Y. State Racing Commission's statistics. New Yorkers bet $5,786,152 during the first seven days at Jamaica. That meant such things as $337,506.30 to the State, a daily average attendance of 18,920, a daily average bet per person of $43.68 and $6.24 per person per race. If New York keeps up that average of $826,593 bet for the first seven days, the total handle for the racing year will come to $143,653,775 . . . What a wide open Derby field! How could you choose now among Porter's Cap, Robert Morris, Our Boots, Whirlaway, Dispose? . . . We're off for Keeneland today to see Our Boots and Whirlaway run in the Blue Grass Stakes, probably their last trial.

Greenberg And York Get Only Blows

Single and Home Run Spoil Hall of Fame Victory for Chicago's Right Hander in 9th

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 22.—Bill Dietrich, 31-year-old Chicago White Sox pitcher, stood at the door of baseball's Hall of Fame a second time today only to have Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, of the Detroit Tigers, slam it shut in his face and force him to settle for a 6-to-3 victory.

DIETRICH

The bespectacled Sox right-hander, who pitched a no-hitter to beat the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 0, on June 1, 1937, had a second such achievement in the majors within his grasp until with one out in the last of the ninth Greenberg singled and York hit a homer after an error put a man on.

Thanks largely to a collapse of Detroit's infield in the fifth, the Sox were leading, 6 to 0, when the Tigers took their last turn. Charley Gehringer rolled out, but Luke Appling muffed Barney McCosky's grounder.

Detroit's two famed power hitters then ruined things for Dietrich. Greenberg let two pitches go by for balls, and lined a clean single over second. Hank is Detroit fandom's No. 1 hero, but this time boos came from the crowd. York finished it off with a drive into the left field stands.

Two errors by aging Charley Gehringer and a third by York, along with a walk and doubles by Billy Knickerbocker and Joe Kuhel, helped the Sox to four runs in the fifth and brought about the downfall of Buck Newsom, his second defeat in two games.

$3,610.80 'Double' RewardsCustomers At Bay Meadows

By the Associated Press

San Mateo, Calif., April 22.—A $2 mutuel bet on Mad Scramble, 4-year-old chestnut filly, returned $530.80 in the second race at Bay Meadows track today and on the daily double with Valdina Bishop in the third returned $3,610.80.

Mad Scramble paid $101 to place and $49.60 to show.

Vander Meer's Four-Hit Job Beats Cubs, 1-0

JOHNNY VANDER MEER

Cincinnati's No-Hit Star Settles Down After Shaky Start; Bill Lee Is Shelled

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 22.—Johnny Vander Meer, of Cincinnati, showing his best form since his dazzling no-hit triumphs of 1938, struck out 12 Chicago Cubs today and yielded only four hits to blank them, 1 to 0.

The fireball southpaw muddled through the first four innings, leaving eight runners stranded. During this time he yielded all four hits, walked three and tossed a wild pitch.

But thereafter he was invincible. A Ladies' Day crowd of 14,174 watched him retire the Cubs in order. His strikeouts included four of the last five men to face him.

Big Bill Lee, making his first start after signing his contract only 11 days ago, was the victim of the Reds. Lee allowed only five hits and virtually donated Cincinnati's lone tally.

Lee Goes Haywire

After Bill Werber opened the sixth with a fly to center, Linus Frey beat out a scratch hit to short. Lee uncorked two successive wild pitches, advancing Frey to third. Ival Goodman sent Frey home with a single to center. Lee retired the next ten men to face him, but the Cubs, meanwhile, were helpless against Vander Meer.

Lou Novikoff, who subsequent whiffed twice, opened the second with a single. Rip Russell matched Lou's hit and both advanced on Clyde McCullough's bunt. But Bill Myers struck out and Lee grounded to the pitcher. Dom Dallessandro doubled with two out in the third and Bill Nicholson walked, but Novikoff ended the threat by striking out.

The Cubs in the fourth filled the bases with a single, an error and a walk, but Lou Stringer ended the frame by grounding weakly to the pitcher.

Flatbush Council Burns Over Costly Dodgers' Ducats

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—City council took cognizance today of the Brooklyn Dodgers' 50-cent service charge on passes—a matter of public concern in this big town ever since the baseball season opened.

Councilman John P. Nugent introduced an amendment to the city's administrative code providing that it shall be unlawful to charge more than 25 cents on a pass to an outdoor sports exhibition unless the ticket carries a rain check stub. A penalty of a $1,000 fine or a year in prison, or both, was included.

The ball club was not mentioned specifically, but Councilman Louis Cohen, following its introduction, declared, "and I hope they finish in eighth place."

The bill was referred to the committee on general welfare.

Quizzle Scores At Narragansett

Pawtucket, R. I., April 22 (AP).—E. F. Bennett's Quizzle, third in the Arkansas Derby in his last start, made his first Narragansett Park effort a winning one today when he took the Taunton Purse, a 6 furlongs for 3-year-olds. The brown son of Milkman scored by three-quarters of a length over Donald MacVean's Here Again in 1:13 2-5. The latter was two and a quarter lengths in front of the favored Shortening, owned by Allen T. Simmons.

Tilson Quits W. & L. Grid Coaching Job

Resignation Comes As Surprise; 'Tex' Withdraws in 'Best Interests of Team'

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., April 22.—Warren E. (Tex) Tilson, head football coach at Washington and Lee University since 1933, has submitted his resignation, the W. and L. committee on intercollegiate athletics announced today.

He had a year remaining on a two-year contract.

Tilson's resignation was generally unexpected here despite the Generals' record last season of seven losses, one tie and two victories.

Tilson told the committee that "I offer this resignation of my own free will and accord and with absolutely no duress or pressure from anyone connected with the university."

"Best Interests of Team"

He gave no specific reason for the action other than say he believed "that the best interests of Washington and Lee and the football squad will be served," and added that "I believe the alumni, students and faculty will give more support to the football team with another man in charge."

Tilson made a recommendation to the committee regarding his successor and Dr. Livingston W. Smith, chairman, said that an announcement would be made in this connection tomorrow.

Tilson is the last of the "old guard" among the State's "Big Six" schools, five of the others having made head-coaching changes since Tilson came to Washington and Lee.

Conference Champs in '34

Washington and Lee won the Southern Conference football championship in 1934, the only Old Dominion club ever to annex this title, and Tilson's squads also captured the State crowns in '33, '34 and '36, and tied with V. M. I. for the honors in the '37 season.

Coach Tilson graduated at the L. and W. law school in 1926 and spent several seasons as line coach at Duke before coming to W. and L. in 1931 as assistant to Jimmy DeHart. He was promoted to head coach in 1933.

Bridgeport Signs Johnny Morris, Former Blair Star

With pardonable pride, considering he coached the lanky star through a brilliant schoolboy baseball career, Montgomery Blair High's Coach Cres Bride announced last night that Johnny Norris had caught on with the Class B Bridgeport (Conn.) Bees, of the Interstate League and appeared headed for big things in organized baseball.

Norris, who turned down an offer with the New York Yankee farm at Easton, Md., in the Eastern Shore League, played every position on the field with the Blair nine and local sandlot teams. At present he is trying out as catcher, though he was selected on The Post All-Metropolitan nine as an outfielder.

Quoting from a recent conversation with Manager Rudy Hulswit of the Boston Bees' farm at Bridgeport, Bride said Norris' prospects are brilliant.

First National CollegiateWomen's Golf Event Carded

Columbus, Ohio, April 22.—The 1941 National Intercollegiate Golf Tournament, took on added glamour today. Buckeye officials announced that a national meet for coed mashie swingers would follow it.

The women's tournament is booked from June 30 through July 3, and both team and individual championships will be decided. Any woman student, regularly enrolled in a college or university, is eligible to participate, including seniors graduating any time during the 1940-41 school year. Flights will be arranged for all entrants, Dr. Gladys E. Palmer, chairman, said.

Each school is limited to four entrants, but may send fewer representatives to compete for the individual crown.

Bucs Sell Relief Hurler Brown To Dodgers in Cash Transaction

Deal Consummated In a Three-Way Telephone Conversation

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 22.—Mace Brown, veteran relief pitcher, has been sold to the Brooklyn Dodgers in a straight cash deal, the Pittsburgh Pirate management announced here today.

The sales tag on the Pirate ace was not revealed.

The deal was consummated in a three-way long-distance telephone call among Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Dodgers; William E. Benswanger, president of the Pirates, and Frankie Frisch, Pirate manager who is in St. Louis with his team.

MacPhail told Benswanger he needed a relief pitcher and Benswanger agreed to the sale after getting Frisch's okay by telephone. Brown was expected to join the Dodgers immediately.

Brown, who will be 31 next month, was in his seventh year with the Pirates. His all-time major league record since he joined the club in 1935 from Kansas City of the American Association shows 55 wins and 45 losses. His best year was 1938 when he won 15 and lost 9, mostly in relief roles.

Athletics Score 5 Runs in 6th and Win Out in Last Inning; Bombers Blast Three Homers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 22.—The New York Yankees continued their home-run swatting today, but fell apart every other way as the Philadelphia Athletics edged out a 6-to-5 triumph on Dick Siebert's single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning.

Les McCrabb held the bombers to six hits, of which three were homers accounting for all New York's runs.

Bill Dickey hit one with a man on in the second and in the fourth Tom Henrich opened with a roundtripper and Charley Keller followed with another after Joe DiMaggio walked.

The A's opened up on Spud Chandler and Johnny Murphy for five runs in the sixth to tie the score. They nicked Chandler for four singles and after Murphy took over he let in two runs with a bad throw to first and a wild pitch.

White Plains, N. Simon, starting fast, knocked Landis down in the first round and continually beat him to the punch.

Sande Picked For Preakness Jockey Award

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 22.—Picked by the Jockeys' Community Fund and Guild as the jockey who has done the most for the honor of his profession, Earle Sande, three-time rider of Kentucky Derby winners, will be honored at a testimonial dinner following the Preakness at Pimlico May 10.

SANDE

The dinner, in recognition of his "fairness and sportsmanship," was arranged by a committee consisting of Irving Anderson as chairman, Sam Renick, master of ceremonies; Harry Richards, guild president; Eddie Arcaro, Johnny Gilbert, Leon Haas, Don Meade and Alfred Robertson.

"In selecting Sande," the committee said, "the directors considered that he, besides being one of the outstanding riders of this generation, has shown himself by his display of fairness and true sportsmanship, to be worthy of the honor that is to be bestowed upon him."

Masterson Winner After Shaky Start

Hurls Shut-Out Ball In Last 7 Innings; Cramer Makes Four Of Nats' 15 Blows

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Amid the infuriated fans' shouts of "Take him out!" 20-year-old Walter Masterson reformed suddenly and completely on the pitching mound at Griffith Stadium yesterday and threw seven shut-out innings in the faces of the Boston Red Sox. With the help of his pals, the Nats, Masterson walked off the field a 12-5 winner.

While Masterson was grimly holding the Red Sox in check, the Nats put the slug on three Boston pitchers and lifted the young right-hander to an easy triumph. Twice they came from behind to wipe out Boston leads and in the late innings they piled up a prohibitive lead for Masterson with a 15-hit attack.

Masterson's was a Hyde-Jekyll performance. He apparently was scuttling the Nats chances in the first inning when he gave up three runs to the Red Sox, and after Washington obligingly tied the score for him he surrendered two more runs to Boston in the second inning in a show of base ingratitude.

Masterson Steadies

But all of a sudden Masterson steadied. From the second to the ninth he was invincible. He gave up five hits in the first two innings, but only three during the rest of the afternoon, and only one Red Sox reached third base against him in the last seven innings. He finished with an eight-hit performance.

Manager Joe Cronin entrusted his pitching to Mickey Harris, a young left-hander, and was aware of his mistake almost immediately. Harris couldn't hold his three-run lead for even an inning, and the Nats piled into him for three more runs in the third that set them up in a 7-to-5 lead at that point.

It was a large afternoon for Roger Cramer against the club he likes to lick. The former Red Sox belabored Boston's pitching for four hits to lead the Nats' attack. Cecil Travis rapped the Red Sox pitching for three hits that included a triple.

Four Straight Hits

Masterson was pitching and ducking in the same motion at the start of the game. The first four batters he faced rapped him for hits. DiMaggio singled to center, Finney singled to right, Ted Williams doubled to right and Jimmy Foxx singled to center. That last blow drove in Boston's second and third runs of the inning.

The Nats bravely tied the score for Masterson in their own half of the inning, scoring three times out of what appeared to be the wreckage of a big inning. Case opened the game with a double to left center and moved to third on Cramer's single to left. He scored when Chapman grounded into a double play, and the Nats went to work again with two out and none on base. Lewis drew a walk and then in rapid succession Travis singled and Bloodworth doubled. Bloodworth's contribution, a terrific line drive over DiMaggio's head that rolled to the centerfield wall, drove in two runs.

Fans View With Alarm

But Masterson was pitching runs back to the Red Sox even faster than the Nats could score them. With two out in the second, he

Eastern and Tech Nines Take Opening Interhigh Battles

White Tide Wins, 12-8, McKinley Scores, 6-3

Roosevelt Beaten by Eastern in Series Opener As Wilson Bows to Tech; Leaders Are Tied

By Bill Burnett

By the simple process of taking a jump on their opponents and then hanging on for dear life, Eastern and Tech High baseball teams came successfully through their first outings in the 1941 interhigh baseball series yesterday.

Eastern, runner-up last year, slugged out a 10-run lead in the first three innings and finally emerged with a 12-8 triumph over Roosevelt at Lincoln Park. Tech moved over to Woodrow Wilson's lot, clung to a 5-run margin until the eighth and eventually got a 6-3 verdict over the hosts.

The twin bill put yesterday's winners and Anacostia, which tripped Wilson in a pre-Easter battle, in a tie for the Eastern Division lead, leaving Western Division teams winless, Central and Western having yet to see action.

White Tide Wins

Neither starting pitcher survived the full nine innings in the Eastern-Roosevelt fracas, but the White Tide's Kenny Deavers lasted considerably longer than the Riders' Les Wicklein.

The latter hurled only two-thirds of an inning, in that time giving up six hits and two bases on balls and spotting his foe seven runs. Young Billy Garner then took over and tossed five-hit ball during the last 7 1-3 innings.

Deavers Off to Good Start

Deavers pitched no-hit ball for the first three frames, got to the seventh with only three safeties charged against him and then blew up in a cloud of five hits, one walk and five Rider runs in the seventh. Southpaw Kenny Curles took over and despite serious Rider threats in the eighth and ninth, kept Eastern's advantage intact.

Those seven runs Wicklein contributed to Eastern's effort at the start really settled matters. The remainder of the game Garner's control ball was every bit as tough as either Deavers' speed or Curles' curve, though his mates hardly looked as impressive as the Tide afield.

The big blow of that disastrous Roosevelt inning was Harold Jesnick's fly into left that Dick Goodman misjudged and saw sail over his head for a home run. Two Easterners scored in front of Jesnick.

Koester's Triples

Roosevelt's big seventh was featured by big Dick Koester's triple down the left field foul line, scoring Wicklein. Kennedy had started the rally with a single, Garner had doubled, Tom Robertson had walked and Wicklein had singled. A one-base clout by Goodman scored Koester and closed out the Riders' scoring.

Tech Victor; Webb Stars

It was 230-pound Buddy Webb's ringing homer in the first inning which mainly accounted for Tech's early advantage. And it was the same Webb's three-hit hurling for the first six frames which kept Wilson at a safe distance.

After one run had been scored and with mates Joe Bryan and Vern Hollidge on base, Webb ground out his first-inning circuit blow. That gave the invaders a 4-0 lead and they improved on it by one run in the second stanza. Still another counter in the top of the eighth quite successfully voided Wilson's three-run splurge in the bottom of the same period.

O'Connors Halts Uprising

Charley Green, who had relieved Webb in the seventh, was the victim of Wilson's uprising, and it was necessary for Dan O'Connors to try and get the last man out in the eighth. He did it and shut out the Tigers in the ninth, striking out three of the four batsmen to face him.

Except for an oversight on Hollidge's part, Tech's edge might have been even bigger. In the fifth he slammed out a beautiful drive and raced around the bases before it was recovered. His only lapse was that he forgot to touch first base.

Only One Bobble

Nino Briscuso, the Tigers' lanky right-hander, went all the way with a 9-hit performance. He struck out six but gave up 7 walks. The only error against either team was charged to Tech's Shortstop Martin Green.

Heth Features W.Va. Net Play

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 22.—Al Chapin's display of tennis speed and accuracy in overcoming Bill Heth, of Hot Springs, Va., stood out today as favorites uniformly moved up in the U. S. Open tennis tournament.

The former Davis Cup performer from New York, disposed of Heth 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, but the bare score hardly does justice to Heth's own demonstration of consistent speed. Chapin's shots, however, were well placed and hard to return.

Fred Perry, of Beverly Hills, Calif., favorite of the fifth annual renewal of the spring classic since Donald Budge did not return to defend the title he won last year, advanced on a bye. Three other entries went to the second round on defaults.

Red-headed Lloyd Budge, of Lake Forest, Ill., brother of Don, defeated Capt. Valerian Yavorsky, White Sulphur Springs pro, after a wavering start 1—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

W.&L. Slugs to Beat Richmond, 7 to 4

Lexington, Va., April 22 (AP).—Washington and Lee batters staged a hitting riot in the eighth inning today to defeat the University of Richmond, 7 to 4, and to strengthen their position at the head of the State pennant chase.

Jack Sanford Due To Be Called to Army

Another Washington-owned infielder is due to be drafted into the Army "within a month." He is First Baseman Jack Sanford, on option to the Chattanooga club of the Southern Association.

Sanford has received notice to take his Selective Service physical examination, it was reported in Chattanooga yesterday. Unmarried and without dependents, he expects an early call. Sanford has made a request of his Chatham, Va., draft board that he be permitted to take his physical examination in Chattanooga.

Wood First to Be Invited To Goodall Tourney

New York, April 22 (AP).—Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., winner of the recent Augusta Masters' Golf Tournament, was the first of 15 top-flight golf pros to be invited to compete in the fourth Goodall Round Robin Tournament at the Fresh Meadow Club, Flushing, N. Y., it was announced today by Elmer Ward, tournament sponsor. The $5,000 tourney will open the summer season May 22.

Wood was second in the 1939 Goodall tourney but came in last in 1940 wih a minus 17 score. The tournament is decided on the aggregate number of holes won in the four-day round-robin play.

Blair Swamps Sherwood, 10-1; Clark Is Star

Montgomery Blair High diamonders, of Silver Spring, made their first outing a highly impressive one yesterday on their home lot, smashing Sherwood High, 10-1.

The victors sent two pitchers, Perry and Fisher, into action and between them the invaders got only three hits. A single base on balls, by Sherwood's J. Clark, who went the distance and allowed 13 hits, marked the game.

Frank Clark, Blair center fielder, featured his club's batting attack with four hits in five trips to the plate, including a double and home run. Sherwood's J. Clark also had a homer, accounting for the loser's only tally in the eighth.

Vikings Amass 7-0 Lead Behind Kligman But Presidents Pound Wilkerson in Fourth

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., April 22.—Central High School's Vikings combined a dozen hits with free passes and errors to grind out an 11-7 victory over George Washington High in a loosely-played contest on the losers' field here this afternoon.

Charlie Kligman started on the mound for the Vikings and hurled three innings of shutout ball, but the Presidents got to his successor, Wilkerson, for five runs in the fourth and two in the fifth. Wiseberg hurled the last three innings, and held the Presidents hitless.

Central had a 7-0 lead when the Presidents staged their uprising, but after the score was deadlocked in the fifth, the Vikings quickly grabbed the lead with two in the sixth, and added single tallies in the seventh and eighth.

Hill copped batting honors for the day by driving out a triple and a pair of singles in five trips to the plate, while Citrenbaum, DiBlasi and Wolfe each pounded out a pair of hits for the Vikings. Johnnie Shelton paced the losers with two singles in four trips to the plate.

Milton Pinmen Set 2 Records

The Milton's Service Station boys closed out the Hebrew League at Penn Recreation in a blaze of glory last night for they broke the all-time league game and set marks with 698 and 1,944. They upped the former record by 27 pins and added 71 sticks to the latter. Abe Weinberg's 165-420 and Benny Bookoff's 430 high set paced Milton's. Julie Singer ended the season as high average man with 123 pins and was one of the main causes why his Youdie's Men's Shop quintet finished out in front of the others.

The Navy Department boys at Arcadia were paced by Dick Curtin's 174 that enabled the Coast Guard to win high team game with a 625 total. Jiggs Sanderson, Model Basin, rolled the top set with a 398 count. Ordnance was best team for the big set, knocking over 1,719 pins. U. S. Engineers, Yards and Docks and Signal Corps tied for leadership in games won and lost but the former won the championship by virtue of pinfall and next Monday night will engage in a roll-off with the first half winners, the Hydrographic quintet.

Dieckelman Checks Rutgers as Hoyas Slug to Win, 19 to 3

Georgetown Star Allows But Six Hits

Hoyas Shell Three Pitchers for Total Of 19 Hits; Catcher Castiglia Bat Star

By Jack Munhall

Dick Dieckelman, burly Georgetown University pitcher, celebrated his twentieth birthday yesterday by holding Rutgers University to six hits while making three himself to lead the Hoyas to their most impressive victory of the season.

Joe Judge's Hilltoppers, spraying 19 wallops to all sectors of the medical school field, walloped "the best Rutgers baseball team in history," 18-3, and thereby made a liar of one more publicity agent.

The Scarlet, bidding for their seventh straight victory in collegiate competition, made an auspicious start by setting the Hoyas down in order in the first inning and scoring one run themselves in the second.

And Then Came the Barrage

But then the roof fell down on Charlie Ward's boys, especially his ace pitcher. Jim Perkins, who experienced the worst going over of the three Rutger hurlers who spent the afternoon ducking whistling liners. Ten Hoyas went to bat in the second against Perkins and banged out five hits, good for seven runs, including a three-run homer by Centerfielder Lou Ghecas.

Perkins took his batting turn in the third, but when the Hoyas came up to the plate again they were facing not Perkins, but Ollie Compton. The change in Rutgers' pitching wasn't even noticed by the rampant G. U. nine, which sent nine men to the plate against Compton to bat around for the second successive inning and add four more runs to their blooming score.

After that Georgetown tapered off, but still counted in every inning: one in the fourth, two in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh frames, and a final tally in the ninth. Emil Potzer was pitching for Rutgers after the fifth.

Rutgers' Kuhn Hits Homer

Rutgers' initial run was accomplished with great ease. Catcher Werner Kuhn accounted for the marker by smashing out the longest hit of the game, a towering liner that cleared the centerfield embankment for a home run. The Scarlet picked up the second run in the fifth on a hit batsman, an error and a force-out, and the last one in the eighth by dint of two singles, a walk and a force play.

Georgetown, in registering its fourth triumph in five games, returned to its earliest season form which prompted some observers to call the team the best in Hilltop history. Catcher Jim Castiglia, performing before the critical eye of New York Giants' Scout Eddie Ainsmith, slugged out three doubles and a single and reached first on an error in his five appearances at the plate.

Pitcher Dieckelman, who was winning his second game against one loss, authored a triple and two singles to drive in three runs. Every other Hoya—except Second Baseman Jules Koshlap—got at least one safety, Johnny Smith Smith, leadoff Hoya batter in the first, whacked a curving liner past third base and easily rounded the bases only to be called out for neglecting to touch third base.

Brock Paces Visitors

Rutgers' leading hitter was the highly touted Frank Brock, who accounted for two singles, but who didn't perform up to his press notices in the field. Brock made two of the six errors charged to Rutgers. Georgetown committed only one misplay.

Rutgers winds up a two-day invasion of the District with a game at Maryland today. Ozzie Day, who held the Newark Bears scoreless for four innings as the Bears inflicted Rutgers' only previous defeat (4 to 0), is scheduled to face the Terrapins.

Hill Billy Wrestlers Here Tomorrow

Here them air. Elmer Snodgrass, the big tobacco chewin' hill billy from Smoky Mountain, Tenn, and his sis, Elvira, who's gonna do some kind of wrestling at Turner's Arena. Elvira will a-meet Gladys Gilliam in a cofeature match. Elmer's a-gonna take on Chief White Feather tomorrow night

White Feather Faces Hillbilly On Mat Card

Chief White Feather, the veteran redskin meanie, yesterday was secured as an opponent for Elmer Snodgrass, the Smoky Mountain, Tenn., hillbilly, on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Elmer's sister, Elvira, will headline the card in a match against Gladys Gilliam, the blonde Birmingham Tigress. The cofeature will be between the Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler, and Lou (Madman) Plummer, of Baltimore.

White Feather is famous for wrestling any type of grappler. He has met bearded men, giants and even bears—and now for the first time old Tommy Marvin, as he is known, will engage a hillbilly.

Promoter Joe Turner yesterday received from Henry (Hi) Kulkovich, hard-hitting New York villain, a challenge to meet the winner of the Hornet-Plummer set-to. Kulkovich is one of several on the show who would like to get a crack at the masked man. Hans Kampfer, who meets Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle in the semi-windup, also would like a shot at the winner. Kulkovich tomorrow meet Fred (Legs) Grobmier.

'Bucky' Walbert Named Meade Boxing Tutor

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 22 (AP).—Charles "Bucky" Walbert, light heavyweight boxer from Company G, has been appointed as a boxing instructor of the 115th Infantry Regiment by Col. D. John Markey, commanding officer.

Walbert will give instructions twice a week at physical training periods.

Dodgers Beat Giants, 7 to 4, Behind Casey

New York, April 22.—Helped by the time-clock hitting of Dolph Camilli and Peewee Reese, Hugh Casey scored his second victory in three days over the New York Giants today for the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 4.

Reese put Brooklyn ahead, 2 to 0, by rapping out a single with the bases loaded in the second inning. Camilli hit a home run with two on in the fifth and drove in two more runs with a single in the ninth.

Cliff Melton gave up the first five runs and was the losing pitcher. Paul Dean worked the last two frames.

Browns Trip Indians, 6 to 3; Auker Victor

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 22.—Left on bases St. Louis, 2; Cleveland, 7. That was the story of Eldon Auker's 6-to-3 triumph over the Indians today for his second straight win of the season.

The Browns' submarine ball hurler was aided by timely hits against Lefty Al Milnar as he exerted his usual mastery over Cleveland.

Auker toppled the Indians five times last season while dropping only two, and it was the same story today. He gave up eight hits and five walks, but was tough with men on bases. The only extra-base blow against him was Jeff Heath's circuit drive leading off the second inning.

Rip Radcliffs's single pushed two St. Louis runs across in the third after Bob Swift walked and Harland Clift doubled. George McQuinn's single, Johnny Berardino's two-bagger and Clift's single were responsible for two more in the seventh. The Browns also scored a run in the first and fourth.

Cards Beat Bucs in 12th, 9-8

By International News Service

St. Louis, April 22.—Pittsburgh and St. Louis paraded 35 players over the diamond today in an extended battle the Cardinals won, 9 to 8, with a twelfth-inning rally.

The teams reached the twelfth heat in a 7-7 deadlock. The Pirates shoved ahead in their half although they didn't need a hit to do it. Fletcher and Van Robays walked. John Grodzicki intentionally passed Vince DiMaggio, filling the bases, and Fletcher came home after Gustine flied to Moore.

The Cards came back in the nightcap of the inning with Enos Slaughter putting on the final touch for victory.

Mighty Phils Beat Boston In 14th, 6-4

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 22.—The Philadelphia Phillies, blessed with exceptional pitching, broke their six-game losing streak the hard way today by topping the Boston Bees, 6-4, in a 14-inning battle.

Slim Tom Hughes, 21-year-old right-hander who took over the mound from the highly efficient Si Johnson in the twelfth, showed the way to victory by opening the fourteenth with a single. He scored the winning run after being batted around by Merrill May and Joe Marty, who connected safely, and Chuck Klein, who flied out.

Two runners were on when Hughes raced home and Jim Tobin, who went the distance for the Bees, forced in another run by passing Dan Litwhiler and Nick Etten.

Infield errors gave the Phillies two previous runs in the fifth and seventh after Litwhiler had homered over the left-field barrier with Marty on base in the fourth.

Johnson piled up 14 strikeouts and kept the Bees under control until the eighth, when they scored three runs on doubles by Tobin and 'Bama Powell, Gene Moore's triple and Max West's grounder. Pinch-hitter Buddy Hassett's single and Tobin's second two-bagger tied matters in the ninth.

Victor Pays $6.20; Jockey Palumbo Escapes Serious Injury in Fourth

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22.—While it was not listed as the feature race on today's program, the sixth event stole the show with as thrilling a finish as has been witnessed at this track in many a moon. E. K. Bryson's Nosy, Herbert Kerr's Dizzy Dame, Mrs. H. W. Boyle's Harebell and A. H. Utterback's Candle Ends came into the wire as if they were hitched to a chariot and the camera aided the judges in separating them. Nosy was declared the winner with Dizzy Dame judged second, Harebell third and Candle Ends in fourth position.

A last-minute rush to Harebell made Nosy a $6.20 shot and the son of Whiskalong was barely able to last. Dizzy Dame, which defeated Nosy by a nose at Bowie, just failed to get up today. She was bearing out from the top of the stretch and was a factor in the defeat of Harebell. The latter was making her move entering the stretch when Dizzy Dame carried her wide. Apprentice Sisto straightened her but she could not get by Dizzy Dame in the stretch run. In the meantime Jockey Mannie Berg kept plugging on Nosy and the gelding stuck to his running guns just long enough.

A crowd of 7,000 reported for the day's action. The weather was cool and topcoats appeared for the first time at this meeting.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, veteran rider, escaped serious injury in the fourth race when his mount stumbled and tossed him in the thick of flying hooves. The accident happened directly across from the stands and the crowd gasped as the Italian-American boy rolled along the track. Horticulturist, the horse that threw him, went on in the field. Palumbo was surrounded by horsemen but he was able to ride and walk back to the jockey's room where it was determined that his injuries were bruises. Palumbo's left boot was all but torn from his leg.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKIE BOY, $42.60, $17.30, $11.70; KNOXVILLE, $5.60, $3.50; PACK SADDLE, $21.80.

BROOKIE BOY, sent up gradually on the outside, came around the leaders to take command approaching the stretch and drew out to win easily. KNOXVILLE was squeezed back in the early stages, rallied when placed to a drive in the clear and closed with good energy. PACK SADDLE, steadied while in the first flight, had to weave his way between horses while bettering his position and hung right at the close.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:47. Winner, Mrs. Harold A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOWER MAID, $4.10, $2.70, $2.50; ALL FREE, $3.60, $3.10; STEEL BEAM, $9.10.

TOWER MAID, off in the first flight and steadied on the outside of the leaders, rallied gamely when placed to pressure in the stretch and won while under a drive. ALL FREE, first away, was rated when displaced by STEEL BEAM approaching the stretch and came willingly at the end, but was no match for the winner. STEEL BEAM, off in a tangle, shot around horses boldly to take the lead and weakened gradually through the stretch. SMART went evenly.

Daily Double, BROOKIE BOY and TOWER MAID, Paid $108.60

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:18½. Winner, W. J. Hirsch's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-LIGHT, $3.00, $2.40, $2.30; STOP LOSS, $4.90, $3.80; STAR CANTER, $10.90.

HI-LIGHT drew out gradually to a long lead and won with speed in reserve as if outclassing his company. STOP LOSS, off sluggishly, saved ground and improved his position gradually to show a good effort. STAR CANTER set the early pace and continued willingly in the stretch drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:47½. Off at 3:47½. Winner, C. B. Howard's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDY JUSTICE, $5.20, $4.40, $3.10; COLESBOY, $42.10, $13.90; GINO BEAU, $3.00.

HANDY JUSTICE was hustled to the front in the opening furlong, set a strong pace and was bearing out at the close. COLESBOY raced forwardly and wide from the start, came willingly in the closing test and was slightly bothered by the winner in the final 20 yards. GINO BEAU went evenly in a good position, saved ground entering the stretch and was held safe at the close.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:17. Off at 4:17. Winner, Christiana Stable's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKY LANE, $7.30, $4.50, $2.40; LIGHT OF MORN, $7.00, $2.50; FETTACAIRN, $2.20.

SKY LANE, lapped on the outside of LIGHT OF MORN from the start, forged to the front approaching the stretch, drew clear and held away thereafter under energetic handling. LIGHT OF MORN had keen early speed while racing on the inside and held on gamely in the closing test. FETTACAIRN was off well, dropped back and came boldly in midstretch, but tired suddenly. HARDY BUD was outrun early, made up some ground and also weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:46. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. g. (4), by Whiskalong—Gabfest. Trained by J. Serio, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOSY, $6.20, $3.80, $2.50; DIZZY DAME, $6.70, $3.40; HAREBELL, $2.60.

NOSY, first away, shook off CANDLE ENDS while setting the pace and held on under vigorous handling to barely last. DIZZY DAME saved ground while close up, rallied gamely in the stretch and was bearing out at the end. HAREBELL, allowed to settle into his best stride, began to improve his position on the backstretch, was carried out by DIZZY DAME entering the stretch and could not shake off the latter in the stretch drive. CANDLE ENDS was hard ridden while closest to NOSY'S pace and came again after drooping back.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. h. (6), by Stimulus—Duchess Lace. Trained by J. Serio, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:54⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STURDY DUKE, $8.20, $3.40, $2.90; MEMORY BOOK, $3.10, $2.40; DR. STICKS, $3.70.

STURDY DUKE, steadied in the early stages, began moving up gradually on the backstretch, responded when shaken up to wear down DR. STICKS and drew clear to hold MEMORY BOOK safe. MEMORY BOOK lacked early speed, came wide for racing room and hung after moving up menacingly in midstretch. DR. STICKS, in the thick of contention early, disposed of SIR REO to take the lead, but weakened badly in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:46½. Off at 5:47½. Winner, Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH NEWS, $7.10, $3.30, $2.70; OUR FLORENCE, $3.80, $3.10; CARRIAGE TRADE, $4.20.

ROUGH NEWS, rated to the backstretch, moved up and then was taken under restraint, responded when placed to a hand ride in the stretch and wore down OUR FLORENCE on the outside in the closing drive. OUR FLORENCE shook off BRIGHT CAMP while setting the pace, opened a good lead, but could not resist the winner. CARRIAGE TRADE improved his position steadily, but weakened in the final test.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap, Mrs. Louise Palladino's Little Beans and Hugh S. Nesbitt's Staretor are the three Kentucky Derby candidates scheduled to leave Maryland for the Louisville classic. Little Beans and Staretor will be off this afternoon, while Trainer Tom Smith said that Porter's Cap would be transferred to Pimlico before going into the box car there with a lead pony late tomorrow. Yesterday we wrote about rough riding and what's to be done about it. Jockey Henri Mora was first to get official action. The stewards didn't like the way he went to the first turn and set hom down. They always have been able to spot Mora. But let's have less of the rough stuff and let the suspensions fall where they may. Sun Altesse gets in the Philadelphia Handicap with 108 pounds and that makes the race look like a gift to him. Get your money down in wads. I'm putting this one out in advance. Jockey Eddie Smith, the Washington boy, always got Little Beans away well and he won important races with the colt. The handlers saw fit to ditch him as the rider. There are jockeys for horses and in my book Eddie fitted Little Beans. By the way, there's a rumor that C. S. Howard has offered $20,000 for Little Beans and would run him in an entry with Porter's Cap in the Derby. Impound. Alfred Vanderbilt's candidate for the $20,000 Dixie Handicap at Pimlico on May 7, was sent a mile in his training campaign at the old Baltimore course. The 5-year-old found the fast going to his liking and moved over the eight furlongs in 1:42 3-5. Impound hasn't been seen under silks in the East since the Preakness of 1939, when he finished fourth to Challedon. Last winter in his lone start since the Preakness he scored impressively in a 6-furlong race at Santa Anita. Post time for the spring meeting at Pimlico opening next Monday has been set for 2:15 p. m. each day except Preakness day, May 10, when the time for the first race will be moved up to 2 p. m. The third race each day will be a steplechase. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—TRAMP SHIP has several good races to recommend and should be able to go to town in a field of this caliber. Needs only the right handling. TANGANYIKA showed promise in that last race and could win on best effort. SUN CAPTURE appears to have gone back but is still a threat.

Second race—MAECLOUD looks like money in the bank in an affair of these conditions. Has a good sprint race for a prep and it looks like any price will be a good one. Apprentice Sisto will be in the saddle and I see no reason for mistakes. TOTAL ECLIPSE cannot be overlooked but appears to be heavily burdened. SIR GAY for the short end.

Third race—This appears to be the cheapest race run in Maryland this spring. BROOKLANDVILLE has some promising efforts and will never find a cheaper field than is gathered here. BUCKETS is in good hands and has been going well in the morning. TRUE WARRIOR may get up for the show.

Fourth race—STAR CHARTER has suffered interference in his last two appearances and should account for this purse with a better break. He is dropping down and seems capable of handling this bunch. ROAD SCRAPER has been sound trials to recommend and might surprise. ESCOLAR also has shown speed in trials and might take it all.

Fifth race—The Aberdeen appears to be the best 2-year-old field of the Maryland season and I look for the Westerner, CHIQUITAMIA, to account for top money. The Howard miss has been a half in a fraction under $:48 and should lead throughout. DOCTOR REDER will be dangerous but was beaten by the top one in California. JOE RAY, winner of the Bowie Kindergarten, should earn a share of the purse.

Sixth race—Sassy Lad, the property of C. E. Nelson is a clever sprinter and has had a good rest since her Florida campaign and should turn down a field like this. The Martin entry of BATTLE JACK and ABRASION will be well bet and should give a good account of themselves. HAPPY LARK is stepping way up but has been a consistent winner in Maryland and must be reckoned with.

Seventh race—BOSTON PAL was a clever winner here first out and then came back to finish second to DNIEPER. The Bedwell campaigner is not the soundest horse around but should have no trouble in this field. STAND IN was a winner here and might improve enough to beat the top one. MONEY MUDDLE came from far off the pace to win that last and will be a factor.

Eighth race—BLACK GROUSE has yet to taste defeat in the 1941 season and the record will probably be intact after this race is run. The Christmas-trained router will have R. Scott, his regular rider, in the saddle. MOWMART should be the chief contender with WALTER LIGHT third.

Best bet—MAECLOUD.

Capital Sales Of Gas Spurt During Month

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported March sales totaled 1,761,012 m. c. f. (thousands of cubic feet) an increase of 277,192 over the same month last year.

Sales for the first three months compare as follows (in million cubic feet):

	1941	1940
February	1,770,417	1,712,144
March	1,761,012	1,483,820

For the first three months sales totaled 5,179,077 m. c. f., as compared with 4,930,844 in the same three months of 1940.

New Plan Is Success

Rutherford J. Dooley, vice president of the National Bank of Washington, reported last night that officials were gratified ata the response to thes checkmaster plan. Started a year ago, the new plan (under which a checking account may be opened with no minimum balance) has brought many new accounts to the bank, Mr. Dooley said.

Scrap Use at New High

Steelworks and foundries in the United States consumed 4,662,000 gross tons o firon and steel scrap in March, a record breaking tootal, it is estimated by the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, Inc., Washington.

This compared with 4,172,000 tons in February, and 2,728,000 tons in March, 1940.

In the first-quarter of 1941 domestic consumption aggregated 13,112,000 tons contrasted with 9,121,000 tons in the corresponding period of 1940. The annual indicated consumption, based on the March rate, is 55,944,000 tons, contrasted with the record consumption of 41,587,000 tons in 1940.

Beneficial Ind. Loan Corp.

Beneficial Industrial Loan Corporation and subsidiary corporations repor tconsolidated net income for the first three months of $1,487,608 (after setting aside $150,000 in addition to the reserve for taxes computed in accordance with the present law to cover expected increase in Federal income taxes for current period). This compares with $1,630,398 fo rthe three months ended March 31, 1940.

After payment of dividends on prior preference stock, consolidated net income for the three months, applicable to the 2,314,989 shares of common stock was equivalent ot 80 cents per share, compared with 86 cents per share for the first three months of 1940.

The Norfolk & Western Railway reported net income of $3,088,253.57 for March, equal to $2.14 per share, compared with $2,372,490.51, or $1.63, for the corresponding month a year ago. The increase was 30.17 per cent. For the March quarter net income of $8,310,575 was reported, equal to $5.74 a share on its common stock. This compared with $7,705,057, or $5.31 a share, in the first quarter of 1940.

Bangor & Aroostook

Bangor & Aroostook Railroad reported March quarter net income of $332,051, equal to $2 a share on the common stock, compared with $296,165, or $1.75 a share, in the comparable period last year.

Shell Union Oil Corporation

Shell Union Oil Corporation in a report for the quarter ended March 31 showed profit of $3,621,784, equal to 28 cents a share on the common stock. This compared with $3,314,158, or 37 cents a share in the 1940 March quarter. Gross sales for the quarter were $62,990,646, against $67,006,321 for the 1940 period.

Pivotal Issues Set New Lows for Year In Light Trade; A. T. & T. Leads Slump

New York, April 22.—The stock market tried to move ahead today, then fell of its own weight when traders withdrew from action when faced with pessimistic war news. Bullish earnings reports and the rising tide of industry, stimulated by defense production, were insufficient to offset the bearish news of British and Greek reverses in the Balkan campaign.

Six stock leaders, as the final bell tolled, reached low marks for the year, although the Associated Press average of 60 selected issues was unchanged at 39.1. Transactions totaled 435,860 shares, mainly traded in the morning, compared with 429,600 yesterday.

The early session operators showed something resembling enthusiasm for the buying side and showed most of the favorites, topped by the steels, a point or so higher.

This peak disappeared late in the afternoon, however, under a small but persistent dribble of selling which chalked up new low marks for Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, du Pont, Consolidated Edison, New York Central and American Telephone.

The last, off 1⅜ at the end, was, nonetheless, better at the close by ⅛ point than its low of the day, reached when a block of 4,000 shares was sold on the market. The New York Stock Exchange had refused to grant permission for its sale over the counter, asserting that its disposal on the trading floor would be more economical than a probable 2 or 3 point discount by dealers.

Other stocks on the declining side included Bethlehem, General Motors, Eastman and General Electric. Among the gainers were U. S. Steel, Youngstown, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, American Smelting, Western Union, Santa Fe and International Paper.

In the Curb, where about 77,000 shares changed hands compared with 74,000 yesterday, gains were made by Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and U. S. Graphite. On the losing side were New Jersey Zinc, Singer Manufacturing and Gulf Oil.

Bonds were irregular, with some secondary issues rising. Commodities turned down at the end of the day. Cotton closed 40 to 75 cents a bale lower and, at Chicago, wheat ended ⅝ to ⅞ cent a bushel off, and corn ⅛ to ¼ cent down.

Prices Increased On Wheeled Toys; Shortage Forseen.

New York, April 22 (AP).—Toy manufacturers, who imitate in miniature just about everything in heavy industry, reported today a 5 per cent increase in prices on their wheeled products and indications that the delivery situation next Christmas would be "tight."

The price advance on wheeled toys was said to reflect the priorities situation in steel, since toys made with secondary metals were held at previous costs.

Dolls are selling at a rate considerably above last year.

The present labor contracts expire June 30 and manufacturers say this fact adds to the uncertainty as to whether toys will cost more next fall and winter.

Chemical Sales Show Sharp Gain

New York, April 22 (AP).—Sales of leading chemical companies in the past three months have been running 25 to 40 per cent above the already high level of a year ago, the Wall Street Journal said today.

A sales gain of this size would normally mean an increase of 50 to 80 per cent in profits, the Journal said. Profits before taxes are expanding in this ratio but, after deducting heavier taxes, the industry is earning about the same amount as a year ago.

I. B. A. Board to Open Session on May 10

New York, April 22 (AP).—Governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America will hold their annual spring meeting at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 10-14.

In addition to normal business, the meeting this year is expected to study proposed changes in the Securities Acts now pending at Washington. Banking circles said a large attendance was expected.

American Gas Declared Unit Of E. B. & S.

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission announced yesterday a tentative finding that it must reject the request of American Gas & Electric Co. that it be declared not a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share Co., largest utility holding company in America.

The announcement was made public at an oral argument during which Frederic L. Ballard, Philadelphia attorney, asserted American Gas' complete independence from Bond & Share.

"Bond & Share," he said, "never exerted any influence over American Gas except in the financial field and since 1928-1933 has ceased entirely to exert any influence over or have any part in applicant's management or policy in that field."

The American Gas system comprises 11 electric utilities serving 83,000 customers in 750 communities in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. Consolidated assets of the system total $538,000,000.

Bond & Share owns 17.51 per cent of the voting stock of American Gas. Its investment in American Gas represents 23 per cent of Bond & Share's total investment, while its income from American Gas is 47.5 per cent of its total.

The commission's tentative finding said that whether a company was subject to the controlling influence of another company "cannot always be determined merely by a tally of votes and an examination of presently existing affiliations," because "experience has demonstrated that historical ties and associations often serve as a substitute for, or a potent auxiliary of, the more obvious modes of control."

Ballard admitted that through its early years Bond & Share had been American Gas' fiscal agent, but insisted that there was no longer any control and that American Gas had in late years carried out considerable financing "without so much as a phone call or how do you do to Bond & Share."

Carrier Bonds Surge Higher In Quiet List

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—Railroad bonds today had the best rise in nearly three weeks, many climbing 1 to 2 or more points.

The general run of industrials and utilities tried to develop some pep but the effort was too much and the majority ended the day only slightly changed either way.

U. S. Governments first rose and then turned indifferent as large institutional investors began switching from one maturity to another, apparently jockeying for preferred positions in anticipation of the next Treasury offering. Most of the business was done over the counter, as usual, where the undertone held up better than it did on the Stock Exchange.

The fresh rise in rails coincided with publication of some excellent earnings statements covering the first quarter. Reporting systems included the Southern Pacific, Bangor & Aroostook, Norfolk & Western and others. Intensification of governmental efforts to bring about resumption of soft coal production, an important element in the railroad industry, also was helpful in centering attention on the carriers.

Among the best gainers were Southern Pacific 4½s at 50⅛, Southern Railway 4s at 62¼, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 5s at 39¾, New Haven 6s at 26¾, Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 53⅛, Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '60 at 26¾ and Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s at 28.

London Stocks

London, April 22 (AP).—Trading remained restricted but the stock market closed with a firm undertone. Both British funds and Indian bonds had support. Foreign bonds were inactive but Chinese issues were easier.

Industrials and domestic rails were firmer. Nonproducing kaffirs advanced. Some bargain hunters bought oil shares.

Southern Railway Plans To Pay Off RFC Debt

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Southern Railway will pay off the remainder of its debt to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, amounting to $11,00,000, about May 15, Ernest E. Norris, president, said today. The system has arranged to borrow $10,000,000 from banks to help liquidate the debt. A substantial saving in interest will be effected, he said.

The Southern's debt to the RFC amounted at one time to $31,000,000 and most of it has been liquidated within the past three years.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

...play catch-as-catch-can with the insurable value of their property

A lot of people guess at the value of their property in buying insurance. Building costs change. Depreciation should be figured somewhere near right. Improvements may have been made. Insurance ought to fit like a glove . . . not like Mahatma Ghandi's sarong.

Moral: Have your insurance situation given the once-over by someone who knows. We'd like to do it without charge.

Riders Win in Interhigh Golf

Roosevelt Scores, 9-0, Over Western

Bethesda Defeats St. John's, 9-0; Tech Bows to Anacostia; Myers Shoots 79

Roosevelt kept abreast of Wilson at the top of the Interhigh Golf Series yesterday by administering a 9-0 defeat to Western at Congressional.

Arthur Myers shot a seven-over-par 79 for individual honors. He covered the difficult outgoing nine in 39 and returned in 40.

In the Anacostia-Tech meeting at Woodmont it was a best ball victory by the former in the last match of the day that earned a 5-4 victory. Tech started with a sweep in the first foursome but sagged as its lower-ranked players bowed to the rallying Anacostians.

Opening its season, Bethesda-Chevy Chase smashed St. John's, 9-0, at Beaver Dam. The victors were not pressed in any match, the widest margin being run up by Dick Poerstel, a 10 and 8 victory over O'Malley.

All-Star Boxing Card Set Monday

An all-star boxing show, each match being over the eight-round route, will be presented Monday night at Turner's Arena, Promoter Joe Turner announced yesterday.

Among the fighters who have been signed are Buddy Scott, Washington boy who has grown into a 192-pounder; Al Gilbert, claimant of the Dixie light-heavyweight championship; Irish Billy Colbert, Houston schoolboy sensation; Wild Bill McDowell, the crowd-pleasing Texan, and Henry Hook, the Hoosier Hurricane.

Director Opens P. B. C. Peewee Diamond League

Ringer Hurls No. 11 Boys to 8 to 1 Victory

"Ducky" Ringer, No. 11 Precinct hurler, turned in a 2-hit performance yesterday as his club opened the Police Boys Club Peewee Baseball League with an 8-1 beating of No. 4 Precinct.

Ringer struck out seven batsmen, but his performance in that department was shaded by Brandenberg, the No. 4 pitcher who accounted for 11 strikeouts but allowed 8 hits.

No. 11 rushed over three runs in the opening inning, and after that was never headed. Batting stars for the winners were Ringer and Veihmeyer, who collected triples, and Adams with a double.

Post Press Room Softball Squad Beats Mail Room

Press room employes of The Washington Post hung up their most coveted softball triumph yesterday at Fairlawn Field, beating a team from The Post mail room.

The score, by the best calculations, was 26-16. The game went 10 innings instead of the usual 7 because neither team was tired at the end of regulation time.

"Knuckle Ball" Kinney did what hurling was done for the pressmen, also leading the batting attack.

Terp Yearling Netmen Score

Maryland's frosh tennis crew shut out Central High School of Washington at College Park yesterday, 9-0, in the Terrapins' opening match. The Old Liners scored wins in every match except the second doubles set-to.

The summary:

Singles—Miller (Md.) defeated Gibbons (Central), 6—1, 6—1. Gottlieb (Md.) defeated Crowell (Central), 6—0, 6—0. Millstein (Md.) defeated Gaberman (Central), 6—1, 6—1. Gyrklis (Md.) defeated F. Bond (Central), 6—1, 6—1. Darling (Md.) defeated R. Bond (Central), 6—1, 6—1. Young (Md.) defeated Warrens (Central), 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles—Millstein and Gottlieb (Md.) defeated Gibbons and McNeil (Central), 6—0, 6—0. Moore and Kirk (Md.) defeated Valden and F. Bond (Central), 6—1, 6—1. Darling and Sills (Md.) defeated Warrens and Crowell (Central), 6—4, 6—1.

St. Albans Beats Gonzaga Netmen

The torrid netmen of St. Albans School registered their third straight victory in the Washington Prep School tennis league yesterday when they shut out Gonzaga, 5-0, on the Saint courts.

In another match at Sidwell-Friends School, the hosts, paced by stellar Bobby Bensinger, turned back Devitt Prep by a 5-0 score. The losers managed to win only nine games as Friends registered 60 for straight set triumphs in every match.

Complete results:

St. Alban's, 5; Gonzaga, 0

Singles—Cooper defeated Sheehan, 6—1, 6—0; Chewning defeated Ervin, 6—2, 6—4; Lee defeated Curley, 6—2, 6—2.

Baseball Meeting

Washington-Virginia night baseball league will hold an important meeting tonight at the Balston Stadium at 8 o'clock. All managers and officials are requested to attend.

Jockey J. Skelly 'Taken for Ride' By Pony Operator

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 22.—Cherub-faced Jackie Skelly, who goes East this week to ride for the Brandywine Stable, took a farewell automobile trip with Jimmy Sinnott and the latter's two young daughters.

The girls insisted Jackie accompany them to a pony ring, so he got into the saddle and started off at a trot.

"Hey!" howled the operator. "That pony will throw you, kid; wait 'til I strap you on."

Jackie, 17, and weighing a mere 95 pounds, solemnly let himself be strapped to the saddle.

"Aw, gosh," he explained to the laughing Sinnot, "you didn't want me to huurt his feelings, did you?"

Masterson Holds Bosox, Nats Win, 12-5

completely lost control, walked the pitcher and the next two batters and threw a single to Williams, whose blow to right scored two runs and set Boston up in a 5-3 lead. By that time the fans were viewing Masterson in high disgust.

The Nats had the help of Bobby Doerr in cutting Boston's lead to 5-4 in their own half of the inning. Ferrel singled, and after Masterson struck out, the Boston second baseman made two consecutive errors on ground balls off the bats of Case and Cramer. With one out and the bases filled, Chapman fouled out, but Buddy Lewis drew a walk to force home a run.

The Red Sox were through after the second inning, but the Nats weren't. They rushed back at Harris for more and got three more, on only one hit. After Archie and Ferrell drew walks, Masterson bunted and Harris, in trying for a force play at third, threw the ball through Tabor's glove. One run scored on the error, which was charged to Tabor, and Ferrell, who reached third, scored on Case's infield out. Cramer's single to short got Masterson home.

Hughson Batted Hard

Tex Hughson, a big right-hander, was pitching when the Nats came up with three more in the sixth. This was accomplished by a power drive. Cramer singled, Lewis singled, and with two out Travis tripled over Williams' head. Travis scored on Bloodworth's single to center.

In the seventh, with Hughson still unhappily there, the Nats came up with two more superfluous runs on Case's single to center, Cramer's hit-and-run single through short, Chapman's single through shortstop, and Travis's third hit, a single to center.

During all of this business, Masterson was handing the Red Sox seven consecutive zeroes. It was amazing, no less.

Edgar Seay's 382 Set Tops In Pin Tourney

Lower-class bowlers stole the spotlight from the stars last night at Lucky Strike as the thirty-first annual Washington Duckpin Association tournament got under way.

High individual set of 382 was posted by a class D entry, Edgar Seay, of the Railroad Retirement Board League, and high doubles score was made by a pair of class B pinmen, Warren Hogan and Lloyd Farmer, of Chevy Chase Commercial League. They shot 762, with Farmer contributing a set of 398.

No class A teams saw action, and honors in that section were taken by Takoma Ambulance, a class B outfit which rolled 1,707.

Rabbitt Leads Class C

High in Class A was Roy Henry, Letter Carriers' League, with 371. Best in Class B was Jack Rabbitt, Convention Hall League, with 367. Charles Ward, Navy Yard League, with 335, topped Class C entrants, and Howard Habermyer, Railroad Retirement Board League, recorded 330 to lead Class E.

Leading Class A doubles are Hugh and Dick Townsend, of G. P. O. and St. Martin's leagues, respectively, with 715. Ed Rhine and Frank Hanrahan, Income Tax League, were in front in Class C with 667, and Jerry O'Brian and Martin Rhodes shot 727 to lead Class D.

The Rhode Island Business Men's League goes into action tonight. Singles open the program at 7 o'clock, teams roll at 8, and doubles combinations at 10 p. m.

D. C. Firemen to Hold 'Grudge' Pin Match

Picked teams from No. 1 and No. 2 platoons of the D. C. Fire Department will stage a "grudge" match Thursday at Arcadia Alleys at 10 a. m. The meeting grew out of a Baltimore team's recent refusal to roll No. 1, claiming it had already whipped the D. C. department's best when it defeated No. 2.

Junior Commerce Pin Team Avenges Loss

Avenging an earlier defeat this year, the Washington Junior Board of Commerce bowling team tripped Norfolk's representatives by an 1,844-1,676 score in a recent match. High set for the winners was rolled by Lowell Hendrick, a 404, and high game of 152 was turned in by Earl Spiker.

Legal Notices

LUCAS P. LOVING and RICHARD L. TEDROW, Attorneys for Plaintiff, Columbian Building.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. Floyd E. Rush, assignee, plaintiff, vs. Walter M. Kraus, defendant. No. 398-607. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to recover $77.37, plus costs and interest, owed the plaintiff by the defendant, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 22d day of April 1941, ordered that the defendant, Walter M. Kraus, appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. Elmer Davis, CBS's news analyst, who just a couple of weeks ago received the Peabody Award—"Pulitzer Prize of Radio"—presented by the University of Georgia, "for his terse, incisive and impartial reporting of the news day by day," is leaving for England by transatlantic clipper today.

Like every other American newsman Davis wants to see for himself actually what conditions are in the British Isles and to bring you back an authentic picture of what effects the war is having. He expects to be gone until June 1 and in the time he's over there he will interview England's governmental, military, political and social leaders, as well as the man in the street, to get a well rounded survey.

You'll hear him frequently over WJSV and the Columbia network from London on the daily 8 a. m. and 6:45 p. m. transatlantic news programs, but Bill Shirer, CBS's former Berlin correspondent, and Bob Trout will be heard in his place on the regular 8:55 p. m. broadcasts which Davis has been authoritatively filling for the past two years.

Davis' forte is his calm, unemotional, dry appraisal of what's going on, a style of delivery which has won him the appellation of being "a master of understatement." But it's backed by years of brilliant background on the New York Times and intensive study of politics, people and passing events.

The Post Radio Highlights

7:30, WOL—By now the Lone Ranger's vocal chords are improved enough for somewhat more action and soon the Great Man will be relieving Tonto of the extra duties he's had of late.

8, WMAL—Back from their two weeks as Jack Benny's houseguest are Quiz Kids Joan Bishop, Jack Lucal, Claude Brenner, Richard Williams and Gerard Darrow. Tonight Gerard is presented with life membership in the Chicago Academy of Sciences, recently voted him by its board of directors in recognition of his "remarkable accomplishments in the field of natural history."

9, WRC—Tallulah Bankhead, having been paid money for her acting ability for many a year, learns from Eddie Cantor the virtues of vegetables and the barter system.

9, WJSV—Sad news for Fred Allen, but he'll pick up again. This gloomy reference is to last week's Crossley rating, giving rival Cantor 19.5 and Allen 19.3, first time for Fred to fall behind in this battle of the comedians' hour.

Contract Bridge

Bidding, in the last analysis, is merely a matter of opinion. The innumerable books which have been written on the subject and the violent divergence of opinion, even among the finest players, is ample proof.

There was no rule declarer could call upon to help him in the play of today's hand. The solution he found to fulfill his five-heart contract was purely the product of his own genius.

Today's Hand

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Dble
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
4 ◇	4 ♡	5 ◇	5 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ◇.

With three possible losers staring him in the face, he took advantage of the opening lead and gave up a trick he might have won, to establish a discard for one of his losers.

This sounds rather complicated and mysterious, but was performed simply in the play. When West opened the diamond queen, South, of course, could ruff in dummy for he had a wealth of trump cards. There was nothing to fear from the trumps adversely held, for two rounds would draw them even if one hand was void. However, a ruff would do him no good. South would still be left with at least one club, and possibly two club losers. If the latter proved to be the case, his contract was doomed, for one spade trick also had to be lost.

Instead of ruffing the queen, declarer discarded the club seven from dummy. East won with the ace and returned a club. The trick was won with dummy's ace. East's two trumps were drawn and the remaining club in dummy was discarded on the established diamond king.

By giving up a diamond trick he might have won South saved two losers in clubs and made his contract.

Sen. McCarran Backs Payment Above Formula

A Federal payment toward District expenses above the $9,000,000 that the Overton formula would produce, was approved yesterday by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada.

"I have been in favor all along of increasing the Federal payment above that provided in the Overton formula, but in the present emergency I believe the Overton formula is a pretty good solution," McCarran declared.

The Nevadan cited the traffic problem as an example of the kind of burden placed upon the city by the swift growth of Federal agencies. Since the cost of government here rises with the growth of the District, McCarran said, the Federal Government should assume an increasing share of municipal expenses.

"Residents of the District of Columbia are now paying their full share for support of the Nation's Capital," McCarran declared.

He said the pressure of official business would keep him from attending a session of the House District Committee at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow when the Overton formula and an amendment to the measure are scheduled for consideration.

The amendment, drafted to meet terms on which President Roosevelt gave the formula his support, would require the District to spend for capital outlays "at least" equal to the Federal payment.

Meanwhile, McCarran announced that Chairman Jennings Randolph, of the House District Committee, has been invited to appear today before the Senator's Judiciary Subcommittee conducting hearings on the Capper-Sumners resolution to give Washington national representation and self-government.

The subcommittee will meet at 10 a. m. in the Senate District Committee room to hear views of editorial writers of all Washington newspapers.

Priest Loses 2 Fingers Aiding Accident Victim

In an attempt to rescue a woman who was trapped in an overturned automobile, the Rev. James E. Malloy, assistant rector of St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, Md., yesterday lost two fingers of his right hand.

The accident occurred at Fifth and Van Buren Streets Northwest, when cars operated by Helen Sizemore, 27, of Takoma Park, Md., and Pearl D. Harris, 59, of 6507 Piney Branch Road Northwest, collided.

Miss Sizemore's car careened away from the other machine, struck a fire alarm box, turning in an alarm, and then overturned.

A door of Miss Sizemore's car slammed on Father Malloy's fingers, cutting off his middle finger and the tip of his index finger.

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital. The two women received first aid at the office of a physician.

Col. Gerald Brower, U. S. Military Observer With R. A. F., Killed in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan

No details had been received last night by the Army Air Corps of the death, deep in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, of Col. Gerald Brower, 47, United States military observer, attached to the Middle East command of the Royal Air Force.

BROWER

Described at Air Corps headquarters as "one of our outstanding officers," Brower was the first American military observer killed while assigned to the European war zones.

The State Department received word yesterday from Alexander C. Kirk, the United States Minister to Egypt, that Brower was killed April 2 at El Obeid, 250 miles southwest of Khartoum.

The first cablegram did not explain the circumstances.

Brower's assignment with the Middle East command would normally have expired after two or three months, but he sayed on, it was said, because the situation appeared to foreshadow interesting developments on which the War Department wanted most expert observation.

Col. Brower was the first casualty among United States military observers on duty, although Capt. Robert M. Losey, an assistant military attache in the Scandinavian countries, was killed in Norway on April 21, 1940, during a German air attack, almost a year to the day from Col. Brower's death. Losey was in Norway on a diplomatic assignment when he was killed.

Col. Brower was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., August 25, 1893.

He entered the Army from New York State after graduating from Cornell University as a civil engineer in 1916. He was a graduate also of the Army War College (1939) the command and general staff school (1936) and other service institutions. He held a master of science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Leaves Wife and Daughter

Serving in the World War, he participated as an artillery man in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensves. After the war he was transferred to the air corps.

In 1919, Brower had served as commanding officer of the 20th Aero Squadron at Ellington Field, Houston, Tex.

He became operations officer of the first day bombardment group at Kelly Field, Tex., in September of that year, holding that assignment until June, 1920.

In 1923, he went to McCook Field, Ohio (now part of Wright Field), as chief of airplane maintenance, engineering division. Subsequently, at Wright Field, he became assistant chief engineer of the materiel division and later chief of the airplane branch of the field's materiel division.

In 1930, Brower, then a major, took command of the first pursuit group at Selfridge Field, Mich., remaining there until he went to the Philippines to command the Third Pursuit Squadron at Clark Field, about a year later.

Col. Brower leaves a wife and a daughter, Mary, of Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel K. Brower, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Borglum's Cast Of T. R. Is Stolen

Rapid City, S. Dak., April 22 (AP).—The cast of Theodore Roosevelt used as a model by the late Gutzon Borglum in carving the former President's head on Mount Rushmore has been stolen.

Lincoln Borglum, successor-director to his father in finishing the memorial, announced theft of the life-sized plaster cast today and added the model has "great historic value." United States District Attorney George Philip said the matter had been referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

District Public Library Gets Six New Books on Esperanto

Six books dealing with Esperanto, the international language, were presented to the District Public Library yesterday by the Esperando Club of Washington at ceremonies in the office of Librarian Clara W Herbert.

Ernest G. Dodge, chairman of the club's book committee presented the volumes, which include a copy of the Bible in Esperanto and a biography of Dr. Zamenhof, originator of the language. The presentation was made to observe international Esperanto week here.
